B—Putty-Colored Broadcloth in Long Trailing Lines Is Worn by Miss Evelyn Burden.

C—Miss Beatrice Mills's Suit of Dark Blue Serge Has Touches of Old Rose.

THE frocks and frills of dear feminality are quite out of the ordinary in interest this Autumn.

At Sherry's the other day Mrs. Henry Spies Kip was wearing a black cloth gown and a medium-size black sailor hat trimmed in front with bright green wings. A black lace veil was pinned tightly in at the back of the head.

The skirt of the suit was long and close fitting and trailed in a sharp point directly in the middle of the back. No plait or fold broke the long line, and it was pulled back very tightly, as though held by invisible elastics.

A stiff white linen collar was fastened in front with a rather elaborate diamond filagree pin. No tie was worn.

I met Beatrice Mills at one of the country clubs the other day and we had a cosy tea before a great, glowing fire. Her twin sister, Gladys, of course, was with her as was also Evelyn Burden.

For a wonder the Mills twins were not dressed precisely alike, although they both were wearing suits of dark blue serge.

The skirts were long and plain and trailing, very much the same cut as Mrs. Kip's. The coats came just to the hip, were loose hanging in front and had a short relaxed effect in the back. Beatrice Mills's coat was trimmed with bands of black, and old rose velvet and had a waistcoat of old rose cloth, fastened with gold buttons.

Evelyn Burden's trailing dress of putty-colored broadcloth, hanging in supple lines, just suited her elegant and rather haughty style.

RUTH' COPYRIGHT 1907 BY THE CURTIS PUBLISHING CO.

Two Pretty Poses by Little Muriel Bruce

Muriel Bruce

Dainty Caroline Mathews

A Popular Boy Model

IN these topsy turvy days it has come about that some clever babies are earning more than their papas, or their mammas, or both. At from three to ten years of age they are higher wage earners than their parents at thirty or forty years.

It is another instance of the triumph of art over commercialism. For these high-salaried babes are models. In the studios they pose for cherubs, for Cupids, for babes of the woods and baby faces among the long lines. They pose for any beautiful picture in which a child is the principal or the accessory feature.

For posing they receive $5 a sitting, whether that sitting be for a half hour or for three hours. They may have four or five engagements a day, thus earning $20 to $25 a day, or $150 to $180 a week.

The child models must have some beauty and much intelligence. They must like to play at making pictures, for the skilful artist always causes work to seem play by talking of "The new game we will play today." They must be strong, because a delicate child cannot endure the physical strain of long holding one posture, for children are like running water.

She is Muriel Bruce, who lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bruce, at No. 23 Fairfield avenue, in Jersey City, N. J. She is proud of being the successor of Josephine Anderson, the greatest of all American child models.

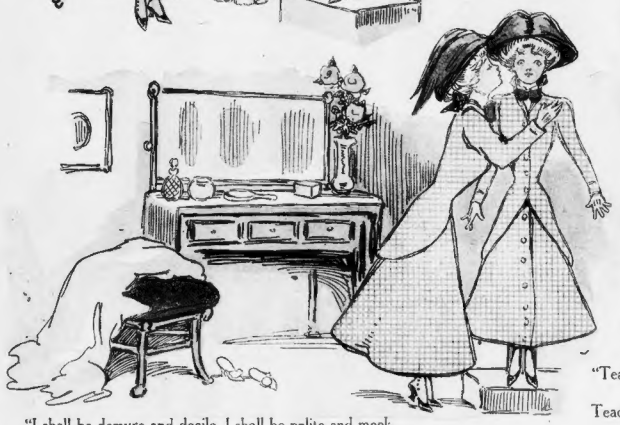
1 "Now to-day," said Saucy Sissy, "I shall be especial good;
(I was rather naughty yesterday, you know),
I am going with the Nature Class, a-walking in the wood,
To learn just how the bugs and bushes grow.

2 "Teacher is an old Professor; and we ladies of the class,
All carry little note-books bound in red.
We learn the habits of the trees, and how to tell the grass,
And why the little birdies must be fed.



3 "I shall be demure and docile, I shall be polite and meek,
I sha'n't even have a twinkle in my eye."
But the busy little dimple came to Saucy Sissy's cheek,
As she kissed her darling Polly Pink good-by.

4 "Teacher, dear," said Saucy Sissy, "give me of your learning's store,—
I would like to know the reason of the rye;
Teach me how to smell the wild flowers; I'm athirst for Nature lore,—
Tell me truly why it is that pigs can't fly."

5 "I am glad to see your eagerness for knowledge, my dear child,"
Said the old Professor, looking wise and kind;
"You're hearing in your youthful heart the Calling of the Wild;
Ah, how Nature's work appeals to each young mind!"

6 "I am," said Saucy Sissy, "an exception to that rule,
For it doesn't in the least appeal to me;
And the truth is, Mr. Teacher, I am tired of Nature School,
So, if you'll excuse me, I'll just climb this tree."

The Mystery of the Louvre.

THE SISTINE CHAPEL — BY INGRES, IN THE LOUVRE.

AT last the police of Paris believe they have found the person responsible for the recent extraordinary and mysterious mutilations of great paintings in the public art galleries of Europe.

The vandal is a woman named Valentine Cantral. She is an extraordinary person, possibly mad, but still possessed of remarkable ingenuity and determination.

The last great picture to suffer mutilation was the masterpiece of Ingres in the Louvre known as "The Sistine Chapel." It is a colossal canvas representing the Pope seated in the sedia gestatoria in the Sistine Chapel, surrounded by the cardinals and in the act of bestowing a blessing.

One weekday afternoon recently a well-dressed woman wandered through the rooms of the Louvre looking with a curiously intent expression at the great masterpieces of painting. The magnificent proportions of the Ingres picture, its splendid coloring and its dignity of conception arrested her attention. It was 2.30 when she first stopped to look at the picture, and there were many people in the gallery. She lingered about until 4.30, when nearly all the people had left. She hovered constantly about the Ingres picture.

At last she found herself alone in the room, except for a young woman artist who was copying another picture. When the artist's back was turned the mysterious woman stepped up close to "The Sistine Chapel," drew a long sharp knife, and began to hack at the very centre of composition.

With cruel ferocity she carved off the Pope's head. The canvas was tough, but she finished her work. She glanced aside from time to time to see if she were in danger of interruption. The solitary woman artist was deeply concentrated in her work. The uniformed attendants were all in quiet and distant corners of the building discussing politics or reading the evening papers.

The vandal resumed her work. She ripped up the back of the man kneeling to receive a blessing, she dug out the eyes of three cardinals, and she disfigured the papal throne. Then she put the knife in her pocket and quietly went home.

These details about the mutilation of Ingres's "Sistine Chapel" were gathered after Valentine Cantral was arrested. When the authorities of the Louvre discovered the mutilation the police very cleverly succeeded in tracking the mysterious woman to her residence. There they found many pieces of tangible evidence that she had been engaged in mutilating pictures.

When pressed by the police she confessed that she had

WHAT WOULD YOU DO IF YOU HAD 226 GOWNS, 116 HATS, 300 PAIRS OF WHITE GLOVES AND OVER 200 PAIRS OF SHOES?

This Was the Perplexity That Faced Mrs. Theodore Shonts When She Arrived from Europe and---Well, She Just Had Them All Catalogued Like Books in a Library and Has Only to Consult Her Little Card-Cabinet.

MRS. THEODORE P. SHONTS AND HER TWO DAUGHTERS, MISS MARGUERITE AND MISS THEODORE

"Behold the Mistress of the Wardrobe Seated Beside a Card Index Cabinet, Cataloguing Like Books in a Library All Her Mistress' Gowns, Hats, Wraps, Boots and Slippers, which the Maids Bring In for that Purpose."

HOW would you like to be the possessor of a wardrobe so extensive, so complete, that a carefully indexed catalogue of your gowns, wraps, hats and shoes, gloves and furs was, not only an assistance, but an absolute necessity?

Wouldn't you be perfectly radiant if you had so many dresses that the closets containing them had to be numbered, the sections lettered and the longer from which the calling gown by Worth or the display dress by Doucet depended, numbered to correspond with the number in the catalogue.

Wouldn't you dance and sing for joy if one entire room was given over to crates, piled high on top of one another, each crate containing a perfect dream of an imported hat to match each and every outdoor gown?

Wouldn't it be just ecstacy to switch on an electric light in a big closet and see nothing but row after row of shoes, each pair on its own particular tree and each and every tree numbered? Ball slippers, riding boots, pumps, patent leathers, walking boots, carriage slippers, dozens and dozens of foot gear, every style, shape, kind and color imaginable, all standing in orderly array?

The happy possessor of all these creations is a woman, and, of course, of great wealth, of international social position and whose eldest daughter, if indications and attentions go for anything, is to marry the Duc de Chaulieu.

Mrs. Theodore Shonts is the happy woman who counts her dresses by the hundreds, her hats by scores and her shoes by the dozens and dozens, and who is compelled to resort to a catalogue and indexes to select her street gown and accessories, her ball dress or her calling costume.

Such a wardrobe and "la Duke," (as Mrs. Puffy says) for a son-in-law, surely that is almost too much happiness for one woman!

A year ago, when Mrs. Shonts made her annual trip abroad and was presented at court, the magnificence of her costumes startled even surfeited Europe. Her wardrobe was so extensive that it seemed as if there was nothing in the way of the modes and luxury that she had not obtained, and when she announced that she would stay some weeks in Paris and Vienna just to "replenish her wardrobe," society wondered how and where she would manage to obtain anything different from what she already had.

But the lady had plenty of original ideas, lots and lots of money to carry them out with and the best designers and costume makers in the world ready and anxious to accommodate so rich, and so generous a patron.

So when Mrs. Theodore Shonts, of New York, Washington, London and Paris, walked unconcernedly into the New York custom house, last Fall, there were trunks to fight of her, but boxes to left of her, shoe chests in front of her and a row of very busy, overawed inspectors behind her. Trunk after trunk of laces and cuffs and ruffles were displayed and the duty declared. High shoes, low shoes, French heels and no-heeled boots, first saw the American light of day when brought forth and examined and the duty decided upon them by the Customs House officials.

Then snap went all the locks and catches on the trunks, and away the precious baggage was whisked toward Washington, to the splendid city home of the Shonts family! When it arrived the maid who has charge of Mrs. Shonts's wardrobe peeped out of the window and saw the vans loaded down with the new purchases. She thought of the closets already piled to overflowing with beautiful clothes, and she wondered how in the world she was to remember all the gowns and the particular hats and boots to match. She locked in despair at the growing pile of hat crates, and then she sat down on the floor and wept into the ruffles of her smart French apron.

Presently she stopped sniffing and put on her thinking cap anew. An ideal In fact, a great and glorious idea! Why not catalogue the gowns and hats and shoes and gloves, just as the books at the library were catalogued? So the smart little maid went to her mistress, explained her scheme and received an impulsive hug from her delighted employer. The next morning, behold the mistress of the wardrobe, the possessor of a large, daintily bound red leather blankbook, seated beside a card index cabinet cataloguing, like books in a library, all her mistress' gowns, hats, wraps, boots and slippers, which the maids bring in for that purpose.

What a book! Full descriptions of 226 gowns; the individuality of each of 16 hats accurately set forth; 300 pairs of gloves scheduled with notes on their style and condition, and ditto in the case of 200 pairs of foot gear.

And what a lot of work this little book saves! What rushing from one closet to another and pulling down this hanger and that, and what vexation of spirit is done away with! For example, suppose Mrs. Shonts is to attend the Diplomatic reception at the White House next January and on this auspicious occasion desires to look her very best. For who knows but perhaps she will have the extreme felicitation to present to President Roosevelt, "Le fils et la duchesse de Chaulieu et de Picquigny!"

"Vi madame wear so exquesite violet velvet gown---ze one embroidair in shaded lilac?"

But madame raises an eyebrow meditatively and says: "Blanchette, have I such a gown?"

"Had you such a gown, madame? Had you forgot ze gown zat ze great Doucet made you and which he rave so over?"

"Really, Blanchette, he made so many that I cannot remember the particular one you refer to."

"I mean zo one eat Monsieur Rhonis, say was lacking because it did not hef so leetle diamonds fasteued onto ze flowers for dendrops."

water lilies, yellow centres in threads of gold."

"Now if you could peep over the maid's shoulder you would read the following from the little red book:

Princess Gown (D'Albertis). Embroidered in white water lilies, slight touches of yellow produced by threads of gold. Closet No. 6, section No. 4, hanger No. 17.

"Glove. Glove closet, shelf No. 6, box No. 42.

And there you are! No confusion, no hurry, no flurry. And all on account of the little red book---the invaluable red book [illegible].

Also the book is a complete list of the jewels and the number of the satin cases in which each suite safely reposes in the safety vaults. The tiaras, the stomachers, the necklaces, the hair ornaments, the rings and bracelets. They are all there, nicely indicated. A phone message to "Box No. 10" would bring a messenger speeding from the deposit vaults with the costly and rare set of diamonds to be worn with the water lily gown.

The closets containing the dresses and wraps are dreams of luxury in themselves. They are perfectly dark, but a turn of the switch just inside the door floods them with light. The walls are heavily padded and silk lined and scented powder secreted in the padding emits a delicate, delicious odor.

The good little housewife who reads this story will probably say in a contented slashed the Ingres picture and other works of art. She declared that she disfigured them as a protest against the wickedness of government which spent millions of dollars on objects of art while millions of human beings were starving.

"It is a shame," she said, "to see so much money invested in dead things when so many poor devils starve because they cannot find work."

It is believed, however that this explanation of her motives is not sincere, but that her acts arise from a morbid desire to mar things of beauty with the knife. Valentine Cantral was sentenced to six months' imprisonment for this offense.

A few months ago a picture of even greater value in the Louvre, "The Deluge," by Nicolas Poussin, was hopelessly mutilated. This is the finest work of the Sixteenth century, the classic period of French art. It now seems probable that this act of vandalism was also the work of Valentine Cantral.

Serious acts of vandalism have also been committed in the royal galleries of Dresden and Berlin. The directors of similar institutions all over Europe have been in a state bordering on panic. It is almost impossible to guard miles of painted canvas against a crafty and fanatical vandal. Irreparable damage may be inflicted in an instant. Considerable relief is expressed at the news that Mademoiselle Valentine Cantral has been lodged in prison, but the state of alarm has not entirely passed away.

IF ALL MRS. SHONTS'S TRUNKS WERE PACKED INTO ONE, THIS WOULD BE ITS SIZE, COMPARED WITH A RAILWAY PORTER.

"Yes, I think I remember that gown sort of way. "Well, it is mighty nice to now, but I have a fancy to be gowned all in white to-night, Blanchette."

Then the precious redbook comes into requisition and the maid and mistress go over each gown listed under the head of "White Evening Gowns." Finally the mistress says:

"I think that will be the one, Blanchette. Read it again," and the maid reads: "White Princess, embroidair white have all those fine clothes, but it must be an awful ordeal to have to stand and have so many, many dresses fitted. And all those shoes! I am glad I don't have to break them all in."

But the discontented one, fondling her lap dog, will sigh and wonder why she was not born to so much purple.

In the meanwhile the owner of all this magnificence goes placidly on her way, buying still more fine feathers and securing enviable places in society for herself and daughters.

"STEALING QUIETED MY NERVES DELICIOUSLY"

—Says Young, Beautiful and Rich Mrs. Evelyn Romadke, Whose Shocking Six Months' Orgy As a Thief, Is Explained by Lombroso's Theory that Criminal Impulses are Latent in All Women.

IT seems difficult to realize—in fact, incredible—that circumstances, even accident may transform the best of women into a criminal, murderer, thief or incendiary.

Yet, so much to prove this conclusion arrived at by Professor Cesare Lombroso, the most famous of criminological experts, Mrs. Evelyn Romadke, the beautiful young wife of a rich and indulgent husband, is now held for trial in Chicago on a charge of theft and confessing to a six months orgy of thievery and companionship with thieves.

In this case Mrs. Romadke tells her astounding story and in another column are quoted from Lombroso's volume, "The Female Offender," the results of his expert observations which seem most nearly to account for this unfortunate woman's exploit.

As she confesses, Mrs. Romadke had no need to steal. She was well, even luxuriously provided for. "Stealing" she says, acted as a sedative upon me. After stealing something of value my nerves quieted deliciously."

Says Lombroso: "There are pathological thieves who steal knowing what they do. They feel, especially at certain periods, an irresistible temptation to thieve."

"Moral insanity shows itself in women especially during the first period of matrimony. They show an open aversion to their husbands. If they have children they treat them with undisguised indifference."

The "Little devil" that urged Mrs. Romadke on to forbidden delights warned her that the care of her child would destroy her beauty. Lombroso remarks:

"She is extremely vain and very anxious to appear young."

This refined and cultured young woman selected for her companion in crime a negro ex-convict. Lombroso says:

"The born criminal, that malignant, semi-masculine creature, is able to influence the criminaloid, in whom bad instincts are latent, being indeed mere exaggerations of normal impulses."

How Lombroso Explains Cases Like Mrs. Romadke's.

THE normal woman is deficient in moral sense, and possessed of slight criminal tendencies, such as vindictiveness, jealousy, envy, malignity, which are usually neutralized by less sensibility and less intensity of passion.

Let a woman, normal in all else, be slightly more excitable than usual, or let a perfectly normal woman be exposed to grave provocations, and these criminal tendencies, which are psychologically latent, will take the upper hand.

But this the woman does not become a criminal through the intensity of her passions (these being colder in her), but through the explosion of a latent tendency to crime which an occasion has set free.

That is to say, a normal, or quiet normal woman may commit a crime of passion without being a typical criminal from impulse. Her passions are weaker than the man's, yet strong enough to drive her to a criminal act when some outrage to her dearest feelings sets free her latent tendencies to crime.

Her deed is then ascribable partly to passion and partly to an innate depravity which yet does not detract from the fact that the offender is generally a good and even a very good woman.

Egotistic criminal impulses prove even better that crimes of passion must be the effect of a slow fermentation of the wicked-nest latent in the normal woman. There is a class of pure, good, affectionate women in whom the only motive for their crime is the egotistical sentiment of jealousy bred in them by illness, accident, etc.

Their offence may be regarded as originating partly in passion; but it lacks a grave cause, and is also entirely unprovoked by the victim, thus showing an analogy with the deeds of the born criminal.

We will proceed to instance a case which happened in Belgium. A man loved and was loved by a dowerless girl, whose cousin, an heiress, was herself in love with the same individual. The man, good at heart, but weak, and alarmed at the idea of a struggle for life, decided eventually to engage himself to the heiress.

She, a short time before the date fixed for her marriage, fell dangerously ill; and, as on her death the cousin would succeed to the property and be in a position to marry the man of her choice, the dying woman was so possessed by jealousy that she determined to destroy her promised husband's chances of happiness by taking away his character.

She swallowed a very valuable diamond, and then confided to her father that the young man had stolen it. After her death her father, who regarded the confidence as an effect of delirium, looked, partly from scrupulousness, into her jewel case, and found the ring without the diamond.

The young man was then arrested, and would have been condemned only that, fortunately for him, common report accused him of having poisoned his affianced in order that her cousin might inherit.

The authorities ordered an autopsy, and the expert found the diamond in the body of the dead woman.

We may conclude that the history of female criminal insanity is that of female criminals in general. And the same may be said of the characteristics of their madness, which simply serve to accentuate the nature of their crimes.

A lady of wealth, aged twenty-six, with no hereditary history, after becoming addicted to petty misdemeanors, stole sheets from patients whom she tended as nurse and effaced the marks to escape detection. She pretended to receive bad letters, and sometimes

"There are pathological thieves who steal knowing what they do. They feel, especially at certain periods, an irresistible temptation to thieve or to [illegible] Nothing will deter them from the excitement of their deeds, which [illegible] if by no other means than through cunning. There are women whose [illegible] can only be appeased with stolen food.

"Moral insanity," writes a [illegible] itself in women especially [illegible] period of matrimony. They show an open aversion to their husbands. If they have children they treat them with undisguised indifference and give them over carelessly to a wet nurse so as to preserve their youth beauty, and if their husbands do not get life are one of their many captives they revenge themselves by illtreating their children.

"She declares herself neglected and ill treated by her husband, and to revenge herself does not hesitate to calumniate him to her friends and to reveal all the secrets of domestic life. She maintains all ways that she alone is right, and her manner in inventing and misrepresenting is inexhaustible.

"She is extravagant, and buries small bills on the accounts, she perpetually buys costly clothes, loves strange fashions, is extremely vain, and very anxious to appear young.

"If remonstrated with she threatens to commit suicide or to leave the family roof. She neglects to train her children, gives them a pernicious example of uncontrolled temper, and insinuates in them a hatred of their father.

Normal women are monotonous; they resemble one another, and cannot be acted upon by suggestion—consequently friendship with the dominion of the stronger over the weaker is impossible to them.

On the other hand, criminals, being products of degeneration, develop variations which sometimes amount to monstrosities, consequently between any two of them there may be such a difference in character as lends itself easily to suggestion, the born criminal, that malefactor, most masculine creature, being able to influence the criminaloid, in whom bad instincts are latent, being indeed mere exaggerations of normal impulses.

"No possible punishment," wrote Corrado Lelio, an author of the fifteenth century, "can deter women from heaping crime upon crime. Their perversity of mind is more fertile in new crimes than the imagination of a judge in new punishments.

"Feminine criminality," writes Rykere, "is more prized more depraved and more terrible than the criminality of the male."

"The violence of the ocean waves or of devouring flames is terrible. Terrible is poverty, but woman is more terrible than all else." (Ecclesiasticus)

"The perversity of woman is so great," says Cato, "as to be incredible even to its victims."

Mrs. Romadke's Own Story of Her Career as a Thief.

"Steal! Steal!" crept the words into my head.

"I saw an advertisement in the paper asking for a trained nurse. I went to the place, No. 4314 Forestville avenue, the residence of David Priester, and secured the position. I stayed there about two days, stealing a diamond ring, a bracelet and a silver card case, which I pawned for $4.

"With each thing I took I felt more and more at ease, but the thrill of robbery never wore away. Next I went to No. 6 Dale avenue. I had advertised as a maid. There I stole a diamond ring, which I later pawned for $30.

"My next place was at Beck's, No. 5540 South Park avenue. On Mrs. Beck's bureau I saw an alligator bag and took it. Under it was a small purse. In it were two $10 bills. In the second room at the three diamond rings, a diamond bracelet and a watch. I got out of the house with out my one seeing me.

"A few days later I was out on Lawndale avenue, near Douglas Park. There I entered a house. I found the front door open. I got a watch and $26. Then I entered the room and I had to get out the bed to conceal myself. The woman who came in sat on the bed and read a letter. She dropped the envelope and thought she would see me when I picked it up, but she did not.

"My last place was near Sheridan road, where I got $25 and a jewel case.

"I was detected, followed, arrested.

"I cannot describe the horror of that moment of discovery. Up to this time I was indulging in a vice that was fascinating because it was secret, unsuspected. Now it was discovered.

"What a shocking awakening from my [illegible] of wild excitement in a life hitherto unknown—which now seemed like some bad dream of whose consequence I could not rid myself.

"I was publicly disgraced. My husband rushed to Chicago incredulous, thinking me the victim of false identity. When he knew the truth—for I could conceal nothing—he cast me off.

"I was nothing more to him. All he wanted was the child.

"But soon, strangely, sympathy cropped out for me in many quarters. I must be insane. Certainly I was possessed by a devil, to steal things like a common thief when I had all I needed.

"My husband had started a suit for divorce. Now he not only stopped the suit, but notified me of his entire forgiveness, and that he would stand by me through everything.

"He understands that it was only that passion to steal that led me into association with criminals. He knows that it cannot be true that I had any other reason for such associations.

"That colored man fascinated me only by his familiarity with the crime that was my delight. He showed me how to commit the crimes which held my imagination, and for that reason, and no other, Albert Jones enters into my wretched story.

"It is over now—all but satisfaction for the law. I have broken the law. I was a thief—and unless it still be believed that I was possessed of a devil, I suppose I must pay the penalty."

"He was a past master in the art of theft. He could teach me."

"I stayed there about two days, stealing a diamond ring, a bracelet and a silver card case."

"After stealing something of value I was no longer in torture, I could rest and relax."

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH YOUR CHILDREN?

Is the Baby Restless? Does Your Boy Tell Lies? Is Your Little Girl Stupid at School? Dr. Talbot Explains What You Ought to Do.

THIS article printed on this page from the pen of Dr. Winthrop Lodage Talbot ought to arrest the attention of every mother and every father. The "backward pupil," the "nervous child," the "dull boy" and the "dunce" these are all familiar types to us. But why is she a "nervous child" and why is he a "dull boy"? Why do we accept the fact that this child is a "backward school" and that child "feels such awful well" and yet do nothing about it?

Dr. Talbot represents the foremost ranks of those who are endeavoring to find out what makes school children stupid or nervous. Instead of accepting the facts and assuming that there is nothing to be done about it Dr. Talbot and others are trying to get at the bottom of the matter and study each child and discover what is wrong and how to remedy it.

At a recent meeting of the Pennsylvania Homeopathic Medical Society Dr. Talbot made an address on this topic which aroused much attention and was warmly indorsed. Dr. Talbot is the Secretary of the Camp Commission, an association of leaders of 40 Summer camps for boys and for girls, representing 3,000 children. He is director of Camp Aequum, Holderness, N. H., the oldest of the Summer camps for boys and now for eight years a Winter camp school also and has observations are the outcome of long intimate personal oversight of growing boys.

It is only [illegible] knowledge of the physician, trained in laboratory methods as well as [illegible] in observation, that can make the [illegible] and parents' labors of much if any avail in such cases as these.

It is worth while, even when taking [illegible] before a meeting of intelligent physicians, [illegible] to the constant need of examining [illegible] at regular periods the eyes, ears, nose and throat of every school child. But even in the back districts of office New England and the hill sides of New Hampshire, we are getting as far as that.

There are other cases not so simple, as, for instance, a boy who in the course of [illegible] growths were removed, the posture in sleep [illegible] horrible oppression, mentally and physically, [illegible] and [illegible] suffered by one evening from the New England hills to the smoke burdened [illegible]

It is just here, however, that we find our greatest obstacle. We are apt to consider a boy who is not sick as well, a boy who is not weak as strong, a boy who is merely up to average as normal. In other words we are contented with common conditions, because our standards are low, just as we are satisfied to breathe foul air because we are used to it. Not as yet have we the data to determine what the normal really is in children, mentally and physically. After years of close study and recording results of laboratory methods of examination, I find myself coming now for the first time to an appreciation of what the American child may become physically and mentally, provided that he physician and scientist interest themselves in the problems of the schools, and the teacher and educator realize the importance of scientific and medical collaboration in their labors. It is not the study of large numbers of school children which will bring true and valuable results so much as the careful observation of individual children under absolutely normal conditions [illegible] are between four hundred and five hundred summer camps, sending each from [illegible] into the country twenty-five thousand [illegible] They are doing unrivaled work in [illegible] about a knowledge of what is the normal as distinguished from the average.

Should 'Affinities' be Burned at the Stake?

"I Would Requisition the Services of the Executioner for Those Despicable Persons Who Make Divorces Necessary by Machinations Between Husband and Wife."

—Declares the Rev. R. M. Patterson.

SIX years ago when the Rev. George of Grace church of Brooklyn, N. Y., told D Herron, of Iowa, had deserted his wife and four children to mate with the affinity, Miss Carrie Rand who paid him $50,000 for his divorce, clergymen of all creeds denominations were bitter in their condemnation of his act, but Professor Herron's only response was the

"They may crucify me on the cross or burn me at the stake, yet I will make no answer."

Now, on the crest of the wave of wife deserting that is sweeping the country comes the Rev. Robert M. Patterson, a retired clergyman of the Presbyterian church in Philadelphia and well known in Chicago and other cities, who says that the death penalty should be visited on all heretics and blasphemers and all the guilty persons in divorce cases. Before the Presbytery of Philadelphia in connection with the following he made this statement

"If I had my way about it I would have an executioner called in to deal with all heretics and blasphemers. Burning at the stake would be too good for those who revile religion and take the Lord's name in vain. The growth of heresy is such today that nothing but measures like this can stop it.

"I would requisition the services of the executioner also for those despicable persons who make divorces necessary by their insidious machinations between husband and wife."

The many recent cases of "affinities" have caused a good deal of very caustic criticism from pulpits all over the country, but Dr. Patterson is the first to advocate burning at the stake. His remarks above quoted were made at the opening of an address he delivered on John Calvin, the illustrious promulgator of the Scotch church of the old school and apparently his fellow clergymen coincide with him in his drastic remedy for the conditions that threaten society.

The prominence given the case of Verdi and Pinney Earle, the millionaire artist, who gave up his wife and his little son to devote himself and his millions to Miss John Kuttner seems to have aroused the clergy, and they are very outspoken in their comments.

The Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, pastor

There is hope for the drunkard and the murderer, and for the gambler and the fallen woman, but for these artistic, sensitive creatures, these supposed illustrious souls of genius, these pampered libertines who scoff at legal marriage, there is hoped vultures there is no hope.

greater crime against social systems in murder

For as it says the Commonwealth of New Jersey has had a law on its statute books making it a criminal offense to have an affinity and the State of New York has only recently put such a law into force.

The first case of prominence to come under it was when Mrs. Patrick Henry Hirsch, the wife of a wealthy railroad contractor, of New York City, caused the arrest of her husband and Miss Ruby Yeargain in a luxurious apartment in the fashionable Warwick Arms, where the young woman was living with her mother. Mrs. Hirsch accused her husband of keeping her little boy away from her and teaching him to call Miss Yeargain "mother."

Miss Yeargain's mother had calmly accepted the situation, and explained her attitude in these words:

"It is a crime to arrest my daughter and Mr. Hirsch. I consented to live with them because I know they love each other dearly. Mr. Hirsch loves my daughter and she loves him. She is not a wife. I have published all long that my daughter was not married to Mr. Hirsch, but I could pardon them because their two souls were one. They loved each other dearly, and it is not right to interfere with such love.

But the feeling law did not look at it in the same light as Mrs. Yeargain, and the daughter and Hirsch were arrested after officers had broken into their fashionable and luxurious apartment.

John Curnin, of Hoboken, N. J., was the next to come under the ban of the new statute. His wife suspected that her husband had found an affinity in pretty Louise Ostler, whom she had employed in her millinery establishment, so she enlisted willing relatives and friends in the case and they quickly ran the errant Romeo and the erstwhile milliner to earth and caused their arrest.

So the State of New York has begun to stamp out the affinity fad with the strong arm of the law and scoundrels in the penitentiary.

But not every one believes in the efficacy of laws. Pretty Mrs. Minnie Melnac, of Brooklyn, found herself deserted with her seven-year-old boy, and was unable to get her husband away from his charmer, so she caused to be published the following notice:

NOTICE TO AFFINITIES—Not knowing the present whereabouts of my husband, Wolf Melnac, and wishing to help my wife, I mean my home-wrecking friend or inspiring to the south, I will personally administer a sound horsewhipping to any so-called affinity that may interfere with my domestic happiness.

MRS. JENNIE MELNAC.

When Louis Bauer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., found that his wife was in love with his friend, the Rev. Maxwell Valenta, he wanted to step aside and let not marry the clergyman, but the young minister's father, himself a clergyman, took a hand in the case and had the affinities sent to an institution for psychopathic examination.

Thos. Dunsmire, of Denver, seventy years of age, suspected an affinity of and eight in her happy home. She waited until her husband was asleep and gathered him with a hatchet. He nearly lost his life as the price of his carelessness.

The indignant people of the town of Kremmling, Col., angry at the infatuation of twenty four-year-old Ruth Miller and the Rev. H. Hanaka, a retired Methodist minister, aged sixty, horsewhipped the old man after dragging him from the home of his affinity, and then carried him home, where his wife and two children awaited him.

In fact, in almost every corner of the country the affinity is in evidence, and attracting denunciation from the pulpit and the people.

The Awful Bluebeard-Reincarnate.

How Captain Chernust's Search for His Missing Bride Revealed Bateushke Fedot, the Holy Hermit of Verkhoturie and Popular Idol of the Russian Province of Perm, as the Assassin of More Than Thirty Beautiful Young Women; Five of Whom Were Found in Their Coffins While the Others Had Been Buried in the Hermitage Cellar.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 23.—Everybody in the Russian capital, from the bearded moujiks in the streets to the members of the court, is discussing the most astounding story that has ever come from the faraway province of Perm, where a band of bearded peasants have been terrorized by the exploits of a modern Bluebeard, and the entire populace is horrified over the discovery.

Perm as a Bluebeard is credited in the French version of the story with a rich Arabian gentleman, with an unfortunate attraction for young and beautiful wives and a surprising facility for their replacement disposal. The man whose atrocities are said to out Bluebeard Bluebeard, not only in their number, but in their refinement of dramatic execution is known far and wide through the rough mountainous district of Perm as Bateushke (pronounced Fedot).

The Bluebeard story was used as a bugaboo to frighten the children of fifty years ago, it is said, to have had an actual foundation in history, although just of no very evident date nor yet of Oriental origin. The Russian version of the story is taken from Perm as a "conte de Temps," and is said to have been founded on the crimes of a certain Sieur de Retz, [illegible] Fedot was himself at the [illegible] time to Pretzgne [illegible] and [illegible] Fedot, and a more true in the art [illegible] for while the Perm[illegible] of [illegible] murdered but six, the [illegible] of Retz's dark deeds found [illegible] awaiting their final disposition, [illegible] the light of investigation since, [illegible] some thirty murders charged to Russian ders on Siberia. It lies in a deep and fertile valley on a small tributary of the Ural River, and, although even Moscow is a thousand miles away, the unusual fertility of the soil and the fact that its remote community has dwelt in uninterrupted peace for more than a century have made Verkhoturie more than usually well to do, far beyond the average of Russian villages.

For fifty years there has been no crime of violence in the place, from which the strangely benign influence of Bateushke Fedot radiated in all directions until his name had become something to conjure with in every corner of Perm.

Thirty years ago there came one day to the little village of Verkhoturie a young monk. Clad in monastic garb of humble brown, tonsured and sandal shod, his brown eyes laughing above ruddy, brown bearded cheeks, he strode up the one street of the hamlet and sat himself to rest on the stone bench at the door of the little inn. The village children crowded about him, and the young monk's magnetic voice and kindly manner soon won their hearts. He established himself in humble quarters with the family of Marie Pierard, and began to teach the little ones of the very poor. How he lived no one knew, no one cared. But daily he came and went among them, and the more they knew him the more they loved him.

Soon the villagers began to seek his advice. His counsel was a ways of the best. Wagers left their disputes to his decision. Mothers followed his direction in choosing the careers of their sons. Old folks trusted him with their savings for investment, and young men told him their love affairs and regarded him as Sir Grace Iolanthe. In fact, he was the beloved father and protector of the community.

Ten years he had been there and the young man of barely thirty had become the austere man of forty. His judgment had ripened and developed and his fame had gone abroad so that from other villages pilgrims came to seek the advice of Bateushke Fedot. This was the only name he had ever given the good folk of Verkhoturie. And now that his terrible secret is out, they remember that no one has ever known him by any other appellation, no one has ever heard him utter one word of his early history, no one has ever known to what sacred brotherhood he belonged, and, in fact, for all any one really knew of him, Bateushke Fedot might have been born full-grown into the world a moment before he was first seen striding up the dusty village street thirty years ago.

About twenty years ago his work attracted the attention of Madame Vassilie Hourloyle, the wealthy widow of the leading merchant of the place, and soon he was deep in her confidence. For three or four years he was her most trusted adviser, and finally she built in the midst of the forest, and about a mile from the village, a hermitage for the good Bateushke Fedot, where the holy man might spend his days in meditation and prayer, and enjoy comfort, if not luxury, as the reward for his years of austere living and devoted work among the poor peasants of the district of Perm.

But although he never visited the village except he was called to the bedside of some sick or dying person, the village children and fairy missed his familiar face from the streets, as they came early and often and stayed late, until finally the good Bateushke told them kindly, yet sadly, that they must look to their regular priest for consolation, except in special cases. He explained that he felt age coming upon him, and wanted to devote more time to prayers and study.

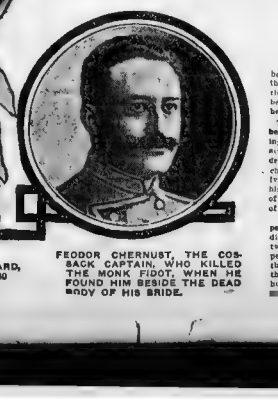
"Nevertheless," said he, "when any of the women of my people have done wrong and will confess, I will strive to hear their prayer."

So it happened that for many years the good Bateushke Fedot dwelt alone in his luxurious hermitage save for his two dumb servants. An occasional pilgrim from afar came to consult the holy man, and rarely a day passed that some woman of the village did not go to the hermitage to confess. And the village of Verkhoturie waxed fat and thrived, even as the good Fedot scattered rubles among the poor when only a few years before he had been glad to live on a few kopecks a day.

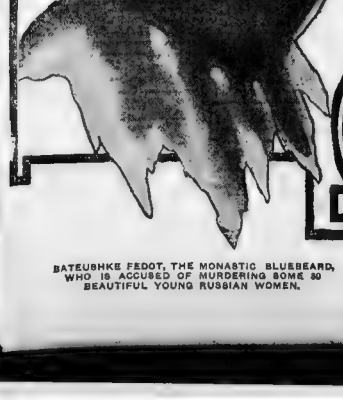
One of the peculiarities of the old monk was his insistence that every one who came to him to confess must first bathe thoroughly in a luxurious bathroom he had provided for this purpose, and must then lie down in a coffin in order to realise the inevitability of death and the need to be purified, soul and body, to meet the hereafter.

Then came the day when Ivan Streggis's beautiful wife strangely disappeared, taking with her the little treasure he had accumulated, and which was always hidden carefully behind a loose stone in the chimney. It was a dire day of wonder. Ivan went to Bateushke Fedot and told him his trouble. The monk bade him be of good cheer and rejoice that he was rid of such a faithless spouse.

Ever since that time never a year has passed without some similar mysterious disappearance, and of late years sometimes two or three young women have disappeared within a year. In every instance they have been well-to-do, and always they have fed with as much of their husband's money as they could lay hands on.



FEODOR CHERNUST, THE COSSACK CAPTAIN, WHO KILLED THE MONK FIDOT, WHEN HE FOUND HIM BESIDE THE DEAD BODY OF HIS BRIDE.



BATEUSHKE FEDOT, THE MONASTIC BLUEBEARD, WHO IS ACCUSED OF MURDERING SOME 30 BEAUTIFUL YOUNG RUSSIAN WOMEN.

"He thrust open the door and his startled gaze fell on the beautiful face of his dead wife wrapped in a loose robe and reposing in a coffin. Over her gloated the Bateushke Fedot, grinning in his beard, and clasping in his bony hands the jewels the dead woman had worn."

Bateushke Fedot comforted the deserted, and not a breath of suspicion ever touched him, although the life of every other person in Verkhoturie was well known to every other person, and he alone was a man of mystery.

But last week four young women disappeared on four consecutive days, and the community was aroused. Bateushke Fedot was so moved by their sorrow that he even left his hermitage and visited the village for the first time these five years or more. The good old man went about among the people, calming them, and adjuring them to bow to what must be the will of Providence.

Then there came the day when the beautiful Bieli, bride of a young Cossack officer, Feodor Chernust, suddenly disappeared from her home. But in this case, unlike any of the others, it so happened that the young woman had told her husband where she was going. And evidently Fedot, hold from long years of undetected crime, forgot to ask her whether any one knew of her visit to the hermitage in the forest.

Her protracted absence alarmed her soldier husband. When dark fell he set out for the hermitage to bring his bride back. Hastening along the lonely road, his fear for his wife's safety grew with every step, and within a few minutes he was thundering at the hermitage gate. No answer. Repeated attacks on the stout bars made no impression, and finally Captain Chernust strode to the back of the building and managed to force open a window and effect an entrance.

Searching the house Captain Chernust found no trace of human beings until he came to the stairs leading down to the cellar. As he descended he heard a voice somewhere in the depths of darkness below crooning unintelligible words to a sort of rude music. Drawing his sword he rushed through the underground corridors until he reached the cell from which the sounds proceeded.

He thrust open the door and his startled gaze fell on the beautiful face of his dead wife wrapped in a loose robe and reposing in a coffin. Over her gloated the Bateushke Fedot, grinning in his beard, and clasping in his bony hands the jewels the dead woman had worn when she left her home.

Chernust rushed upon him and ran him through with his sword. Then he saw beside the body of his bride four other coffins, each containing the body of a young and beautiful woman. The secret of Bateushke Fedot was out at last.

This modern Bluebeard, lifelong murderer, hiding his crimes under the cloak of sanctity, preying upon the simple people had taught to love him, giving with one hand in charity what the other bloodstained hand had taken in violence, was at last exposed.

The Cossack, sword in hand, had solved the mystery which for so many years had oppressed the good folk of Verkhoturie, and cast a black shadow into so many happy homes.

Chernust hastened back to the village and summoned the men of the town to aid him in ransacking the Hermitage. They found evidence enough to convict the old man of nearly thirty murders, the victim in every instance being a young woman of the neighboring town. They had all been buried in the cellar and quicklime thrown in with each body, so as to prevent could be made to disinter them.

The village fathers gathered and talked over the whole dreadful affair, and it was finally decided to set fire to the Hermitage and forever blot out the awful memory of Bateushke Fedot and his thirty victims.

This was done, the whole village assembling to witness the last act of the tragedy, the priest reciting prayers as the flames destroyed the house of many murders and formed a funeral pyre for the ill-fated dead and their slayer, the awful Bluebeard reincarnate.

HOW I TOOK MY WRINKLES OUT
After Massage, Creams and Beauty Doctors Had Failed.
By HARRIET META.

Trouble, worry and ill health brought me deep lines and wrinkles. I realized that they not only greatly marred my appearance and made me look much older, but that they would greatly interfere with my success, because a woman's success, either socially or financially, depends very largely on her appearance. The homely woman with deep lines and furrows in her face must battle an unequal battle with the younger and better looking sister.

I therefore bought various brands of cold cream and satin foods and massaged my face with most constant regularity—but my forehead grew more dreadful. But the wrinkles simply refused to leave the battlefield. The next I went to a beauty specialist, who told me she could easily rid me of my wrinkles. I paid her my money and took the treatment. She certainly made my face go, but after spending all the money I could afford for such treatment I found I had not improved my looks. I was in despair and concluded I must grow old and ugly gracefully. One day I met one of those who was versed in chemical matters, and to her I made the suggestion. As she gave me a new idea. I immediately went to work making experiments and after eight weeks of constant work and study I perfected a home treatment that in 3 weeks' time removed every wrinkle as if by magic. I was delighted beyond measure. My friends noticed the change in me and I had to explain my secret. Many of them asked me to let them use it, and I did so. Then others asked me to let them use it, and I did so. Then others asked me to let them use it, and I did so. Then others

TO THE HOME WHERE NEATNESS PREVAILS.

A million Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pens are in use every day, but there are lots of people who still look upon a Waterman's Ideal Pen as a business man's possession exclusively—like a typewriter or a letter file. That's why we are writing this message to women and children. We want to tell them that a Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen is as much of a necessity in the home as it is in the office. It is a pen that protects clothes from ink spots. The construction is simple and practical. The ink is always ready at the point of the pen, but never overflows. It is a pen that stays in a boy's pocket because of a Clip-Cap. The use of a Waterman's Ideal induces neat and orderly habits.

Waterman's Ideal is the pen that you can give to the children to write their compositions, lessons and letters, and you will never find a spot of ink on their clothes or fingers. Thousands of housekeepers use this wonderfully convenient pen as a constant companion in the drawing-room, library and kitchen. WRITE your letters with a

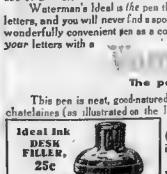
The pen with the Clip-Cap

This pen is neat, good-natured, comfortable and untiring. It never gets out of order, and one of our chatelaines (as illustrated on the left) may be carried anywhere and is always ready for use.



The Clip-Cap on Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen (as shown on pen in this advertisement) is an ingenious device that holds pen securely in your pocket. Pen points are made to suit every writer. Some want a fine, delicate steel action; others a coarse stub; and some want a free-flowing pen—but whatever your preference may be, you can satisfy it among the various Waterman styles. Prices range from $2.50, $3.50, $4.00, $5.00 and upward—and all the best dealers almost everywhere sell the Waterman's Ideal.

BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1907.

MORAN---A LIGHT IN DARK PLACES

THE campaign for the election of a District Attorney for Suffolk County, which is now closing, ought to interest every thoughtful man and woman, not alone in Boston, but in the Commonwealth.

It ought to interest all the men and it ought to interest all the women, for, directly or indirectly, it affects them all alike, and it affects the youths and young girls as it affects their fathers and mothers.

The election of this important officer is not a passing show. It is not an explosion in the air, after which there is stillness. It is not a stir in the still water, after which the old images are reflected unbroken. The contest is real. It is earnest, and a mere job, a salary, is not its object. The object is power. It is a struggle for power—power for good or power for evil. The forces of good and the forces of evil are fighting for power: the one to use it as a sword, the other to use it as a buckler.

What is the office of District Attorney [illegible]

It is the office of the man who is clothed with the power and duty to enforce the law. It is the office of the man who is clothed with the power and duty to punish those [illegible] the law. A District Attorney would enforce all the laws against everybody alike; a timid man could enforce the law only against the weak. An honest man would show no favors to anyone; a dishonest man would show favors to everyone, when it paid.

Within Suffolk County, which is the jurisdiction of this officer, is Boston, the capital of the Commonwealth, where the laws affecting all the people of the Commonwealth are made. Our human society is so complex to-day that our people are more and more dependent for their comfort and happiness upon good laws and honest enforcement of them.

The making of laws is to-day hedged about with innumerable temptations. Behind every post and pillar of the State Capitol, in the lobby of every hotel in the city, the low whispered song of the Lorelei is heard out of the mouths of the corporation agents. Many a young man with high and patriotic purposes, with a father and mother, proud of his local advancement, bidding him Godspeed in his removal to a wider field of activity, comes to Boston as a member of the House of Representatives or the Senate and falls.

He is taken in tow by some older fellow-member of his legislative body, who has already fallen, and is told how things are done at the State House. This older gentleman is the secret agent of some lobbyist and is seeking to make easier the approach of that lobbyist to the well-intentioned young member. A bill which affects the interests of the corporation which that lobbyist represents comes up before the young member. The young member has his opinion of the bill. The merits of the case are clearly against the corporation. Suddenly, AS IF BY MERE CHANCE, the older member introduces him to the lobbyist at Young's Hotel, at the American or Parker or Adams House.

They have dinner. They have wine and other good cheer. A cynical philosophy is preached down the young man's throat. He is told that everyone is for himself, and the devil will get the hindmost. He is told that the Bible is a book of jokes; that Washington was an immoral man; that Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence, kept slaves; that the Revolution was caused by hard times, not love of liberty and self-respect; that there is grave doubt about the legitimacy of Lincoln; that life is a game of cunning; that virtue is a thing to be preached and not practiced; that patriotism lives in poetry and song, in human imagination, but not in human action, that there is but one binding commandment, and that is not found in the Bible: "Thou shalt not be discovered"; that there is but one maxim worth while—"What is there in this for me?"

When that question is put, the lobbyist himself soon shows the young member what there is in it for himself. He votes as the corporation wishes him to vote.

The usefulness of that member is lost. He has voted against his conscience; against the interests of his constituency. The community has lost an able and aspiring member; the corporations have gained a slave.

This is an ordinary story. It occurs during every session of the Legislature in Boston, within the jurisdiction of the District Attorney of Suffolk County. For years it went on openly. During Mr. Moran's term of office it has continued, but more SECRETLY and LESS FREQUENTLY.

If you doubt it, ask any member of the Legislature accustomed to vote on the corporation side of questions if it isn't so. Above all, ask the lobbyists themselves. Ask "Guy" Currier, ask "Jake" Wardwell, ask Everett W. Burdett, ask Frank Dickerman, ask Captain Davis, ask Jack Fleming, ask "Ben" Gibby, ask Coolidge, ask "Bob" Southworth, what they think of Moran? Will any of them say a good word for him?

Publicly, they will call him a crank, a madman, a sensation monger, because he lets the people know what he is doing. Secretly, they'll admit he interferes with their business. HE MAKES IT HARDER FOR THEM TO ACCOMPLISH THEIR PURPOSES.

Boston is the great metropolis of New England. The attractions which bring the weak and the vicious are found here. The pitfalls into which the weak stumble, the opportunities which the vicious covet, are here. The violations of the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth, moral errors, unfortunate indiscretions, and the thousand causes which bring its victims for the first time into the toils of the law in a great city, must be acted upon by the District Attorney. He can make the law vengeful and vindictive if he believes that the quality of mercy can be strained. He can destroy the victims of accident and misfortune by applying the law in all its vigor. He can change their faces and send them away, even though he has reason to believe that they are more sinned against than sinning; and, if their self-respect is saved to them and they are not herded among hardened, abandoned criminals, branded with a criminal record, ostracized forever, they may become good citizens.

On the other hand, he may believe that the law is not revengeful, that it seeks no sacrifice, that it is only the rule and discipline of men and women, fathers and mothers, acting together in what we call society, and this great social body is as tender and forgiving as the fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers who compose it; that, as the great parent of us all, that social body which we call the State wants to give us, its children, as many chances for reform as a father or mother would give a mistaken and erring child. He can believe that the quality of mercy is not strained. He can take more pride in helping than in condemning the weak. He can

> Be to condemnation slow,
> For the best have many failings
> And the worst some good can show.

He can be like any brave man—firm with the strong, and tender with the weak. The crimes which strike at the heart of the State, the crime of bribery, political intimidation and corruption here in Boston, where the bribe-giver and the bribe-taker do business, where the great corporations have their central offices, where the city "machine" operates—these vital offences against the life of society, planned with cold, calculating cunning by men of standing and power in the community, the District Attorney can punish without mercy. The little offences, and the little offenders whose misconduct injures themselves more than others, he can deal with mercifully if they deserve it.

The District Attorney for Suffolk County can be strong on the stronger side, or he can be strong on the weaker side. He can protect us from those crimes of our public servants who betray us, and from the tempters who seduce them into those betrayals, and be gentle with the rest; or he can be indifferent to the great offences which hurt us all, and fierce against the little misdemeanors, depriving society of a man or a woman, a boy or a girl, who otherwise might have been a useful citizen.

He can be a man of such known and accepted integrity that the great offenders, who are the least punished and the most protected by our public officers, will cease to offend the moment he comes into power. He can be a man whose character and associations are known or thought to be susceptible, and this class of criminals will then increase their operations.

Who is the present District Attorney?

Everyone knows that his name is John B. Moran; everyone knows that he was elected two years ago against the united opposition of both the old parties.

This is the Sunday before election. Most of us have now had some account of his stewardship. Most of us now know whether he is a District Attorney the big criminals hate and the unfortunates respect; or, whether he is a District Attorney whom the big criminals like and the poor unfortunates dread: whether the briber or the bribed, the political corruptionist or other public enemy may pass his door to find immunity; or whether the young man or the young woman, erring for the first time, or erring even for the second time under mitigating circumstances, must say as they repair to the place where he dispenses justice: "All who enter here leave hope behind."

The great tide of popular feeling running so strong for Mr. Moran is every hour answering this question.

He stands aloof from all party machines. He stands aloof from all corrupt politicians. He made no bargains for any party nominations. He has raised no great campaign fund. He is making no public speeches. He is playing no politics. He has rested his case upon his record in office, and upon his confidence that the people will know a faithful servant when they see him.

His enemies say that he has not convicted every man whose action he has investigated, but they do not say that he did not make an HONEST INVESTIGATION. His enemies say that Wardwell, Burdett, Currier, Coolidge, Southworth and Dickerman are still at large; BUT THEY DON'T SAY THAT THESE LOBBYISTS LOVE MORAN.

They don't even deny that these men would move heaven and earth to get him out of the place of power he now holds.

It isn't always necessary to convict men to make men obey the law. It is often sufficient, and nearly always sufficient, among intelligent men, to be ready and determined to enforce the law.

The big criminals take few chances. Their chief reliance is their pull with the public prosecutor in case they are found out. They depend upon protection, and if they can't rely upon the District Attorney to give them that, some of them will stop altogether and the rest will proceed with ever so much more cautious.

His enemies say that he has been too liberal in giving men and women another chance. But they give no specific instance. Among all those whom he has made happy during the last two years, they have not found one which they can cite as an improper extension of mercy. On this question Mr. Moran himself has said:

"Let me say to you, Mr. Webster, that the only pleasant thing about this office is the power it gives to lift fallen humanity to its feet, to save the unfortunate from the tortures of a prison, to give the handclasp of encouragement to a despairing soul. The public commendation of a successful prosecution of a grafter dwindles into insignificance when one recalls the 'God bless you' from a mother's lips as you give her boy or girl liberty with another chance to reform.

"When all other incidents of my official life shall be forgotten by me, there will still linger the memory of the little Italian boy brought from Baltimore on a false charge, who, when liberated by me and furnished with money for his trip back to his home, clasped my hand with his little fingers, and, tears of joy and gratitude streaming down his cheeks, impulsively kissed the hand he held in his own."

We may judge Mr. Moran by the enemies he has made. We may judge him by the opposition of the city machine, by the opposition of the corporations, by the opposition of every man who is known in the community as a grafter, for they are all against Moran.

We may judge him by the character and the associations of his two opponents, both the pawns of the present Mayor, each supported by some of the corporations, those that are not supporting one supporting the other.

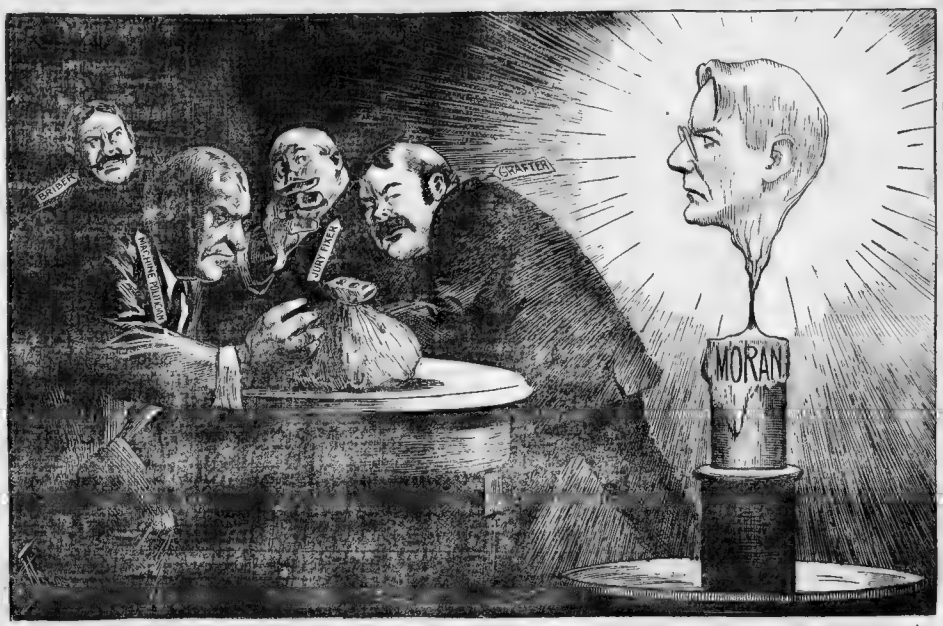
We may judge Mr. Moran by his friends. Who are they? The great mass of the citizens of all the parties—Democratic, Independence League and Republican.

Why is it that party lines are broken down when Mr. Moran is a candidate? Why is it that more than half of the Democrats, more than half of the Republicans, and all of the Independence Leaguers you meet on the street are for Moran?

Because the people of this country are WAKING UP. Because they recognize an honest, faithful servant when they see him, and because they no longer let a party boss tell them who is honest and who is faithful. They are thinking for themselves.

This is a great contest. It means much to Suffolk County and to Massachusetts. You who are a father or a mother don't know where the lightning may strike next. If you have boys or girls, you may some day be glad that you can go to a tender-hearted District Attorney, without the interposition of any politician or any men of reputed influence, and tell your story with the absolute assurance that, whether you have strong friends or are unknown, YOU WILL RECEIVE JUSTICE TEMPERED WITH MERCY.

But whether you ever have a special interest or not, you will always have a general interest in the purity of our public life, in the enactment of good laws which affect you. The integrity of Mr. Moran hangs like a sword of Damocles over the heads of big lawbreakers who once relied upon the District Attorney's office to protect them, and not to punish them, and who hope to rely upon it again if Moran should be defeated.



The Grafter and the Briber Shrink From and Hate the Light

Setting a Good Example

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Strength.

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

WHO is the strong? Not he who puts to test
His powers with the strong, and proves the best,
But he who dwells where weaklings congregate
And never lets his splendid strength abate

Who is the good? Not he who walks each day
With moral men along the path, clean way,
But he who scatters gold sin and shame,
Who is the wise? Not he who from the start
With wisdom's followers has taken part;
But he who looks on Folly's tempting eyes
And turns away, perceiving her disguise

Who is serene? Not he who lives his kind,
Some desert features, or some cave to find;
But he who in the city's noisiest scene,
Keeps calm within—he only is serene.

A WOMAN of the [illegible] was heard to express herself with disgust and indignation [illegible] because she [illegible] had gone away from her friends and live in close communion with Nature and Nature's God."

But that is not the way Nature's God wishes us to prove our allegiance to high ideals.

It requires a greater bravery to live in the midst of corruption and remain incorruptible than to live on a deserted island and meditate on spiritual things.

No man need boast of great strength until it has been tried.

And no man exhibits great strength of mind who keeps reasonable hours, retiring and rising early, and eating simple food, if he has to [illegible] where there are temptations and no luxuries.

But he who is surrounded by all the [illegible] and [illegible] and yet refuses the rich and delicious dishes of high-priced chefs, and possesses the health by sleeping [illegible] and by unwise eating, that man is truly strong. He is developing will and force of character which will make him a power for good.

The man who hears and knows nothing but noble dealings in financial matters, and who [illegible] more than what he has earned by his labors, may be honest in act and fact, but that tried and tested honesty [illegible] that of one who handles vast sums of other people's money, who understands all the colossal frauds which thrive and prosper under the name of "high finance," and who yet keeps his conscience clean of the least dishonest action.

The village maid and matron, living far from metropolitan centres, and keeping spotless reputations, are virtuous and noble women, without question. Yet greater glory belongs to the woman who lives in the whirl of fashionable or prevailing folly, and yet keeps herself from scandal and preserves her own ideals of womanhood.

The boy who has never seen a cigarette smoked, save secretly and behind closed doors, is not so deserving of praise for his abstinence from the vice as the boy whose associates all indulge in the habit, and who all laugh at him as a weakling for his refusal.

We hear much in these days of "going into a silence" for meditation and concentration.

It is indeed well to take a portion of [illegible] day for such communion with one's better self, the God within, yet real power of concentration and real serenity of nerve possessed by those who can be calm within while surrounded by the noise and confusion of the world.

We are living in an age of excitement, extravagance and folly. Men and women sell their souls for wealth, and divorce has become the pastime of the hour.

If we do not approve of the vices of the rich, there is small virtue in fleeing to the desert.

Flight suggests fear, and fear weakness.

Are we strong?

Then let us prove it by living in the midst of weakness without yielding to those follies which we condemn.

Do we desire to be good? Then let us hold fast to the sweet old virtues and principles of life, although surrounded by people who scoff at loyalty and love and domestic virtues.

Would we be thought wise?

Then in the centre of mad extravagance and vain excesses let us prove that we can live within our means and keep health and morals and self-respect.

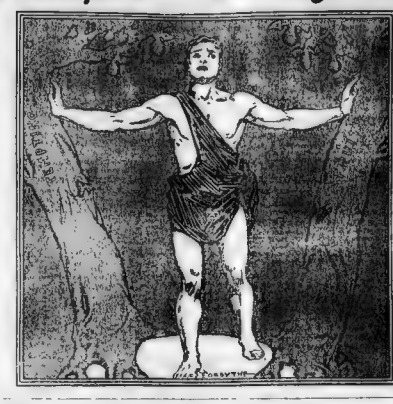
Do we desire to show our serenity?

Then let us learn how to be calm, no matter what turmoil there may be about us.

It is not from caves or cloisters or desert realms that the good, wise, calm and sensible people of earth can help the mad world to keep its balance, but in the centres of civilization, walking side by side and standing face to face with their fellows.

The man who is cheerfully content to ride on a trolley because he cannot afford an automobile, although all his associates whirl past him in their motor cars, is setting a better example to the world than if he fled to a remote spot to avoid the sight of such extravagance.

To live in the world, enjoy the associations of humanity, yet rise above its sins and follies, and enjoy communion with the Invisible Helpers that is to know happiness and helpfulness.



The Atmosphere a Grand Mechanism

By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss

THE more the atmosphere is studied the more marvellous it appears. To the eye it is nothing, for the color of the sky is not the atmosphere visible, but the effect of minute floating particles which reflect the blue waves of the spectrum. We think of the atmosphere as an invisible gas gradually thinning out until at the height of forty or fifty miles it practically disappears, but, in fact, as recent investigations prove, it is a great mechanism, composed of substances possessing such crystal purity that they can not be seen, and complicated to an astonishing degree. To an eye that could see the atmosphere in all its parts and motions an amazing spectacle would be presented. In the first place, that portion of the atmosphere lying within a mile or two of the earth's surface is what may be called a skeleton. This skeleton is composed of parts of varying degrees of density, which are not distributed at random, but occupy fixed and definite positions with regard to one another. It is, to be sure, a fluid, not a solid, skeleton, and its parts change their places, but this change takes place in accordance with invariable laws, and for long periods of time there is hardly any change at all. If that were not so, our climates would not possess the definite character which marks them, the weather could be nowise more or else than we actually find it, and all efforts at weather prediction would lamentably fail.

Meteorologists have come to recognize the existence of certain areas of high and low pressure which occupy perfectly ascertainable positions during certain seasons. For a month at a time they undergo little or no variation. Daily deformations occur without affecting the general relations of the parts of the atmosphere as known to our simpler. These areas are now called "centres of action," and their number is limited in each hemisphere. It is across the circulation of the winds around these centres of movement of storms. From season to season they are slowly and gradually displaced in position, and their interplay governs the types of weather which prevail over given parts of the earth. The movements of the atmosphere are not effected at random, but they rather resemble those of a definitely organized piece of machinery, no part of which can change its place without corresponding changes in other parts. It is upon this fact that the hopes now entertained of long range weather predictions are based. Dr. Hann, for instance, has remarked a curious balance which takes place between the defined centres of high and low pressure, one of which ordinarily lies over the ocean near the Azores Islands and the other far north, about Iceland. When the pressure is low in Iceland and high over the Azores, northeastern Europe enjoys a more temperate climate and has mild Winters. When the pressure is low over the Azores and high in Iceland, the weather conditions of northeastern Europe are reversed. These changes are not affected by daily variations. Similar relations have been found elsewhere. Sometimes the contrasting effects are felt at surprising distances. Thus a relation has been traced between the intensity of the monsoon over the Indian Ocean and the floods in the River Nile.

PROF. GARRETT P. SERVISS.

But the skeleton of pressures in the lower air is not by any means the only structural peculiarity which has been found in the atmosphere. Investigation made with the aid of "sounding balloons," sent to the height of ten or fifteen miles in many cases, have shown that the upper air possesses layers of the most unexpected nature. Up to a height of five or six miles the air exhibits, in the words of H. Hergesell, a sort of solidarity, experiencing as a whole the variations of temperature that occur from day to day, but suddenly, above that height, a very different state of affairs experienced. Another unexpected zone is entered, where successive layers of air lie upon one another, the temperature in these layers varying without regard to the law of decrease with increase of height. Thus a cold layer is often found superposed upon a warm one, and above that comes another cold stratum, and so on. At great elevations the "skeleton," with its definite areas of high and low pressure, disappears, and gigantic vortexes, having the poles of the earth for their centres of motion, are found. In the northern hemisphere the whirl of the upper atmosphere around the earth takes place from west to east, and its influence appears to be conveyed down into the lower air, causing cyclonic storms to move over the earth's surface in the same direction. It is only with the elevation of less than two miles that this is objected to the combinated [illegible] the variations of temperature occurring on the surface. The upper air is [illegible] of these; but, on the other hand, as before remarked, the movement of the higher atmosphere affects the general direction of storms near the surface of the globe.

It is because of the hopes aroused by the rapid progress of these discoveries that so much attention is now being paid in every part of the civilized world to the exploration of the upper atmosphere. The meteorological observatories have everywhere united their efforts in making this exploration more effective. In July simultaneously from many such observatories in Europe and America a grand series of launchings of sounding balloons, lasting for a week, occurred. Some of the balloons were made from vessels in the ocean. For a long time launchings have been made on a fixed day every month. This work is pursued so energetically and the results are so promising that a well known meteorologist has asserted that the day is probably not far distant when people will have some difficulty in imagining that there was a time when nobody knew whether it would rain to-morrow or not.

Japan May Seize the Pacific Slope

By Capt. Richmond Hobson, Ex-U.S.N.

"We must send our whole fleet to the Pacific and keep it there."

IN my last paper it was pointed out that America is defenceless in the Far East.

Investigation brought out the fact that our failure to provide naval bases in the Hawaiian Islands and Philippines, and our failure to expand our naval strength in keeping with our added responsibilities, has left us in a deplorable position, where Japan can seize both of these groups at any time without material resistance. Further examination showed that if Japan once occupies these islands in force, it will be practically impossible for the United States to dislodge her, even if Japan's ally should fail to observe the terms of the treaty of alliance, so that our naval force could be withdrawn entirely from the Atlantic and concentrated in the Pacific.

It becomes clear that in attempting to dislodge her, our fleet, though at first superior to the Japanese, could not force a general engagement, but on account of the distance and lack of a base with docking and repairing facilities, would speedily deteriorate and disintegrate, if it did not at once retrieve itself by seeking battle with the Japanese fleet under the protection of Japanese forts.

Since it is impossible after war comes to build a warship of any strength in time for service, and is equally impossible to buy warships from neutrals, the time would speedily come when the Japanese fleet, in its full integrity, in perfect fighting condition, could issue forth and destroy the remnant of our shattered fleet, leaving the sea in absolute control of the Japanese.

This would lay our mainland open to invasion.

An expedition would immediately seize the Aleutian Islands and Alaska, where there could be no substantial resistance and would establish a base in southern Alaska waters. This base and Hawaii would be the assembling points for the armies of invasion. The latter place would offer superior advantages for subsistence, and would probably be selected for the main force, but the Alaskan base would be a source of endless trouble to the coasts of Oregon and Washington, and would draw off our strength from the coast of California, where the main landing of Japanese would probably be effected. Recent Japanese inspections of the harbors of southern California indicate that one of these harbors has been selected for the landing.

It is not necessary to examine in detail the conditions of our fortifications to see their insufficiency, especially in men. Such fortifications as we have are only installed to oppose the attack of warships. All that exists could be easily taken from the rear by a land force. The Japanese fleet would probably make a diversion of one of the fortified harbors, while the landing was being effected with little opposition at an unfortified point.

The average American is inclined to scoff at the idea of an invasion of our mainland territory. It will come as a shock to learn that, once in control of the sea, Japan could land in force overpowering any force we could gather in opposition, and could rush reinforcements to the army faster than we could. Furthermore, Japanese and Chinese swarms coming in the wake of the army could possess themselves of the country, perpetually driving the white man back beyond the Sierra and Cascade Mountains.

Americans have been sitting back contemplating the Yellow Peril with indifference, imagining that it is but a nightmare belonging to some distant day, and that should it ever come Europe would be the continent to face it first. We forget that, with the sea open, water is infinitely more advantageous than land for an invasion, and that the yellow man has shown prowess on the water fully as great as on the land. We fail to grasp the significance of the persistent yellow immigration toward America. It shows the direction of sociological gravitation. The Yellow Peril is here. It is America's peril first; and control of the Pacific Ocean is our only safety.

Many will feel inclined to challenge the statement that Japan, in control of the sea, could effectively invade our mainland territory. We have grown up with the feeling of absolute security, transmitted from the days when the ocean was an insuperable barrier against invading armies. It will be a valuable lesson if we can learn the truth and appreciate the fact that neglect of national defence means grave national peril.

The Japanese are past masters in hiding from the world their military activities, but it is now known that since the war with Russia they have added four line divisions to their army and have made proportionate increases in technical units.

The new regulations for military service on a two-year basis bring to the colors 100,000 recruits yearly in the infantry alone, and will add 800 men yearly to the war strength of every division.

Not counting the prospective increases, the army of Japan to-day contains over a million of trained men, who have served in war, consisting of about 250,000 men in the standing army and about 800,000 trained reserves and militiamen.

The apportionment is about as follows.

1 guard division with 1 reserve brigade	40,000
16 army corps	500,000
20 reserve brigades of 8 battalions each	160,000
53 reserve regiments—second line	150,000
20 reserve regiments of field artillery	12,000
25 battalions of fort artillery	11,000
1 Formosa division	18,000
2 railroad regiments	7,500
1 airship division and 1 telegraph battalion	1,200
Troops guarding possessions and communications	120,000
Militia	40,000
	1,059,700
Coolies	150,000
Total	1,209,700

"The struggle would be between the Japanese Regulars in possession of the country and the American Volunteers being organized 2,000 miles away."

It is conservative to conclude that Japan is prepared to put into the field, fully equipped, organized and trained, an army half again as large as her army in the war with Russia.

In case of war with the United States, Japan could raise 10,000 men in the Philippine Islands, 60,000 men in the Hawaiian Islands and nearly 100,000 men in the United States proper, to which would be added probably 25,000 men from Mexico and Canada. These contingents would ultimately gain the respective armies of invasion, and, knowing the country thoroughly, would be in position to render invaluable service during the invading operations. Reports from the Philippines and Hawaii, from the Pacific slope, from the Canadian and the Mexican frontiers, are constantly reiterating the influx of Japanese soldiers, some in disguise, some unmolested. Anybody but a blind man can see that the systematic invasion of America is already well advanced. Japan has today on American soil more trained soldiers than America has in her whole regular army and militia combined, and reinforcements are pouring in every day, at some points openly, at other points surreptitiously.

The American army at its present strength numbers about 75,000 men

Total regular army	60,083
Philippine scouts	3,208
Porto Rico, provisional regiment	574
Total	74,865

We have no trained national reserves or national militia, and the occupation of Cuba makes a substantial drain upon this meagre force.

As the United States has no merchant marine from which to draw transports, we must assume not only that no reinforcements could be dispatched to our outlying possessions, but also that no troops in these possessions could be brought back home, but must fall into the hands of the enemy. Consequently we must make a substantial reduction from the above figures in estimating the men immediately available for repelling an invasion of our mainland.

During the Russian war, Japan was known to transport over 100,000 men in a single expedition. With the extraordinary expansion of her merchant marine since the war we can assume that within three days after she gets control of the sea she could have 200,000 men embarked. In about two weeks these men would be disembarked in Hawaii and reinforced by 50,000 men already there. In two weeks more the transports would be back in Japan with 200,000 more men embarked for invasion of the Slope. In four weeks more these men would be landed on the California coast under the guns of the Japanese fleet. The transports would proceed to Hawaii and within three weeks would return with 250,000 more men. A continual stream of reinforcements would then pass from Japan to Hawaii and from Hawaii to the Coast. Within nine months Japan could have a million men, the seasoned armies of Manchuria, encamped on the Pacific Coast.

Expeditions against the Aleutian Islands, Alaska, Puget Sound, the Columbia River and the Golden Gate would cause a division of the American forces and curtail the reinforcements available for repelling the main invasion.

With our small standing army we could not hope to make any effective opposition to such an invasion in force, even if we knew well in advance the point chosen for disembarking. The total militia of all the States amounts to only about 110,000 men, imperfectly organized, imperfectly equipped and only half-trained.

The great invading army therefore would meet but little serious opposition the first season, as it proceeded to occupy the Slope and to intrench and fortify in strongholds and take possession of the railroads and the passes over the mountains. We should probably find that the prudent thing to do would be to withhold the small force of regulars and militia from exposure to annihilation, and keep them for a nucleus about which to organize a great volunteer army, upon which we would have to rely.

The struggle would be between the Japanese regulars in possession of the country and the American volunteers being organized two thousand miles away, with a thinly populated semi-arid area, seven or eight hundred miles wide and a rugged mountain range to cross before they could descend to the attack, where the enemy would choose the battlegrounds.

The Japanese could practically subsist upon the rich Hawaiian Islands and the rich garden lands of the Slope. The difficulties of their communications would be far less than they were in Manchuria. The whole Japanese nation has now become trained and disciplined and could supply an additional million of men each year for four or five years without drawing on China. In the meantime the country would be thrown open to Chinese and Japanese alike, and the numbers available would soon become unlimited.

It is an utter impossibility for any nation to be turned into an army in a few months. We could not possibly oppose the Japanese armies of invasion the first year and, in spite of prodigious efforts and boundless expense in gathering our forces, we could not even struggle but defeat the second year. Even the third year would doubtless be fought with disaster. In fact, with the sea open, and drawing upon China as well, Japan with her Japanese armies would have a permanent advantage. If America succeeded in making terms at any time evacuation of the Slope could only be secured by the payment of a staggering indemnity. Judging from the tenor of articles appearing in Japanese papers, such an indemnity is expected. Japan would, of course, retain our island possessions, and with the indemnity would then expand her naval and military establishments to maintain control of the sea, and from Hawaii, as a base, to be ready for a new invasion at any time she desired. Such new invasion would likewise prove irresistible.

Any analysis of actual conditions compels the conclusion that the yellow man, if preponderant on the Pacific, could not only throw America out of that ocean, but could seize and hold the Pacific Slope. The only possible way to prevent invasion from Asia, as the only possible way to compel retirement after invasion, is for America to secure control of the sea on the Pacific.

Preponderance on that ocean is not only necessary to our commerce and prosperity and to the security of our island possessions, but is also absolutely necessary to the preservation of the integrity of the life of the nation itself.

What folly to allow the national defence to drift along till it becomes necessary to turn the whole nation away from its useful pursuits of peace and transform our citizens into soldiers, citizens with such a high standard of comfort and used to such wide latitude of individual action that military life would prove a more hardship, discipline would be difficult and the expense per soldier would be comparatively enormous.

What folly to have our whole peaceful nation engulfed in militarism, when with control of the sea, we could remain at peace and in good will with all the world, working out our great destiny in security and tranquility!

How much greater this folly when we realize that because of our peaceful activities our resources are boundless, and the cost of maintaining permanent control of the sea, though great, would be little felt on the broad shoulders of the nation.

The conclusion of this paper, as of my previous paper, is that we must send our whole fleet to the Pacific and send it quick, and keep it there permanently, and that we must proceed with all dispatch to build two more fleets for the Atlantic, and during the building we must refuse war, no matter what the provocation.

This Week's Offerings at the Theatres

NOVEMBER BRINGS US TWO FAMOUS PRODUCTIONS.

TWO long-awaited productions are to be the features of Boston's theatrical week as November begins. The Soudan" began its American history on the stage at the Boston Theatre and is now revived on that stage with promises of an even better and larger production than before. "The Red Mill," called the most amusing musical comedy of the year, comes to the Colonial with those past masters of fun-making, Montgomery and Stone. "Advanced vaudeville" takes a fresh start at the Tremont, with a flourish of trumpets, and Wagner's greatest opera is produced at the Castle Square. There are a lot of new offerings at the other houses, and here is the story they tell:

What the Theatres Offer

Boston Theatre

The announcement of a production of the famous English melodrama "The Soudan" by the Boston Theatre stock company to-morrow night is one of the most interesting put forward by Manager Morgan Shaw in his season. The reputation this play gained in England and America nearly twenty years ago was won upon the merit of its plot and the thrilling situations it contains. Fourteen sets are called for in the production and all of these have been built and painted after the models used in the original productions of the play in London. Only 250 people take part each night in the mêlée between the Dervishes and the English at Gatkai, it will be noted. Many fine horses will be a feature of the presentation. The principal characters are as follows: Captain Walton, Wilson Melrose; Mathew Hawker, Frank Walker; Paul Verne, Theodore Hamilton; Stephen Mardyke, William Hasson; Rev. Arthur Lulworth, Thomas Mackenzie; Horatio Sparkins, Donald Meek; Joe Lambkin, Otis Thayer; John Stone, Frank Lewis; Colonel Braudon, John Morgan; Dick O'Connor, James Devlin; Father Benoit, William Hasson; Arab Scout, Lionel Hinton; Jim Boston, Will ams; Mrs. Nellie Temple, Eleanor Gordon; Mrs. Vera Beresford, Maude Winston; Mary Saulters, Mrs. Lambkin, Lucille La Verne; Mrs. Edwards, Rose Meredith; Mrs. Huston, Mabel Mann; Lucy, Beverly West; Frank Capon, Gerald Myers; Dick, Wayland Price.

Colonial Theatre

Back to the scenes of their early success to-morrow night will come Montgomery and Stone, the erstwhile Tin Man and Scarecrow of "The Wizard of Oz," and under the direction of Charles Dilling ham will submit to Boston theatregoers their latest achievement, with much promise of success in New York and Chicago. "The Red Mill," the product of Henry Blossom, with a score by Victor Herbert, Montgomery and Stone now appear as funny human beings, but are permitted to assume several disguises. In his score Victor Herbert has successfully attempted to reproduce the atmosphere of Holland, and has written some characteristic music for the piece. The first act shows a street in Dutch Harlem, with a big parade of work ing windmills for a background. The second is laid in the Red Mill, with its big sails and dutch effects. Colorful Dutch garments add to the beauty of the production. In support of the two stars are David C. Dunbar, Edward Begley, Stanley Hawkins, Charles Day, and Herbert Ice impelling women are Miss Prince, Edith Johnson, Elsa Fassett and Nadine Rendle. A number of specialties are played by Constance Crawley, Grace White, Jessie Dickinson, Ida Shackleford, Sybil Cupid, Irene Bentley, Grace Belmont, Josephine Marion Stokes, Cora Nelson and Helen Payne. There is a big chorus.

Castle Square Theatre

Interest in the production of "Lohengrin" at the Castle Square during the coming week promises an unstampled series of crowded houses. "Lohengrin" is by many considered to be Wagner's masterpiece. For the cast, all the Castle Square favorites will appear. The role of Lohengrin will be sung by George Tallman and Harry Davies, and the heroine Elsa will be cast to Miss Clara Lane and Miss Blanche Edwards. J. K. Murray and Forrest Huff will appear alternately as Telramund, with Miss Louise Le Baron and Miss Lois Hall as Ortrud, and Francis J. Boyle, the new bass singer of the company, will sing the part of King Henry the Fowler.

Tremont Theatre

Klaw and Erlanger's advanced vaudeville festival opens at the Tremont Theatre Monday afternoon. From a starter Betty Alice, the famous male impersonator from London, is announced, in her native land she is known as "the best dressed man in all England." She has been a sensational success for the past four weeks at the New York Theatre. The Kercsky troupe of Russian national dancers is making its first visit to this city. It is the troupe that Klaw and Erlanger had such difficulty in getting out of the domain of the Czar. Leonard Boissinier is a violin virtuoso who will play such what he calls "the Boissinier tunes," said to be the nearest approach to the human voice ever made on a violin. Two Gastonidis are eccentric comedy jugglers, Lew Hoadley and Lester Cohen have their rollicking sketch, "The Two Cousins," Carina and Harris in a singing and dancing turn, that quartet, Bernard, Scanlon, Terry Finnie and Morrell and the Lafallie brothers, Frank Paris, will try to establish an equilibriste Cinquetti, acclaimed by the Parisian critics, is making his first appearance in this country. Carroll and Howard in a sketch that they call "Chums," in which she will have a strong surprise. Lucille Lawrence Grafton, Jessie Alleman makes his Boston debut in vaudeville with a tabloid musical offering, entitled "Trouble of the Boss." Other features are the Five Pirovolis, Paris as a novelty juggler, Al H. Weston and Irene Dow in "The Wedding Reception", the Big City Quartet, Agnes Mahr, the American Tommy Atkins, and the famous Fitz-Nowlan troupe of acrobats, who will present for the first time here the act introducing a trick horse.

Majestic Theatre

At the Majestic Theatre "The Lady from Lane's" begins its final week to-morrow night, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. This musical farce-proves a most excellent evening's entertainment, being filled with pretty musical airs and having a coherent, well told story that provides in addition strong comedy. Thomas Wise and Fred Lotus Lawrence head the company which Broadhurst and Currie have assembled. Both Mr. Wise and Miss Bhat deck take advantage of the excellent opportunities the piece affords for fun making. There is a big chorus.

Globe Theatre

Supported by a large company, Johnny and Emma Ray, under the management of M. B. Sidi, come to the Globe for one week, in the musical comedy, "King Casey," from the pen of Aaron Hoffman, author of "When Johnny and Emma Ray" is the new comedy full recognition of the natural humor possessed by Mr. Ray has been given beautiful scope Emma Ray is likewise fitted with a part well suited to her personality. Numerous new musical numbers are interpolated during the action and ten complete situations evolved through the efforts of Dan Casey, foreman of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, in his endeavor to pose as the King of Carnival.

Grand Opera House

Next week brings a new production at the Grand. "The Cow-boy and the Squaw" is the title of the production, and it is said to be filled with unfold amusement. It is given only special production now in stock companies, and will be given here on Monday, Tuesday and Saturday.

Hollis Street Theatre

Every playgoer likes a stirring romance and a rousing good play, and those are what Cleo Hindman has provided in "The Ranger," which Dustin Farnum, and it is safe to be wondered at that the biggest hit of the season. The part of Mr. Farnum's engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre. This is the play that he has ever come here for an engagement of that length, a record for holding by the opening week. It will be his last.

Park Theatre

Not since the days of "Stronghearst" and "The Lion and the House" has the Park Theatre given such a successful and lasting engagement as that now bestowed upon Miss Mary Jane Irish and there in "The Maid and the Mummy." Miss Dore established over her audiences a strong hold in her initial week, and her manner and methods gain new friends with every performance. Those who have seen her in other roles say that in this piece she has never been seen to better advantage. Another local favorite is Eva Taylor, former leading lady at the Castle Square, who has a merry, catchy role, entitled "Chums," in which she will have a strong support. Harold Lawrence Grattan, James Alexander makes his Boston debut in vaudeville with a tabloid musical offering, entitled "Trouble of the Boss." Other features are the Five Pirovolis, Paris as a novelty juggler, Al H. Weston and Irene Dow in "The Wedding Reception", the Big City Quartet, Agnes Mahr, the American Tommy Atkins, and the famous Fitz-Nowlan troupe of acrobats, who will present for the first time here the act introducing a trick horse.

Columbia Theatre

Manager Farren of the Columbia, in addition to offering the Star Show Girls, one of the newest burlesque attractions on the road, has a few extra good things in store this week, which ought to be welcome to all vaudeville patrons, keeping the theatre open until full returns are come. Harry Kennedy will be with the show next week, and will take part with two of the best known comedians in the business in a series of stunts in one scene. The burlesque is styled "Down in Dixie," and in the olio James J. Dixon will be seen in his "Street Singing" specialty. Baker & Lynn's new edition of "The Electric Boy," Marie Croix and Clayton, Gillie Dunkerl and George Sorella will contribute a daring acrobatic specialty.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

This week at the Bowdoin Square Theatre the stock company will produce that thrilling melodrama, "The Fatal Wedding." It requires much scenery and dress and a cast with the name of Annie Kingsley, who becomes maker of the secret police. The admirers of talented Jane Stuart and Clayton Legge will be given an opportunity of seeing these favorites in the leading roles, while the remainder of the cast will be made up of Isabel Sherman, Miss Florence, Louis Desmond, Lillian Lucas, Harry Leland, Tommy Shirley, Herr Brooks, Dwight Clayton, Gillie Dunkerl and George Harris.

Austin & Stone's Museum

The "Wife in the Orient" troupe of eastern dancing girls and oriental athletes, who have been the chief attraction this week at Austin & Stone's Museum, will remain another week. Some of the others will be Horton and Gill, a female lady and gent of the English Punch and Judy; and the king of monster snakes. To the theatre two new features above made their Arthur Pearce and Emma Christy in cat dances; Dewey and Rogers, in song and dance; the Six Dan, Keaton and Lucas, the Meadows Comedy Company in "Dad's Choice," a black face comedy; Florence Kinney, in a singing and dancing novelty, and Prof. Jones with cinematography.

Lyceum Theatre

The Daisy Duchess Company will occupy the boards here the coming week. The company is a large one and boasts many new features not before seen in a burlesque show among the principal entertainers are Kramon and Stevens, the latest team; Helena May, a lively little soubrette; Morris and Beaver, two dancing boys of unusual talent, Keeler and Hawley, the two comedians, "While Con Carne" and the "University Girls" are the titles of the burlesque.

FROM ACROSS THE FOOTLIGHTS

BY "THE OBSERVER"

REV. GEORGE PEAIR, the English evangelist, who has recently been preaching in Boston, has taken occasion to declare that dancing leads to Satan, "and the stage is just as bad, and the theatre is ten times worse to-day than it ever was." He says I have stood out side the theatres in Manchester, England, with my friend and co-worker, Gypsy Smith, and tried to exhort young people to cease the sins of nightly inhalation a playhouse. Sir Henry Irving was the only decent actor I knew who honestly tried to uplift the stage." Evidently the Rev Mr. Peair knew only one actor, and that was Irving. I sincerely hope that he will remain in America long enough to become acquainted with Maude Adams, with Ethel Barrymore, with Elsie Janis, Marie Dorn, Julia Marlowe, or E. H. Sothern, Robert Mantell, James K. Hackett, or—but what's the use. The reverend gentleman reminds me of the elderly lady who was reviewing a certain book, declaring it to be the worst ever written. She was asked if she had read it. "Oh, no," she replied, "I wouldn't dare read it." I believe that the stage and its people are a great deal better to-day than ever before. The Rev. Mr. Fear should join the Actors-Church Alliance.

SHOULD the reverend gentleman mentioned above care to see an excellent example of modern stage life in its relation to the home life of actors, he might make a pastoral call upon J. K. Murray and Clara Lane at their home in Beachmont. In their cosy home, with their delightful children, he might gain material for further thought. Perhaps John Craig and his chimney wife, Mary Young, with their fine family of boys might also give him a new idea as to the "badness" of the stage.

TO perpetrate a hardened pun, one might call Dustin Farnum "Dusty" Farnum in "The Ranger," and the other members of the company might answer to the same grisly soubriquet, so much property dust is used to carry out the idea of the alkali-ridden country in which the melodrama is located. The rangers and peons come in dusty from top to toe. The automobile bearing the mine-owner and his party drops to the place between its route by means of a dust-cloud artistically sifted through the back drop. Everyone who comes on the stage is smoking dust from his or her person. In fact, the characteristics of the piece seem to be dust, death and dynamite, one or more of those being in evidence about all the time.

LINDSAY MORISON, manager of the Boston Theatre, informs me that he has secured the right to produce Ethel Barrymore's great play "Captain Jinks" this season, after the holidays, at this largest royalty ever paid for a production by a stock company. The Boston Theatre Company is the only stock company in America that has the right to produce this play.

* * *

THE more I go behind the scenes at Keith's, the more thoroughly I am convinced that B. F. Keith knows how to run a vaudeville theatre. He certainly is a genius. No money is spared for the comfort of the people who play upon his stage. The dressing rooms are magnificent in their cleanliness, and they are all light and pleasant. I saw there this week in each dressing room an electric curling iron and heating apparatus for paints that certainly must be welcome to the actresses. Mr. Keith has his own baggage express from the theatre to the railroad stations so that the performers never lose their trains on Saturday night. A performer tells me that the local Keith house presents to every person who uses music a neat folder in which to keep his sheets and that it is a great convenience in going about the country. An employe of the house tells me that Mr. Keith makes note of every suggestion made to his manager by an employe, for the betterment of the service or of conditions there, and that records are kept to the end of the year to the employes who prove themselves most efficient in this and other ways. By the way, have you noticed that an organ has been installed in the orchestra, for the use of Director Grudy? It is the only one in the country, I believe.

Howard Athenaeum

"The Twentieth Century Maids" come to the Old Howard this week. This organization is said to contain one of the prettiest choruses in the wheel and is heralded by its sponsors as the best of the season. All the costumes are new, while the comedians are men of rare ability in their chosen field. In the Howard's own show will appear such entertainers as Mabelle Mitchell, soubrette acrobat; Brooks and Jeanette, the "Huff-puff-puff" pair; Harry Welch, story impersonator (he Will Young of Keeler in "The College Boy"); Ryan and Merriam, singers and dancers; Irish La Jole, a former member of the Howard burlesquers, contortionist; Hahne, novelty magician; Lawrence and Dale, vocalists; Billy Kinkaid, humorist.

Palace Theatre

At Reeves has always made it a point to make showing a requisite in addition to talent, and as a result his company is known as the "Big Beauty Show." This week, at the Palace Theatre, Almeda Fowler, called the prettiest woman on the stage, leads the cast, with Andy Lewis, Maude Fillott, the Eight English Bright Lights, the Savoy Quartette, Ed Morris, Blanche Martin and Mae Powers. Al Reeves will be in evidence with his banjo. The Palace company will also present "The Harringtons," in a comedy ring act; Lopez and Lewis, vocalists and dancers; Ritz Nichols, mimic; Dayton and Paul, comedy sketchists; Alfred C. Harrington, comedy gymnast, and the Palacescope.

Eastern Steamship Trips

The horizontal reduction in rates on the International and Bangor divisions of the Eastern Steamship Company went into effect Friday. On the Bangor division the rate is now $2.50 between Boston and Bangor, and on the International division only $3.50 between Boston and St. John, N. B. Sailings on the International, from Commercial Wharf, occur every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 5 p. m., and on the Bangor line every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday for Rockland, Bangor and Penobscot River points, from Foster's Wharf at 5 p. m.

Howell Hansel's Recital

The friends who have 'g dreamakers, Hansel's brilliant career as dramatist have forte, I wanted to see him at work and his. It began by gathering it spread numbers the debts him with a morning welcome whose up appears to be impolite for one to call it a typ matic reading of Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" next Wednesday evening, November 6, at Irving Tremont Temple. Those who have known his masterful portrayal of the wide range of characters he has given to the Boston public in the last four years will not doubt his ability to set before his audience the commanding group of people which Shakespeare has created and invested in "The Merchant of Venice."

Danderine

GREW MISS LEWIS' HAIR

AND WE CAN

PROVE IT

The Great Danderine Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results

MISS Lewis' hair was very thin and it was less than two feet in length when she began using Danderine. She says her hair and scalp are now fairly teeming with new life and vigor.

That's the main secret of the great remedy's success as a hair grower. It enlivens, invigorates and fairly electrifies the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, causing unusual and unheard-of activity on the part of these two most important organs, resulting in a strenuous and continuous growth of the hair.

January 3, 1905.

Dear Doctor Knowlton:—

You know I told you in my first letter that my hair would not reach much below my shoulders, and that all of it together only made one tiny braid.

I am sending you my photograph, which I had taken at Stevens Bros. It tells the whole story better than I can tell it.

Everybody I know uses Danderine, so you see I am doing something to show my appreciation.

Sincerely yours, (Miss) EVA LEWIS.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy the world has ever known. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1, per bottle

FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts We will send a large sample free by return mail to any one who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

NOVELTIES IN LONDON.

Ellis Jeffreys, in "The Sugar Bowl," a new play, divides honors with Lily Brayton in her unconventional costume as Rosalind.

LILY BRAYTON IN "AS YOU LIKE IT."

ELLIS JEFFREYS IN "THE SUGAR BOWL."

American actresses are usually accredited with being the first to adopt new ideas in the dressing of the characters they play, but Miss Lily Brayton, the English actress now playing Rosalind in Oscar Asche's production of "As You Like It," has set them a new pace.

In productions of this play in America, the Rosalind has usually played the boy's part right through in one dress, but Miss Brayton varies the conventional Rosalind costume with a shepherd boy's dress, as shown in the accompanying illustration.

It is by attention to details such as these that great actors show the mastery of the art. American audiences have become accustomed to seeing Rosalind, when disguised as Ganymede, come out arrayed in apparently new tights and pinned and tattered as though she were to participate in a fancy dress ball. The discarded boy's costume of Miss Brayton is certainly in perfect accord with the story as outlined by Shakespeare.

Much interest is manifested here in Boston over the latest play produced in London, called "The Sugar Bowl." It is by Madeline Lucette Ryley, and is being played at the Queen's Theatre, with Miss Ellis Jeffreys playing the part of the heroine, Gina Pemberton.

It is a slight but pleasant and entertaining story on conventional lines, and if the English public is to be accepted as judge, then everything else that follows is quite logical and natural. An examiner is asked to consent, for the period of a month, to pretend to be the admirer of Miss Pemberton, who has had plenty of suitors in society and is not yet paired. She suggests the plan in order that her acquaintance may believe that she has at last gained a lover and that the man she really loves may become jealous. Of course in the end the distinguished diplomat falls in love with her.

Miss Jeffreys is declared by the critics to act her part with charm, grace and feeling and to be very effective as in Frederick Kerr appears as the former ambassador.

BOSTON'S VAUDEVILLE FESTIVAL AT POPULAR PRICES

Tremont Theatre, Nov. 4—Big Birthday in Boston's Big Vaudeville Festival. The Event You Have Been Waiting for. Your Interest is Aroused.

Everything big but the prices. Inauguration day of the biggest, costliest, funniest, most artistic Vaudeville Entertainment ever presented in "This Man's Town." Old fossils would raise prices for such an enormous and expensive program, but we are going to reverse old methods and REDUCE OUR PRICES.

We are founding a popular institution here in Boston, and we know this cannot be accomplished unless we give the public a square deal. No shell-game or side-show fakes, no raising the prices on a Saturday or a holiday will be used at THE TREMONT THEATRE. The old Vaudeville fakirs have had their innings, and we are going to give the public its innings, and we are sure it will make a home run to the Tremont Theatre every afternoon and evening, where the big, enormous and most expensive program will be offered.

As Vaudeville Theatres are not obliged to make expensive productions, we are going to make it up to you by securing the greatest Vaudeville Artists of the world, no matter what the cost may be. We offer, beginning tomorrow afternoon, TEN STAR ACTS. Under the old system of kindergarten Vaudeville, given here for so many years, you would have gotten one of these acts each week, surrounded by cheap sketches, supper acts, old man "time-killer," and a few little things like that. It would not only take you ten weeks to witness the Star Program you are going to see tomorrow afternoon, but it would have cost you ten dollars besides. Under our system we are going to give TEN DOLLARS' WORTH OF VAUDEVILLE AT POPULAR PRICES.

BEST DRESSED MAN IN ENGLAND IS HETTY KING.

Famous Male Impersonator Comes to Tremont Theatre To-morrow.

Miss Hetty King, England's greatest male impersonator, will be seen here this week at the Tremont in advanced vaudeville. This is Miss King's first American tour. Her success is best proved by the fact that her original contract for four weeks in advanced vaudeville was extended [illegible] and she will remain here for [illegible] weeks. Miss King has a most interesting and varied gallery of characters which she presents in her act. It would be impossible for her to portray all of them in a single performance, for there are more than a score of them. Her most prominent type is the type of soldier in the British navy.

A striking contrast to this is her characterization of the Shadow of England's policeman. Here again she appears with every detail correct in uniform and dress, and she struts about, she is a veritable guardian of the peace to the minutest. Which one of her characters she plays a dozen times during the evening. "The Boy Scout Away," and with the policeman [illegible] "In My Best" are the most picturesque characters in the list of the British army officer in full dress uniform, and the sailor from every port in India and China shows what he would wear when going ashore. Miss King and meets all the pretty girls there she appears as the same officer and her sailor lads. Also a little Chinese sweet [illegible] Each one she fits to a song, and each one she wears with all of the ease and grace that would be possible in a female impersonator. Miss King has herself been dressed by Redfern, London's most famous modiste, and her clothes were made by Poole, who is the tailor of white, of gray and various other tones to the King of England.

WHY THE WIFE STOLE

From Henri Bernstein's Play, "The Thief," at the Lyceum Theatre, New York

MARIE, the wife (played by Miss Margaret Illington):

I didn't begin by doing wrong. At first I loyally tried to manage with our means. Sometimes I thought myself nicely dressed, but when I came to compare myself with the different women we met who spent a lot on their clothes I lost all joy and all confidence. How often I have watched you without your seeing! I have seen your eyes make comparisons—comparisons to which I suffered—and I realized that because of bad weapons I was fighting a losing battle.

RICHARD, the husband (played by Kyrle Bellew)—Absurd!

MARIE—Absurd, perhaps—but heavens, how real! How I have suffered! You shrug your shoulders, but you're a man, and won't understand. I suffered in silence for a while and remained straight. My first beautiful gown was the cause of all the harm. It was a low-necked gown—a marvel it was—do you remember it?

RICHARD—I remember nothing.

MARIE—In a wilful moment I had ordered it in the Rue de la Paix. I first wore it at a dinner at the Marmangs'—you were waiting for me in the small dining room, ready to start. I presented myself before you, my heart leaping in my breast. You said nothing—you looked at me—just looked at me in the glass, but you said nothing—only at dinner you remarked at one from time to time, a little sly, caressing smile—and I felt so proud, so buoyant, so happy! Things shone round me! We came home rather late; on the landing you took me in your arms and kissed me, and you murmured, "Little Marie, I'm proud of you!" I was lost. You don't understand me—a woman in love would understand me. All do you see, a compliment to a woman in love, a compliment! It is a beat which comes down, it makes your head swim, it is wine—one is intoxicated—I was lost. From that evening I would have nothing but the big dressmakers, nothing but the smartest frocks. Then, to be complete, I wanted beautiful things of lace and lace and ravishing hats. It became a mania, and it spread without ceasing—and the debts increased terribly! One morning in February Aline hunted me up; I told her my worries. She immediately proposed to get me out of my difficulties. She knew an underlice maker, a Madame Breton, who would take an interest on her own account, both the old and the new. Of course, I was to give promissory notes to this person and pay her interest—and what interest!—and both of them, Madame Breton and Aline, arranged to send me very reasonable bills as a blind!

The Love of Friends Is Worth Far More Than Cleverness

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am very unhappy because I am not clever. I seem to know so little and all my friends know so much. Sometimes I know they think me so ignorant. They all seem to like me, but I know no one cares for me as they do for each other. What would you advise me to do?

ESTHER Z.

JUST a "nice girl." Poor little Esther, don't you know that to be a really nice girl is to be just about the best thing that any one can be?

We can't all be clever, dear. Cleverness is a heaven-born gift, but we can all strive to be good and sweet and lovable.

The clever woman is not always the happiest nor the most popular woman. Men are a little bit afraid of her; they fear that her cleverness may have robbed her of her womanliness.

That, of course, is ridiculous, as many a clever woman is both charming and sweet, but men have a little way of preferring to manoeuvre the market of cleverness themselves.

To be charming a woman must be intelligent, but she can be that without being remarkably clever in any way.

Reading a Help

THE reading of good books will always broaden a mind, but all the reading in the world will not make you clever if you were not born so.

Very often we strive for some impossible quality, while all the time we have right at hand a [illegible] for its development.

Esther says that all her friends like her. Well, perhaps [illegible] without reason, and you [illegible] very lovable quality in her that has gained her friends' regards.

The very best thing that can come to any of us is the high respect of our fellow-beings.

Naturally every girl wants to be clever. She would like to feel that people respected her opinions and looked upon her as brilliant and successful.

But, dears, there is no use fretting for what cannot be. There is but one thing to be done, and that is make the most of such good qualities as you possess.

Womanliness and sympathy are two indispensable qualities to any girl's popularity.

The Lovable Woman

I KNOW a little woman who is neither pretty nor clever, but oh, she has a wonderful way with her. She makes you feel so good and so "comfy" and seems to bring out all that is best in you. Every one adores her. Her husband and children think her the most wonderful person on earth. She makes no attempt at being witty nor brilliant, she is just intensely lovable and sympathetic.

Some clever women give one such a humiliating consciousness of inferiority. Perhaps they do not mean to, but the feeling is there just the same.

My advice to Esther is to go on being a "nice" girl. People love her as she is and for what she is.

If she tries too hard to be clever, she may only succeed in marring her sweetness, and cleverness cannot be cultivated. Some of her clever friends will probably be kind enough to advise her as to a line of good reading which will help develop her mind.

But do not be blue, little Esther. Go on winning the love of your friends. Be natural and kindly. Try to think and speak well of all your friends.

Never speak ill of your own sex.

We have enough trials in life without having to fight unkindness among our own.

Walking to a man never try to appear clever. People love more than he does, nor quite as much.

Good listeners are scarce and pretty talkers are common. A good listener is invariably popular, especially if she listens in a sympathetic, appreciative manner.

You have nothing to be unhappy over, if lack of cleverness is your only woe, and you have a great deal to be happy over if you have the love of your friends.

SOCIETY WOMEN CARRY DOGS IN COAT SLEEVES

THE wearing of small dogs in the sleeves of their coats or jackets is the latest fad with which society women are associating themselves.

This novel decoration of fashionable garb came into vogue at the swagger United Hunts Steeplechase meeting, which has just been held over the new course adjoining Belmont Park.

Many well-known women appeared in their carriages with toy Pomeranians, toy spaniels or tiny black and tans shoved snugly in their sleeves. They are very easy to look after when one is driving, and when the reins are dropped modest women amuse themselves by petting the animals with the left arm, doing away with the necessity of reaching to the floor for their favorite little beasts.

An Editorial for Women

They Ought to Have a Deep Personal Interest in This Campaign

Organized wealth is striving to keep in power through both the old political parties in this State.

If your husband or your father or your son votes for Guild, he votes for a continuance of present conditions.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY PROMISES NO RELIEF from the Trust prices that are driving housewives almost to distraction.

If the men of your household vote for Whitney, they vote for a railroad monopoly which threatens to put Massachusetts forever in the grasp of one of the most soulless combinations of wealth this Trust-ridden country has ever known.

The disrupted Democratic party, which cannot settle its own party affairs without riot and factionfight, is in no position TO DEAL HONESTLY WITH ANY PROBLEM.

Every woman in New England ought to protest against prevailing high prices for every necessity of life.

You can do it forcefully and effectively by influencing the voters of your family to cast the Independence League ballot next Tuesday.

If Hagen and Brown are elected the way will be opened for a new order of things that will soon organized wealth to give you and your children your full share in the blessings to which you are entitled.

You can influence your husband or your brother or that other—and perhaps more important—young man.

Its cause to vote for your interest as he would vote for his own.

Counsel him to vote for decent government in this State as opposed to Trust control—as a protest against high prices and extortion, if for no other reason.

If he is one of the unthinking kind who is a Republican BECAUSE HIS FATHER WAS or if he is a Democrat just BECAUSE HE'S A DEMOCRAT, you can tell him to be an Independence Leaguer just BECAUSE YOUR FATHER WAS.

Above all, tell him to DO SOME THINKING before he votes next Tuesday.

About Petticoats For Winter Wear

By Marion Armstrong

WINTER petticoats should be of some material that can be laundered as well as Summer ones.

There are some materials which will stand this bedides cotton, gingham and percale, which are extremely serviceable for those who do not require anything dressier.

For very cold weather, a good moreen or silkoline is the best for ten or fifteen cents.

Galatea is also a splendid material of the heavier washable variety.

Ready made underskirts are very attractive, but these cannot compare with those made at home. In the first place, the ready made skirt is apt to be rather skimpy and the quality of goods not up to a few inches below the waist line.

One can always get a better remnant in a short length than in a long one, and as from five to six yards will be ample for an underskirt except in silk, there will be a greater reduction than on a dress length. For ten or twelve cents a yard may be bought a material that has sold as high as thirty cents a yard. With a dozen yards of cotton (one at three cents a yard, a very attractive petticoat can be made.

Patterns are of no purpose for the skirts, as they may be bought for ten or fifteen cents. However, if one has a good five or seven gored skirt pattern, it can be used to advantage.

If it is too full at the lower edge and allowing it to taper to nothing a few inches below the waist line.

What Dining-Room Article Is This?

ANSWER:

HEREWITH are printed the names of the seven prize winners who returned correct answers to last week's picture puzzle contest.

Fully 1,500 answers to last week's series of picture puzzles were received, and of that number [illegible] seven's five returned correct solutions. The prizes are given to those who first returned correct answers and who at the same time [illegible] the most valuable suggestions as to what features they would like to see added to the Boston Sunday American.

With the publication of today's puzzle picture the present series comes to an end. Next Sunday the names of those who have returned correct solutions and received the prizes will be announced.

Twenty dollars are to be awarded to those who send in correct answers along with the best suggestions.

Here are the correct answers to last week's puzzle: One, Hanger; 2, Pan; 3, Table; 4, Spider; 5, Sing; 6, Poker; 7, Stinson.

Cut out the picture each day, write your answer on the blank, and when you have answered all send the complete set to The Puzzle Editor, Boston American, No. 8 Summer street, Boston.

It is desired that contestants at the same time should send their suggestions as to what features they would like to see in the Boston Sunday American. Where the lists of answers are equally correct, the prize will be awarded to the writer sending the best suggestion for the Sunday paper.

"THE TURN OF THE BALANCE"

By Brant Whitlock

Copyright, 1907 by American-Journal Examiner

THEREFORE, he contended, Koerner was a trespasser, and a trespasser must suffer all the consequences of his trespass.

Then Ford began to use the phrase "contributory negligence." He said that Koerner had been negligent in coming in and upon said premises, and he, Ford, had not used due care in avoiding the ice and snow on and about said frog; that he had the same means of knowing that the ice was there that the railroad company had, and hence had assumed whatever risk there was in passing on and over said ice, and that these and therefore he had been guilty of contributory negligence that is, had contributed, by his own negligence to his own injury.

In fact, it seemed from Ford's argument that Koerner had really invited his injury and purposely had the switch-engine cut off his leg.

"There, in brief, if the Court please," said Ford, who had spoken for an hour, "is the proposition I wish to submit to your Honor." Ford paused, drew from his pocket a handkerchief, pressed it to his lips, passed it lightly over his forehead, and laid it on the table. Then he selected a new book from the pile and opened it at the page his clerk had marked with a wisp of paper. Sharlow, knowing what he had expected, stirred uneasily and glanced at the clock.

The Judicial Mind

During Ford's argument Sharlow had been thinking the matter over. He knew, of course, that the same combination of circumstances is never repeated, that there could be no other case in the world just like this, but that there were hundreds which resembled it, and that Ford and Marriott would research the law libraries to find these cases, explain them to him, differentiate them, and show how they reconciled or did not reconcile the case at bar.

And further, he knew that before he could decide the question Ford had raised he would have to go and think what the common law of England had been on the [illegible] and what the statute law [illegible] and then whether the statute [illegible] and if it was [illegible] contrary to the constitution of the United States or of the State.

This he would have to see what the decisions of the courts had been, and whether in one court had spoken, whether their decisions were in accord or conflict with each other.

Then, if he could have to find out what the courts of other States had said on the subject, which [illegible] the state courts [illegible] and if it was [illegible] and what the decisions of the United States courts had been.

He would have to decide a decision himself, and he did not want to decide one. He knew that some one would be overruling by him or by Ford or Marriott, and that he ought to be able to render the decision. In the years that would be consumed in the research and consideration of the matter and decision that he had not decided the question pressed upon him.

And even if the courts had decided this very case according to the simple rule of [illegible] and wrong which he would have [illegible] by looking into it on his own part, that would not be final. [illegible] he would have [illegible] according to what had been said by other [illegible] and [illegible] and he would not be [illegible] to be guided by such [illegible] a different opinion.

Considering all this Sharlow determined to postpone his decision as long as possible, and to feed Ford that he would not then listen to his [illegible] but would hear what Marriott had to say.

And then Marriott spoke at length, arguing that Ford had said, saying that the [illegible] frog must be the proximate cause of Bill. It been broken, Koerner could not have caught his foot in it and [illegible] got out of the way of the switch engine.

Furthermore, he declared that the yards had been used by the employes as a [illegible] for [illegible] a custom had been established; that the unblocked frog, [illegible] the station, was [illegible] for [illegible] on the part of the defendant [illegible] said that if Ford was to sub[illegible] as he would like an opportunity to submit other authorities equally [illegible] At this Sharlow bowed, and [illegible] adjourn court until 2 o'clock [illegible] to consider the question, recalled [illegible] and continued them not to talk about the case.

This caution was entirely worthless, because they talked of nothing else, either among themselves or with others; being [illegible] they had nothing else to talk about.

Koerner Nonplussed

Koerner had listened with amusement to Ford and Marriott, wondering how long they could talk about such incomprehensible matters.

He had tried to follow Ford's remarks and then had tried to follow Marriott's, and had derived nothing from either of them. Further suspicions of Marriott, who seemed to talk exactly as Ford talked and to use the same words and phrases.

He felt, too, that Marriott should have spoken in louder tones and more vehemently, and shown more antipathy to Ford.

And when they went out of the courthouse, he asked Marriott what it all meant. But Marriott, who could not himself tell us not what it meant, assured Koerner that an important legal question had been raised and that they must wait until it had been fully [illegible] and decided by the court. Koerner swung away on his crutches, saying to himself that it was all very strange the switch engine had cut off his leg [illegible] his will, no one could pay for that, and the only important question Koerner could see was how much the law would make the railroad company pay him for cutting off his leg.

It seemed silly to him that so much time should be wasted over such matters. But then, as Marriott had said, it was impossible for Koerner to understand legal questions.

By the time he opened court in the afternoon Sharlow had decided on a course of action, one that would give him time to think over the question further.

He announced that he would reserve the motion, but that counsel for defence might submit [illegible] the question of the sufficiency and, should a verdict [illegible] unfavorable to him, on the motion for a new trial.

Ford had exceptions, and began his defence, introducing several employes of the road, who proved [illegible] as [illegible] at the frog.

When this evidence was to. Ford moved [illegible] to take the case from the jury, but [illegible] another thought the [illegible] it [illegible] it necessary for his peace of [illegible] to hear [illegible] conclusion, overruled [illegible]

In Suspense

Then came the arguments, extending [illegible] the following days; then Sharlow must speak; he must charge the jury. The purpose of the charge was to [illegible] the law of the case before the jury, [illegible] for an hour he went on, talking of "proximate cause," of "contributory negligence," of "measure of damage," and at last, the jury having been confused sufficiently to [illegible] the requirements of the law, he told [illegible] they might retire.

[illegible] and the court was [illegible] [illegible] Koerner and his wife [illegible] side by side, and waited. It was [illegible] for them to go home, and they had no money with which to [illegible]

Taxing Fires and Windows

DOORS and windows and even fireplaces are taxed in Italy. As a result the people try to get along with as few of each as is possible.

Travellers in Italy see everywhere with doors and doors which are crudely bricked up. This is done to escape taxation. So in Italian cities the quaint [illegible] are filled up with stones and brick and remained so as to escape the tax, and they are never used throughout the year.

Timely Tips for Home Dressmakers

Mark Handkerchiefs

Handkerchiefs are marked in old English letters of a very small size. These tiny letters are often placed in the centre of a design, in the corner or scattered over embroidery. For sheer handkerchiefs use a very fine mercerized cotton.

Concerning Trains

Concerning Coats

Of the massing of coats there is no end. Long, short, medium, tight-fitting, with collars and without.

They are made with long sleeves and with short, single-breasted and double-breasted.

When the season has advanced the separate coat will be seen in some one of the many remarkable imitations of fur which unfortunately to [illegible] and modifiers are preparing for women.

Broadcloth, with or without fur lining, is to enjoy another season of coat utility, and [illegible] to give [illegible] the most popular color for average wear, with white and pastel tints for carriage use.

Front of Waist

Petticoat Prettiness

In plaids the brilliant Scotch colors will obtain.

Stripes will be more of the nature of Pekin stripes.

Many of the new flounce's construction is to be revived and will be shown in fancy effects and color combinations.

Overall Aprons for Bride

THE most serviceable piece in one trousseau were the overall aprons given the bride by her girl friends at a linen shower. They are of prettily colored linen embroidered in white, and are made to cover the dress completely from neck to hem. They are semi-fitting princess affairs, with wide kimono sleeves. Some of them have a pocket on the left side.

Helpers for Housewives

In October and early November wrap up green and partly ripened tomatoes and lay them in a newspaper sheet in a cool place. As fast as they ripen use them, they will last until the middle of December. They ripen thoroughly when wrapped as directed. Wrap each one separately in newspaper and tie with string.

If you lay a silk velvet away without taking out the shields, the rubber will cause the silk to crack in a short time. Frequently good waists can be ruined in this way.

Put matches in your kitchen matchsafe upside down. In this way they can be got with wet fingers, as is often necessary, the [illegible] ness and [illegible] drying with a match. There is no constantly using matches that this is really a great help.

SERIES OF BRILLIANT FETES IN SOCIAL CAMPAIGN BEFORE ADVENT OF SEASON OF LENT

Brides Give Way to Blushing Buds, Though Cupid Will Be Busy in November.

By a Society Woman.

FROM now up to the season of "sackcloth and ashes" the social swirl will know no respite. The Autumn calm preceding the events to be has ceased to refresh the denizens of the Life Fashionable, who must smile and bow their way through the crowded series of events on the most brilliant social program ever evolved in the Hub.

A certain dearth of bridal affairs in other prominent times of [illegible] marks the early weeks of the season, succeeding the efforts of the elect are still [illegible] and the [illegible] and their round of folly engenders [illegible] delightful abodes the past week.

Among Brides of November.

Brides are gradually giving way to debutantes who are blushing themselves into the sunlight of social favor and into the glory of society belles. A few be-dos remain for November, however, and quite the most important among them is Miss Constance Amory, elder daughter of Mrs. George W. Amory and [illegible] daughter of the late Judge George Tyler Bigelow, whose wedding to [illegible] Phillip Wadsworth takes place next Tuesday at the Church of the Advent, in Louisburg square. It will be a small affair, after the fashion of the day, and will be witnessed by only the families and more intimate friends.

The ceremony will take place at noon, and will be followed by a reception and breakfast at the Amory residence on Beacon street. The bride, who is tall and [illegible] will no doubt be [illegible] in her gown of white satin and lace and her [illegible] veil. She will be given in marriage by her mother, and will have no attendants. Enos Wadsworth will be his brother's best man.

Miss Amory is a member of the Concert Club and was for some time looked upon as the leading debutante among the club's contestants. She is a sister of Miss Edith Amory, who is as blonde as Tuesday's bride is dark. Mrs. Augustus Parker (Carolin Dabney) is a cousin and Mrs. Philip Ely is an aunt.

Mr. Wadsworth is a son of Dr. and Mrs. Oliver F. Wadsworth of Beacon street, a Harvard, 1900, graduate and a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club. After a short wedding trip the young people will reside in Milton, where a handsome home is being made ready for them.

Appleton-Tappan Wedding Ceremony.

The day following the Amory-Wadsworth wedding, General Francis H. Appleton of Marlboro street will wed Miss Mary Spencer Tappan, daughter of the late J. Nelson Tappan, in Trinity church, West Twenty-fifth street, New York. Only the members of the immediate families of the bride and groom have been invited to attend. The Rev. William H. Vibbert, rector of the church, will officiate. There will be no attendants for either bride or groom.

Daughter of Late General Hyde Weds in January

Miss Eleanor Hyde, whose engagement to Dr. John C. Phillips, of Boylston street, was announced [illegible] ago, has chosen January as her bridal month, [illegible] the wedding [illegible] both bride and groom it is expected [illegible] the wedding [illegible] all others of the season.

TRUST RUSHING FOOD PRICES HIGHER; PUBLIC ASKS, "WHERE WILL IT END?"

Arrogant Combine, Emboldened at Past Successes, Seeks to Beat Down Prices Paid Ranchmen While Increasing Cost to Consumers—Story of "Cut" Trick of Trust to Lull Public Indignation.

DESPITE the rumor that meat was going down, the prices are at record height, and are to be increased. The cost of other articles of food will also be raised.

The inflated prices of food products that have prevailed for a long time are only a forerunner of what is coming, according to Boston wholesalers and retailers.

While the price of meat to the consumer is going up, the Beef Trust is trying to decrease the price paid the ranchman.

The continuing inflation of the cost of food to the man who eats it and the repeated attempts to decrease the price paid the men who produce the goods are adding millions to the profits of the trust middlemen. While they are increasing their wealth with giant strides both the consumer and the producer are being driven to poverty.

A few days ago Boston was elated by a dispatch from Omaha, quoting the Cudahy concern, one of the "big five" constituents of the Beef Trust, as saying that meats were to drop at last. This elation changed to chagrin when the householders discovered almost immediately that they would have to pay actually more for their supplies.

Thus the expression, a "Cudahy drop," may be destined to become as significant and as lasting as a "Hobson's choice."

To-day's Prices 100 Per Cent. Higher Than 10 Years Ago.

Rump steak, per pound	30c to 35c
Top round	28c to 35c
Prime roast beef	30c to 35c
Pork chops	18c to 20c
Port roast	20c
Ham	28c
Ham (whole) per pound	18c
Lamb chops	30c to 40c
Lamb leg	25c to 28c
Mutton leg	15c to 18c
Roast veal	20c to 25c

These prices are from 25 to 100 per cent. higher than the quotations ten years ago. The assurance from local marketmen that the end is not yet strikes a chord of terror in the heart of every family man.

The retailer says that he makes less profit with every rise—in fact, that he frequently loses when these rises occur. When the packers put up prices they can maintain them because they are in combination and there is no competition. Not so the retailer. One cannot increase his price unless the same intention becomes general by a sort of intuitive process.

Retailers Lost Money.

Therefore, the retail increases do not follow the wholesale increases immediately. Further, the retailer loses more on the waste product in the retail handling, because he has to use more for the waste without any corresponding means of disposing of it at higher prices.

Then he loses again on the decreased consumption. The buyer does not buy so much nor purchase the fancy cuts, wherein lie the most profit. The buyer, too, is complaining all the time, and insists on getting the best he possibly can when he does buy. That means another blow to the profits.

Many families now have meat only two or three times a week, and that of inferior grade. Physicians see in this a deterioration of the American race because the race has always thrived on its so-called middle classes, the ones who now suffer lack of proper nourishment to do the big tasks they used to do and who may be expected to communicate their condition to their descendants.

"Mere Trick of Beef Trust."

"It looks very much as if the packers were attempting to make us sell at a loss," said a prominent marketman to a Boston Sunday American reporter yesterday, commenting on the Cudahy rumor of early in the week. "They are mistaken, though, if they think they can induce us to cut our prices just because they announce that a reduction is coming. We are paying the packers a higher price for their beef than we have ever paid before. Naturally we have raised our selling prices. We can't afford to give away our goods.

"The packers know that the public blames them for the high prices. They realize, too, that public sentiment may force a government investigation that will be their end, and they are hoping to stay the feeling against them by announcing a 'cut.' Incidentally they are going to use this 'cut' announcement as a club over the heads of the Western ranchmen.

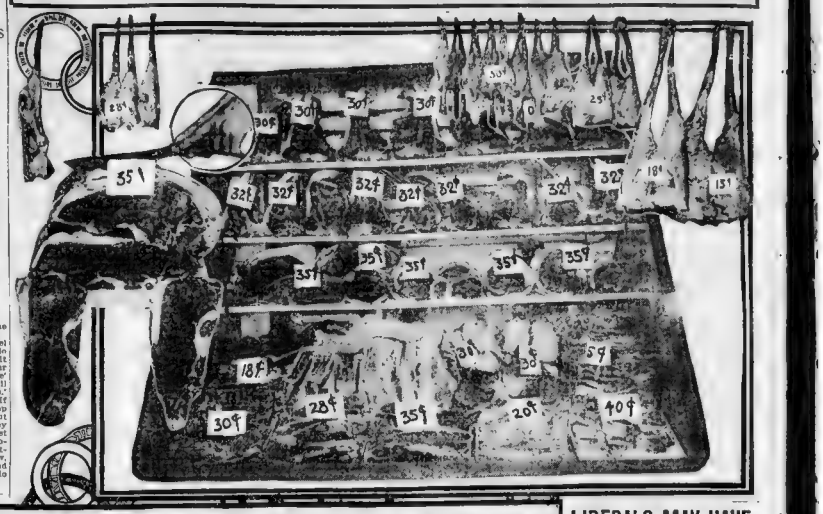
"Cattlemen are now getting starvation prices for beef on the hoof. The packers are trying to cut the cattlemen's prices even more. If they can get the ranchmen to sign a lower schedule of prices, then it's 'good-day' to the ranchmen's chances of making a living. They may be able to blindfold them under the pretence that they (the packers) are now selling at a loss, but I doubt it.

Higher Prices to Come.

"We noticed that the other four concerns who go to make up the Beef Trust didn't issue any announcement of a reduction. The only inference we can draw is that they know that public sentiment couldn't be stifled that way. Any purchaser knows that if the prices are high in the Fall when the grass-fed cattle are slaughtered they will remain high and probably go higher during the Winter. In the Spring the corn-fed stock is put on the market. The price for that is higher than for the grass-fed.

"You can see from this that the wave of high prices has only just begun. It will be a year at least before the prices can be reduced to a rise in meat prices during the last years. They went up gradually at this Summer, and then they were boosted with a vengeance. Read it out and you'll see that the packers have been playing a daring game and, emboldened by their success, are working the 'get-rich-quick' scheme to the limit.

"The wholesalers and retailers feel the increased cost just as keenly as do the consumers. We have cut our profit margins as much as we could. Our years of dealing with the 'big five' have taught us this: 'Don't cut retail prices on promises from the packers.' Another thing we have learned is, 'If you don't agree with the packers, keep it to yourself.' They can put us out of business and we know it. If they knew that we even talked against them they would blow our little establishments up in the air by discriminating against us. It's against the law, of course, but they have done it, and what they have done they can do again."



County Galway Club Plans Monument to Noted Priest at His Old Home

The County Galway Social Club, of, which Martin J. O'Brien is president, will hold a meeting this evening in Investigator Hall to map out a plan of action relative to the erection of a monument to the late Rev. Thomas Burke, O. P., in the city of Galway, Ireland. The club has appointed Martin J. O'Brien, Vice-President John J. O'Hara, the latter a well known Beacon street lawyer; Recording Secretary John Maher, Financial Secretary Bartholomew J. Faher, Treasurer Patrick T. Walton, Patrick Barsfield Cunniff, who is an enthusiastic worker for the cause of Irish nationality, and Patrick A. Murray, the millionaire ex-builder, a committee to make the necessary arrangements.

The club will make arrangements for its annual reunion of all former County Galway people in Intercolonial Hall, Dudley street, Roxbury, next Wednesday evening, December 11. On that occasion there will be two balls for the accommodation of the participants. One will be devoted to Irish jigs. Messrs. Hedon of Galway, Bowen of Cork and Murphy of Kerry, assisted by Irish fiddlers and flute players, will furnish music for Irish jigs, reels and hornpipe dancing. In addition there will be a concert of vocal and instrumental music lasting all the evening for the especial benefit of the older folks. Many ancient Irish songs will be sung last night. The Gaelic language will be used as much as possible by the various artists.

To Promote Irish Industry.

The club, with all other Irish county clubs, is very much interested in the decision of the latest, a month which has officially voted in favor of the establishment of a corporation for the importation of Irish manufactured goods to be placed on the American market.

This suggestion, according to Martin J. O'Brien, who is county president of the United Irish County Clubs, is a purely county organization. It originated in the County Clubs' Central Council, and its action in no voting was purely unselfish.

To quote verbatim from Mr. O'Brien said:

"The Central Council of United Irish County Clubs is not affiliated with any other Irish organization, either politically or otherwise. Its industrial committee does not represent the Sinn Fein Society. A majority of the members of the Irish county clubs are affiliated with other Irish organizations. Many of them are members of their own as to the best policy to pursue in Irish affairs. They are not asked the privilege of exercising their rights as Irishmen. The members of the United Irish County Clubs have made success of the work undertaken by them because they have stuck to the motto of 'Mind Your Own Business.'

LIBERALS MAY HAVE MAJORITY IN DUMA

St. Petersburg, Nov. 2.—With the elections for the third Duma practically at an end the indications are that, notwithstanding the former reports, the Constitutional Democrats will have a working majority in the new House, as the Octobrists, or Moderates, and the members of the right are shifting further and further [illegible] it is unlikely that they will [illegible] united front in the coming Duma.

HEROINE OF HUB TRAGEDY HELD FOR CHICAGO CONSPIRACY

RECALLS STAFFORD CASE

ELOPED WITH EMPLOYER

BITTERLY denouncing Miss Etta McLean, the Boston stenographer arrested with Alexander Gordee, a former Chelsea insurance man, on charges of conspiracy and theft of Government papers, Mrs. Gordee, at her home, No. 112 Waverly avenue, Revere, last night declared that she would spend her last dollar to free her husband if Miss McLean could be convicted.

"It is not true, as that woman says, that my husband eloped with her," Mrs. Gordee said to a Sunday American reporter. "She has followed him from place to place. I pleaded with her to let him alone, not to try to keep him from his family. Yet she kept after him, and when Mr Gordee went to Chicago she followed him there.

"I am worth several thousand dollars. I will spend it all to convict this McLean woman and to free my husband. It was her fault that this has happened. I do not believe here story about this affair, because I know it was not true that my husband eloped with her.

"My husband was here two weeks ago and said that he was going to take the children and me to Chicago at Christmas-time. He sent me money every two or three weeks and was a devoted husband in every way. I will stand by him to the end."

The Gordees have five children.

Miss McLean is charged with stealing a number of government papers referring to cases in which Attorney-General Bonaparte was most interested. She has had crowded into her young life more tragedy, love and romance than usually falls to that of the average young woman.

Miss McLean was formerly the wife of Hartwell Stafford. On April 27, 1907, Stafford walked into the office of the Illuminating Company and shot Billman M. Bishop, seriously wounding him. Miss McLean had shown Stafford, her fiance, a letter which she claimed Bishop had written.

Weeks, Then Goes to Jail.

Stafford, released on bail, turned to Miss McLean. She received him with open arms and they were married at St. Paul's rectory in Brooklyn on May 10, 1903.

Stafford was sentenced to three years in the House of Correction for shooting Bishop. He was pardoned by Governor Douglas after serving less than two years, because of ill health. He went to New York, his wife sued for divorce, was granted a decree with the right to resume her maiden name.

Then she met Gordee. She worked for him in Boston for a time and when he went to Chicago she followed him.

Miss McLean, who is only 26 years of age, is a handsome brunette, well educated and of excellent family. Her father, James A. McLean of Oakhills street, Jamaica Plain.

Such, in brief is the history of the girl who faces a serious charge in the Western city.

Copied Papers in Big Suite.

Dispatches from Chicago say that Miss McLean went to work in the office of United States District Attorney Sims, the man who has prosecuted the Standard Oil cases and other large government suits, last April. She was most proficient as a stenographer and this, she said, enabled her to do what she did.

THOUSANDS CHEER HISSEN AND MORAN

as it evidenced by plentiful applause, but it was anxious to get down to business. From here and there about the house, even this early, loud remarks [illegible]

Of course [illegible] representatives present from the ranks of the [illegible] Democracy, but [illegible] Walter Hissen. When [illegible] these gentlemen were declared to be ardent supporters of the Independent campaign they knew [illegible] the evening, but this early they were plainly annoyed by the all-prevailing Moran sentiment.

As a matter of fact, the meeting savored quite as much of the Moran as of the Hissen cause. Boston is quite apparently not very anxious to get to the polls on Tuesday and take one grand wallop at Mr. Fitzgerald's Coal Dust Twins.

Like all the speakers who followed him, Chairman Osgood was briefly and to the point. His introductories were models of brevity. Opening the rally he said a word or two [illegible] Independent League and [illegible]

The first [illegible] good came when he [illegible]

"The fusion [illegible] of our enemies [illegible] Democrats, Republicans and Lincoln Republicans, are now about to be applied to modern conditions by and through the Independence League."

E. GERRY BROWN CHEERED.

The welcome accorded in turn to Mr. Hissen, E. Gerry Brown, the League's candidate for Governor, Governor [illegible] Moran, [illegible] Chairman of the Executive [illegible] of the League's State Committee, and Wendell Phillips Dodge, Boston's blind orator, was enthusiastic in the extreme.

The band played [illegible] in a way, was the occasion of [illegible] Mr. Hissen had to read or ask [illegible] Mr. Hissen [illegible] eloquent [illegible] of the campaign. It had been read [illegible] before on the polls [illegible] received him—and how it was moved by him—is deserving [illegible] applause.

Before Mr. Hissen was introduced, but not before the crowd had [illegible] him, Chairman Osgood [illegible] sendaly a personal [illegible] congressional [illegible] and [illegible] day by the League [illegible] the time from the Hon. W. [illegible] Randolph Hearst. The Hearst letter [illegible] was responded [illegible] Mr. Osgood read it at Mr Hissen's request.

REMARKABLE DEMONSTRATION.

Even at the close this rally broke every record of the year. Those in the front seats pushed forward to the stage. They wanted to "shake hands with Hissen."

Mr. Hissen responded over to them. But the Tremont Temple platform is high, and he had to step down on to one of the reporters' tables. That was what the crowd wanted. They climbed forward. They came down from the first balcony. They rushed down from the second upper gallery.

Admirers of E. Gerry Brown yelled for the candidate for Lieutenant Governor to join in, and Brown, too, climbed on one of the tables.

This reception or ovation was going on a full half hour after Mr. Hissen had closed his speech. A speech, by the way, which ended with not a dry eye in the whole assemblage.

It was a rally that surpassed every expectation, that established new records in enthusiasm and attendance, and that calls for every superlative in the box.

And in the meantime nine people showed up at a Donnybrook rally in Elkton, which to a Donnison rally in Ward 11, forty three answered "Brother George" Fitzgerald's call in Ward 10, and 400—four hundred were attracted by Hon. Mayor Donald-Whitney-Donnison bill at the Dudley Street Opera House.

At least 3,000 cheered Hissen and Moran in Tremont Temple.

And it raised!

HISSEN'S SPEECH AT TREMONT TEMPLE

WHEN introduced it was a full two minutes before Mr. Hissen could be heard. For all the cheering and handclapping, indeed, you could hardly hear Maestro Benavente and his musicians, though they actually played "Hail to the Chief."

Mr. Hissen stood smiling, and bowing and bowing again. When he could be heard he said:

"I deeply appreciate this great and cordial welcome you have extended to me to-night, and I want to thank our able chairman and the gentlemen who have preceded me for their kind and encouraging remarks.

"Sometimes the introductions and receptions remind me of an old saying: Be it true, or false, what is SAID about men often has as much influence on their lives and destinies as what they DO.'

"And this leads me to say, as I should say, that I am never unmindful of the great honor and responsibility conferred upon me when I was made the standard bearer in this campaign of the only party that stands to-day for the greatest good of the greatest number, the Independence League. (Applause.)

"Our platform has been placed before you. Every one of its few planks states just what we intend to do for the mass of the people.

"Victory Will Crown Our Efforts"

"And let me impress upon you this fact, that if you do your duty here in the East as we shall do it in the West, just as sure as we are alive to-night victory will crown our efforts.

"A battle royal is on.

"The fight which disgraced the Democratic State 'convention,' I have no doubt, is still fresh in your minds.

"The rank and file of the good old Democratic party, mis-led by a lot of selfish and unscrupulous politicians, has fallen by the wayside, like that traveler of Holy Writ who went down from Jerusalem to Jericho.

"Ladies and Gentlemen, what the Good Samaritan did for that unhappy traveler of the Scriptures, the Independence League stands ready to do for the great, big, preponderant, decent element of the Democracy, thoroughly disgusted with those so-called leaders who have disgraced and humiliated their party.

"Indeed, I may say in all truth that I am at a loss to know what choice the old line Republicans, as well as the old line Democrats, can make this year between Guild and Whitney.

"I should say that the position of such a man might well be likened to that of the gentleman in the story who was about to drink a glass of water and found that it contained 1,001 large insects

"'Boil it!' said his friend, the sceptic!

"'Why?' asked our friend with the drinking glass, 'mightn't I just as well swallow a menagerie as a graveyard?'" (Long continued laughter and applause)

"My friends, I think I voice the sentiment of every liberty-loving man within the reach of my voice, and I know that he will join with me when I offer up thanks for the opportunity that we have in the Independence League to vote the Democracy of Jefferson and the Republicanism of Lincoln. (Applause)

Praises Founder of Independence League.

"And while we vote that ticket, let us not forget that able and brilliant young man who has contributed so much to that end, so much of his wealth and so much of the influence of his great chain of newspapers, reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the effort to uplift the common people.

"I am proud to name that man, William Randolph Hearst. (Prolonged applause)

"I shall not touch upon our platform, which is so brief and so direct that you probably have it in mind. You know that it voices the aspirations of the man who labors with his hands.

"To the wage earner, however, I want to say: I am in perfect sympathy with your efforts to better your condition. (Applause). I am also heartily in favor of trial by jury in contempt cases arising from differences between employer and employe.

"I believe that in this direction the power of the courts should be modified and limited by law in such a manner as is recommended by the American Federation of Labor.

"You are interested in shorter hours and in more pay. The nation should be interested with you.

Urges Shorter Hours for Labor.

"For I believe that every employer of men, with a heart in him instead of a stone, knows that the more he pays and the better he uses his man the better the work that he gets out of them. (Applause). Good wages means plenty of money to spend for rent and for groceries and in other directions.

"I speak from experience. I have not forgotten and I cannot forget, that twenty or twenty-five years ago I was a clothing salesman, going to work at 7 o'clock in the morning and working until 9 and 10 and 11 o'clock at night.

"Thanks to organization, thanks to the union, the position of the wage earner has greatly improved since that time.

"And yet in other respects there has been no such general improvement. The Trusts are reaching out, getting a stronger rip now on this commodity and then on that necessity, sendin prices skyward and with no proportionate increase in wages.

"It is time to turn on the light, I say, time for a new Declaration of Independence. (Great applause).

"I want to speak now of one issue, which, in my opinion, should interest every man, every woman and every child in this great city.

"I have in mind the Railroad Merger.

"I am opposed with all the power that I have to the consolidation of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Maine Railroads.

Standard Oil Grip on New England.

"Already two-thirds of the entire railroad systems of the United States are either owned or controlled by the Standard Oil people and their allied interests. Not satisfied with their great monopoly, these interests now reach out the fierce claws of avarice for the throat of the last Independent railroad in New England.

"But that don't interest me,' perhaps you say.

"But it does.

"Just so sure as they put this merger proposition through—and they'll put it through if you re-elect Guild or elect Whitney—you will pay more for your commodities than you pay now.

"Bear with me a minute while I quote figures. The Boston & Maine Railroad is capitalized for $50,000,000.

"The New Haven is capitalized at $224,000,000, and these latter figures are recent.

"I was down in Connecticut the other day, by the way, and I dropped in to visit a school down there. The class was standing and the teacher wanted to know:

"'What is the capital of Connecticut?'

"'Quick as a flash, one bright little fellow said:

"'The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.'

"'And who owns the capital?' asked teacher

"'Why, said the lad,' the Standard Oil Company!'

"'And now they want our Boston & Maine! Well, I can imagine what for. Down in Connecticut, where they own everything, they tell me that every time two or three of the New Haven directors get together in a private room they are likely as not to take the machine and grind out 400,000 or 500,000 shares of new stock, without adding so much as a red cent to the equipment of the road

"'You mean to do that here, ladies and gentlemen ,yet

What will Happen if Merger Comes.

"But if they do, and I'll come back to figures for only a moment, they'll jump that Boston & Maine capitalization up to the same $224,000,000, and they'll make you pay for it.

"Why, my friends of Boston, haven't you got a concrete lesson right before your very eyes to-day. You must have read the evening papers. Aren't the Morse steamships being taken off from their runs between Boston and New York. You all know it. You all know that the New Haven is again in supreme command by water as by rail, and that in a day or two competition by steamers between Boston and New York will be but a dream forgot.

"There's an old-fashioned saying that 'you can always tell a man by the company he keeps.'

"President Mellen of the New Haven, I see, has taken considerable pains to write to friends in this State advising them to vote for Guild.

"Mr. Mellen is a very busy man, ladies and gentlemen, and in my opinion he wouldn't take the time and go to the trouble of writing such a letter unless he had an object in it.

"My own political affiliations,' he wrote the other day to a Mr. Walker of Marlboro, 'have always been with the Republican party and are at the present time and, notwithstanding my pleasant relations with Mr. Whitney'—he isn't taking any chances, you see (laughter)—'were I a voter in Massachusetts, I would support the candidate of my party.'

Why Mellen Is Out to Urge Support for Guild

"Now, ladies and gentlemen, I submit that the reason that Mellen is for Guild is not because Guild is handsome (laughter) and not because the Governor can talk in three or four languages, but because Guild has the power to slam a merger bill

"And that reminds me of the story of the man and the boy who were fishing on a log, when the boy tumbled into the water.

"The man, looking around, saw that the youngster was already bobbing up for the first or second time, and the man jumped in after him, rescued him and brought him back to safety on the log.

"Another man passing along on the other side saw the rescue.

"'Look here,' he said to the fisherman, 'I saw your heroic act and I could not pass along without praising you for saving the life of this little boy. It was a noble deed'

"'What's the matter with you?' said the fisherman, 'the boy had all the bait in his pocket.'

"Ladies and Gentlemen, Curtis Guild has the bait! (Laughter and great applause)

"No, but you folks of Boston here cannot get away from this Merger question. You can't do it. Up in Springfield the New Haven gave us a rate of 23 cents to New York. The Boston & Maine came after the business, there was some sharp competition, and the Boston & Maine establishes a similar rate.

"Do you know how they've been doing it? Well, it was a part of Boston's commerce. The B. & M. sent the freight over the road to Boston and shipped it hence to New York.

Merger Will Shut Off Our Traffic

"The merger will shut off this traffic, just as the change in the Boston & Albany some years ago diverted other traffic to New York.

"So, Boston voters, you cannot get away from this issue; nor, in my mind, do you want to.

"I believe that in this election party lines are going to be wiped out, are going to fade away. And the Independence League is the only party that stands opposed to this merger. (Great applause).

"Well, there is Mr. Whitney (laughter and some hissing). Mr. Whitney, I say, has no more right to pose as a Democrat than Henry Cabot Lodge (laughter and applause). He goes up and down the State, and what is he talking about? Well, half the people don't know. (Laughter).

"If you pick up the papers and follow him, you'll find it's the same thing from beginning to end, the same chapter, the same text, the same old song, 'Reciprocity and Tariff Reform.' (Laughter). Something that we can't get (laughter) and the ordinary man don't know what it's like.

"It reminds me of a 'Woman's Rights' meeting that I attended some time ago.

"'We have an issue to consider to-day,' the lady chairman was saying as I came in, 'a real issue, and we have got to discuss it. It's the tariff issue. I don't know what the tariff is, really, but I know we want it changed.' (Great laughter and applause).

Women Real Power Behind the Throne.

"And now I want to say just a word or two to the ladies, and I am delighted to have them with us here to-night in such numbers. Because, brothers, when we come right down to business—you and I—we've got to admit that they are the real power behind the throne.

"They know—the women know—what the real issue is this year. They know —because they don't get bargains in necessities any more.

"There are very few of us, I imagine, who cannot recall the Saturday night scene of other days, when father came home and placed his envelope on the kitchen table and after a while there was mother with the household account book. She had kept track of every cent—God bless her!

"Sometime the scene was pathetic. The children had to be kept looking well, and there was always something to be saved.

"What do we find to-day?

"A few years ago we were able to lay aside a few dollars every week

"To-day we slide and we scrape. No more luxuries in the wage earner's home. Then, we could have cream; now we're lucky if we can have meat boiled We are lucky if we make both ends meet.

"High Prices Due to Railroad Trusts."

"And now what's the reason for all this?

"I say you can trace it all right to the railroads. It's identically the same thing as your milk trouble here to-day

"The farmer can get no just what they like with us—and aren't they doing it? because they get better rates than the individual shipper can get or the small producer or the little chap who is trying to do business on his own hook

"Let the little fellow try it, and he'll run against just such discrimination as has been revealed in the milk case, where they ship for 13½ cents while the farmer—the milk producer—has to pay seven or eight cents.

"And let me say before I close that if I am elected Governor of Massachusetts I'll clean out every commission that is tied hand and foot to the monopolies. (Great and prolonged applause)

"And then there's the Telephone Trust. (Laughter). That we have always with us. Perhaps you recall the hearings before that commission. Why, we're ruled by commissions.

"After a few hearings, the petitioners withdrew their case.

"And as I followed the proceedings, I couldn't quite make up my mind who was up for investigation, the Commission or the Telephone Company! (Laughter and applause)

Use the Ballot and Curb the Trust Evil.

"Now, the only way to remedy these things is by the ballot, the Telephone Trust, the Beef Trust, the Standard Oil and all the rest of them.

"The Standard Oil interests are lined up here with the Republican party. A few of them may have thrown a few bouquets to Mr. Whitney, but they don't think he has the shadow of a chance—and I think so myself

"On the one side, then, you have the Independence league, which stands for what you stand for and what I stand for. On the other side you have—the Trusts.

"Ladies and gentlemen, whether I get one thousand votes next Tuesday or 250,000 votes, every vote registered for me will be an honest vote. (Cheers and prolonged applause)

"My time has expired, but I must say one word about the enormous sums that are now spent in elections. What kind of a campaign can the ordinary man make to-day? He cannot even aspire to great office. Haven't you heard Whitney and Guild throwing these little paper balls at one another?

"You spent more than I have spent!"

"'No, sir, you've spent more than I.'"

Here Mr. Hissen told of being approached in his office early in the campaign by a man who was "going on the stump" for him, but who boldly hinted that it takes money to make the mare go.

Mr. Hissen referred him to "Henry M. Whitney of the Standard Oil Company."

"And in less than two weeks," said Mr. Hissen impressively, "I saw that man riding in Whitney's automobile."

Hissen's story of how he told his caller that he was "in the wrong pew" brought down the house.

"I have been a Democrat all my life," he said in conclusion, "I have seldom felt the thrill of victory But what do you think of the old party to-day, with the money leg in control?

"Remember, don't ask how we voted the same old ticket, year after year, win or lose? Now, we're the remnant of that old Democracy, put up at auction by the professional politicians and sold—sold to the highest bidder

"Let us refuse to prefer any whitnore to the honest, seasoned, self-sacrificing rank and file of the old party. It is with us in this fight

"It is with us here to-day.

"Let us roll up such a majority for the Independence League ticket next Tuesday as will make every one of these professional politicians hunt his hole."

"LEADERS' SELFISHNESS MADE ME QUIT DEMOCRACY FOR LEAGUE," M'FARLAND

Granville S MacFarland, who resigned the chairmanship of the Democratic State committee to enter the Independence League ranks as follows:

"I gather from your cheering and the eager uplifting of faces at the mention of Mr Morse's name that some of you thought that Mr. Moran was going to speak.

"It was just a year ago that I stood upon this platform. It was at the Democratic State Convention and we nominated for Governor a man who came so near being elected that Curtis Guild closed the republican party didn't know whether it had won or lost. We nominated for Governor a man whom we are going to elect as Independent Governor on Tuesday.

"As I recall that convention, I can't help thinking of the great contrast between the Democratic party then and now. Did Lucifer fall farther in the spiritual world than the Democratic party has fallen in our politics in a short year?

"Until recently I was an officer of standing in the Democratic organization. I contributed my mite to the party. I did all I could to save it from nominating one of the conspirators to a scheme to fasten on the throat of New England the railroad monopoly. When I saw that the [illegible] selfish to grow with the [illegible] candidate of this great [illegible] party, and was nominated for [illegible] Governor, I thought it was time to quit and I joined the Independence League, not for the [illegible] but what the people would justify my action in.

"The Independence League has not changed. Last year, in its maiden year, it received 31,000 votes. This year it will receive twice that number.

"This year we have promoted Mr. Hissen from State Auditor to Governor Mr. Brown remains exactly where both parties Democrat him last year and where he received the largest majority ever given a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

"I feel greatly honored at being called to speak in Tremont Temple. I am not used to speak in his behalf. If he were able to speak here, I doubt if there could be found anywhere any man who would dare to take the responsibility of any party as his opponent. Voiceless, through advocating a sound Democracy last year, he is compelled to carry on his campaign through the newspapers.

"When the polls close, I think that it will have been proved that the people know how to vote. Though Mr. Hissen and they did not need to hear him prefix the slanders of those who have been his friends, he trayed his confidence."

ANSON B. EDGERLY TELLS WHY HE LEFT REPUBLICAN PARTY

Anson B Edgerly, Independence League candidate for the Senate in the aristocratic South Bay district, was next introduced. "Why I Left the Republican Party," he made a hit. He had the big audience laughing with every word of his.

"I am asked to tell you," he began, "why I left the Republican party, and I could do that in the time that is allotted to me. I could express it in a way to leave a camel through the eye of a needle.

"I left the party the day I saw that a man had paid $25,000 to get the Ballot Law Commission to give him a nomination that was less actual death than that of a little paller oy. (Laughter.)

"It's becoming almost as hard for the poor man to succeed in politics as it is for the rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven.

"But sometimes both get through.

"I think it is likely to happen this Fall, because, through the beneficence of the new party, I, the poorest man in the State, expect to represent the richest district, the Back Bay, in the State Senate.

"Most of my constituents-to-be are still at Lenox or Tuxedo, or Tuck-the-Dough.

Pe-ru-na as a November Remedy.

The month of November, in temperate regions especially, requires of the human body a very radical adjustment to climatic conditions. The hot weather has passed, and cold weather has taken its place. That the CIRCULATION OF THE BLOOD IN THE SKIN SHOULD BE FREE and active is a matter of common knowledge. And in order that the body may be protected against the lowering temperature a vigorous circulation of blood in the skin must be maintained.

It is not so generally known, however, that the inside of the body also needs protection. THE MUCOUS MEMBRANES OF THE BODY, that line every passage and cavity and duct, also suffer from the change from hot to cold weather.

A medicinal compound that gently tones up these mucous membranes, enabling them to ADJUST TO WINTER WEATHER, is not only valuable to a great multitude of people, but to another multitude is absolutely essential to health.

Whether Peruna is a medicinal compound that meets these requirements can be judged by a hasty glance at some of its principal ingredients.

Take, for instance, hydrastis canadensis, which is an ingredient of Peruna. The United States Dispensatory says of this herbal remedy, that it is employed as a tonic for DEPRAVED CONSTITUTIONS, not only of the nose and head, but also of the stomach and intestines, as well as other internal organs. Hydrastis canadensis, ordinarily known as golden seal, is thus very clearly classed by the highest authorities as a valuable remedy wherever the mucous membranes of the body are in need of a little medicinal help.

Cedron is also one of the principal ingredients of Peruna. It is recognized by the United States Dispensatory and all leading works on materia medica, as a TONIC OF THE GREATEST VALUE. It is also an anti periodic and anti malarial remedy, and is therefore frequently used as a SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE. It is a remedy of great merit, somewhat overlooked by the medical profession of late, but its undoubted tonic qualities are sure to reinstate this remedy in its original high-class rank as a safe and efficient tonic and appetizer.

Another ingredient of Peruna which is of manifest benefit is cubeb. Bartholow, in his Materia Medica, states that cubeb PROMOTES THE APPETITE, ASSISTS DIGESTION, and increases the circulation of the blood. He also goes on to recommend it for catarrh, not only of the head and pharynx, but also of the stomach, as well as the other internal organs.

LAST, BUT NOT LEAST, IS COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS. This remedy for many years has enjoyed a great reputation in southern states as a panacea for many diseases such as dropsy, indigestion, cramp, sick headache, and the like. Dr. Scudder, a writer of great fame, also recommends this herbal remedy for chronic diseases of the lungs and heart.

These are some of the principal ingredients of Peruna compounded into a single remedy by skilful and experienced pharmacists. The compound has been so devised that each remedy retains its full therapeutic value, one assisting the other in their beneficial action upon the human system, MAKING OF PERUNA A VERY EFFICIENT AND VALUABLE REMEDY.

People who pass through the month of November safely and find themselves acclimated to winter weather, generally pass through the remainder of the cold season without any serious difficulty. But NOVEMBER IS A CRITICAL MONTH. The adjustment of a large multitude of people fails to meet the exigencies of approaching winter.

No safer or more appropriate remedy than Peruna could be found. Taken according to the directions on the bottle, not only would catarrhal ailments be warded off, but catarrh already acquired be corrected. It is with the assurance of knowing that we are right that we present to the public Peruna as an IDEAL TONIC AND CATARRH REMEDY.

The truth of the above statements is absolutely unassailable, and the knowledge concerning Peruna which they convey places this remedy beyond all cavil as a great family medicine. If any further evidence is needed we stand ready to furnish it through the MULTITUDE OF SINCERE AND UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS of the people, from Canada to Mexico, from Cape Town to Cairo, from Puerto Rico to the Philippines.

NINE MEN AT DENNISON RALLY; ROXBURY CROWD CHEERS MORAN

Allston Meeting Fiasco and Candidate Fails to Appear —Half Audience Leaves Dudley Street Opera House.

The Joseph A. Denniston rally scheduled to take place in Braintree Hall, Allston, last night proved such a dismal fiasco that it was called off without any speaking.

The hall is in Precinct 2, Ward 25, a Republican stronghold. But the Democratic campaign management evidently figured that there was some interest from the strength there that a rally would bring out.

The large strength developed to be nine men beside a reporter who was assigned to the case.

Last night nine and the reporter filed into the hall. They were all there was present. There were no others.

Not even the speaker of the evening, Joseph A. Denniston, appeared on the platform and said:

"There will be no rally here to-night because Mr. Denniston will not be able to be here in his long eight other places he has to speak to-night."

"MAYOR ASKED ME TO SIT WITH HIM"

—WEBSTER

Republican Candidate Explains How He Came to Be Snapped With Fitz at Pow-wow.

Walter A. Webster, Fitzgerald Republican candidate for District Attorney, spoke in behalf of himself at Roxbury Hall, Dudley street last evening and explained intimacy with Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

Mr. Webster evidently felt that the picture of himself and Mayor Fitzgerald on sale by him at a gathering of Democratic politicians, published in the Boston American, was liable to inspire among the Republicans in the audience a belief that he was more of a Fitzgerald protege than a straight party candidate. He said in part:

Mr. Fitzgerald, recognizing me as his Republican opponent, did me the courtesy to ask me to sit at his right hand at the Democratic pow-wow that was held in Tammany pow-wow last Summer and was taken about by Mayor Fitzgerald. I did what I could to avoid any such prominence in a Democratic meeting, but, realizing that I was expected to be present in order to avoid a discourtesy to Mr. Webster's opponent, I consented to sit at the left of Mayor Fitzgerald and leaving the meeting room as soon thereafter as I could do so. I have no apology to offer for members of the Democratic party gathering with their candidates in a Democratic meeting. Mr. Webster called and invited me to attend a meeting of Republicans in behalf of Republican candidates, but I declined to do so, as I did not feel that I could take part in any Republican meeting while I was a candidate on the Democratic ticket.

Taxpayer Warns Voters to Defeat His Candidacy for the Governor's Council.

Boston, Nov. 2

Editor Boston American:

Why did you not call attention to the fact that Governor Guild is a large stockholder in the Beef Trust, and is personally benefited by the high prices of beef?

Governor Guild is the owner of 1,000 shares of the stock of Swift & Co., one of the Beef Trust companies, which is controlled by Louis F. Swift, brother of Edwin C. Swift, who is a director of Swift & Co. and also of the Governor's friend, Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall.

ARCHBISHOP PLANS MOST IMPOSING CATHEDRAL IN AMERICA

Sites Already Under Consideration for Handsome New Edifice in Boston.

ENTERS WORK WITH VIGOR

Rumor of New Honors for Rector Patterson, Who Aids in Gigantic Undertaking.

TO endow Boston with the finest church edifice in this country and to make the Cathedral of the Holy Cross parish the model community of America is the plan of Most Reverend Archbishop William H. O'Connell, D. D. The site for the new church which is to take the place of the present Cathedral on Washington street is being sought by the Archbishop himself.

The work of improving the present parish he has entrusted to Rev. George J. Patterson, for many years pastor of St Vincent's Church in South Boston. Father Patterson's transfer to the rectorship of the Cathedral was made two weeks ago.

Archbishop Williams was the father of the idea to erect a new cathedral. It was the one regret of his life that he could not see the Washington street structure which he alone had planned and had completed according to the original plans, which in reality is a imposing tower. It was deemed advisable, however, not to add to the weight on the inside and on which the tower is built. The Archbishop's physicians advised him not to attempt the finish of building a new church in his declining years and the work was left to his successor, Archbishop O'Connell.

Takes Up Work With Vigor.

The new Metropolitan has taken up the work with a vigor. Desirable sites for a new cathedral have been inspected and the trend of real estate development has been studied.

It has been suggested that the present cathedral be transferred to the new location when it is stone. This has been done with several local structures.

The first act of the cathedral parish to the loss of Father Pa was one of the first matters considered by Archbishop O'Connell on his recent accession. His first important executive act was to appoint the Rev. George J. Patterson to the rectorship of the Cathedral. By this appointment, which is considered a marked promotion, the Archbishop has honored a priest whose record, marked by kindness and energy as well as by executive ability, has made him one of the most beloved priests of New England.

A [illegible] highest church dignitaries it is [illegible] that the Archbishop is to honor Father Patterson still more by making the office of cathedral rector and diocesan vicar-general, in the event of this taking place it is probable that Rev. Father J. [illegible] of Cambridge, who has been looked upon as a certainty for the vicar-generalship, will receive some other important diocesan appointment.

Father Patterson's appointment as rector of the cathedral came after years of unyielding [illegible] the story of his work to recount it with interest, by and by. He was born in [illegible] and Port Hill district, and [illegible] after but a short [illegible] church there. The church was later moved to [illegible] in the same [illegible] It is proposed to move the cathedral. He attended [illegible] Hill, Boston, and later graduated Boston College and St. Charles's and St. Mary's Seminaries in Maryland.

Father Patterson's success in the South Boston district is known throughout the archdiocese. Archbishop Williams [illegible] a compliment him several times. Even greater success is expected in the new office, for the great cathedral parish [illegible] possible that [illegible] a new [illegible] Archbishop [illegible] Father Patterson's appointment as rector of the cathedral came after years of unyielding [illegible] the story of his work to recount it with interest, by and by. He was born in [illegible] and Port Hill district, and [illegible] after but a short [illegible] church there. The church was later moved to [illegible] in the same [illegible] It is proposed to move the cathedral. He attended [illegible] Hill, Boston, and later graduated Boston College and St. Charles's and St. Mary's Seminaries in Maryland.

Father Patterson's success in the South

New Rector of Cathedral Who Has Won Noted Success in Church Work

Succeeded Late Fr. Corcoran.

He was ordained to the priesthood December 23, 1876, and assigned as curate to St Patrick's, Roxbury. Two years later he took charge of St. Bridget's, North Adams. He established there [illegible] Mass. [illegible] parish on the death of Rev. William J. Corcoran, the pastor.

When he became pastor of St. Vincent's the church was [illegible] and [illegible] unattractive. The stone structure looked cold and unbefitting. There was a debt of $70,000 hanging over the church which it was thought could [illegible] Father Patterson started in at once to brighten up the appearance of the church. The surrounding land was [illegible] and the best singers in the city were engaged and organized one of the best male [illegible] choirs in the country. The church basement was made into an attractive [illegible] which was [illegible]

Parish as One Family.

It was a new church altogether and the parishioners were not slow to realize it. They responded wonderfully to Father Patterson's request for further assistance [illegible] $70,000 debt was gradually lessened. With [illegible] societies and clubs were organized both for the grown-ups and the children. A neighboring plot of land was purchased and a handsome library was erected. Quarters were rented for the clubs and the parish became like one great family.

From the date of his appointment as rector Father Patterson warred incessantly on intemperance. The proprietor of a [illegible] was [illegible] of the liquor business entirely. He was [illegible] lever, the curfew law. [illegible] limited one in his parish to keep the doors and gates of the streets at night. At 9 o'clock each night the bell in the church tower was rung and Father Patterson and his curates went about the district, [illegible] equipped with canes, and sent home every child they found on the streets.

Father Patterson has left the parish with a [illegible] of $24,000, notwithstanding the cost of many improvements [illegible] His own money as well as his efforts went into his work for his people.

St. Vincent's parishioners heard the news of the transfer of their rector with great regret, but no regret where he was to go will live always in the hearts of his people of St. Vincent's.

PROBATING OF WILL DISCLOSES FORTUNE

Beverly Gains $43,000.00 in Taxes, but Can't Find Property of Mrs. Cabot.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of personal property, the existence of which has hitherto been unknown to the assessors, has just come to the knowledge of the city officials of Beverly through the probating of the will of Mrs. Susan Bridge Cabot, who died at No. 36 Bowditch street, the city and who died a year ago.

The officials cannot explain why they had no knowledge of the property until now, and its location at the present time is still a mystery to them.

Friday, a check for the taxes, amounting to $43,7..3.72, was received at the office of the City Collector. This is the largest single collection ever recorded at the city office and of this amount, about $40,000 is on personal property.

City Collector Andrew S. Edwards said yesterday: "We simply cannot explain why the property has not been recorded before. That, of course, is the duty of the Board of Assessors. We do not know how many years the property has escaped notice, but this much is certain, we cannot collect for taxes on property as long as the property had its own assessed."

Mrs. Cabot died at the age of about 63. She was well known in Boston, but during the last 20 years of her life she seldom left her residence on Beacon street and its entrance was seldom seen outside the iron fence surrounding it. She had in her possession at the time of her death, it is left in quests of $50,000. She was the widow of Joseph C. Cabot, the fourth treasurer of Harvard.

Ex-Court of Jewett of Salem was appointed administrator of Mrs. Cabot's estate.

HOUGHTON & DUTTON CO.

IT PAYS TO PAY CASH

NEW ENGLAND'S GREAT CASH HOUSE.

Grand Gold Medal Sale

In Honor of Our

Thirty-Fifth Anniversary

Every business man, after he has taken stock, naturally looks over the achievements of the past year. As the last year has been a phenomenal one in our history, not only in merchandising, but in the appreciation shown us by the city of Boston and by manufacturers far and wide, it may not be amiss for us to recount some achievements at this time

Awarded by New Idea Pattern Co. for largest sales in United States.

IN THE FIRST PLACE this is the people's store—the store of the millions—and anything that is for the advancement of the city and of the general public we favor. During Old Home Week we were awarded the blue ribbon and a special gold medal by the city of Boston for the best decorated building, and for the civic spirit which our house exhibited. Ours has also been the banner store in many lines of standard goods known in every household. We have received many medals from manufacturers and dealers, near and far, for having exceeded all other stores in New England, and in some instances in the United States, in the sale of their various commodities. From its beginning this store has grown more rapidly than any other in Boston, and this corporation is a monument to our method of buying and selling for cash. Our policy has always been to keep faith with the public in our announcements in the press, and the liberal response invariably made to our advertising shows that the public is appreciative of fair dealing, is keen on values, prefers facts to fakes, and realizes that "It pays to pay cash."

The bargains represented today are the best possible in merchandise that is seasonable, desirable and of high quality. We have been assisted in preparing this sale by scores of manufacturers, who have made special concessions in order to co-operate with us in making this the greatest sale in the history of our store

BABIES CHEER SEARLES AS HE FACES TRIAL

DEFENCE UNWRITTEN LAW?

Interest of Entire State Centered on Trial Soon to Be Begun at Farmington, Me.

FAMILY STANDS BY HIM

To Spend Savings If Necessary to Free Man Who Shot to Avenge Alleged Wrong.

FARMINGTON, Me., Nov. 2.—Standing in the corridor of the women's part of the prison which had been turned over to him for his exclusive use by Sheriff Coolidge, Harvey Searles, who on next Tuesday is to be tried for the murder of his wife, took several letters from the jail postman.

Guessing in a perfunctory sort of way at two or three he came to one which instantly brought a new light to his eyes. He thrust the others aside and sitting down at the table he read the childish letter of his little daughter Emma.

"Dear papa," the child wrote.

We are waiting for you to come home to us because I want you to come home and Sherwood does too and Aunt Ada says we must pray for you. Aunt Ada said we could go and see you and I told Sherwood. He wants to see papa too. He said he did and I am writing this because we want you back home with us soon and we will be glad when you get home again.

Guide Weeps Like Child.

That was all that the man accused of wife murder could make out. It was enough to arouse in him all the emotion a strong man could muster. With the letter crumpled under his arm, Harvey Searles, who knows the woods and frowns more of Nature as any other man in Franklin county, sat down at the little table and laying his head amongst them, sat like a child crying.

For these two, Emma and Sherwood Searles had a passionate affection. Never not for them in what would prove his slightest worry about the outcome of his trial. He would not worry. That he died as the result of shock which it charged that he fired, even as he himself asked from the scene with wounds that are supposed to be fatal, deserves but little consideration in mind and that was to kill him if he failed in the attempt and was brought to the bitter realization that he was to be tried for murder.

He accepted the situation with only a word of regret for the welfare of his sister, Jessie, the man who as to be one of the chief witnesses for the defense in the trial, was mentioned. Harvey maintained an ominous silence. He has no fear even for his brother. In him he sees a cause for all his troubles.

"I Must Look Out for My Babies."

Someone said to Searles: "You should think of Emma and Sherwood." His manner changed. "I must look out for them, they cannot be left alone," he said.

Then he commenced to assist his attorneys, outlining a defense in which the unwritten law will figure for the first time in New England's criminal history. The suit only was seized with a desire that he would like to be allowed to take care of the children, to work for them and bring them up.

Thereafter he worked with remarkable frenzy. The children were his sole thought. "I want to be free for Emma and little Sherwood," he said. "I want to bring them up to think well of me. I want them all I have now in the world."

His sister, Ada Searles, devoted to her brother and his little ones, has been a mother to Emma and Sherwood ever since the tragedy, when Phyllis Searles topped from a buggy and fell dead at her husband's feet without a word, while small Sherwood cried at the sound of shots and was comforted in the arms of his father, who stood beside the body of his wife and watched his only brother crawling away, wounded.

Says His All on Letter.

Ada Searles promised to bring the children from Rangeley to-day to see their father. Searles waited all day long from the windows of his quarters at the county jail and a view of the common across from it—national emblem. When they did not come his disappointment was great. The boy he wrote the letter from Emma to send in one from Ada Searles. His letter and the mother wrote, but not that of Harvey Searles seemed to care for even the big, crooked letters made by his little daughter.

When the fight for his freedom is on next Tuesday Harvey will be surrounded by his father, his mother, his sister and his children. On the opposite side of the room among the witnesses summoned for the state will be Jesse Searles, the brother. Probably the group which will take place in the Franklin county court house will never have been duplicated before in New England.

It is believed that it will take some time to obtain a jury. Attorney Gen. E. E. Richards for Searles will fight every step of the way. A special venire of 100 talesmen has been summoned. If the defense finds no legitimate grounds they will be combatted by witnesses for the State.

Around against Searles will be the attorneys. Among them are County Attorney Blanchard and Assistant Attorney General Warren Philbrook. Either thinking or the unwritten law as a defense will be fought by the State officials.

Searles' Peculiar Traits.

The peculiar traits of Searles will play an important part in his defence.

"There is an irish in the story of Searles' attempted suicide in his cell after

BAKER MURDERED BY POISON, AUTOPSY SHOWS

E. WALTER F. BAKER 3

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF BOSTON CLUBMAN

Chloral Hydrate, Sufficient to Kill Several Men, Found in His Stomach.

THAT Walter Farnsworth Baker, the rich Boston clubman and Harvard graduate who died last Sunday morning at the home of Frank H. Hurd, Larch avenue, Bogata, N. J., leaving a $400,000 estate, was murdered, has been proven by the autopsy held by Medical Examiner Magrath.

Enough chloral hydrate, commonly called "knockout drops," to have killed two or three men was found in the stomach of Baker. It is asserted that an arrest is to be made soon.

That no physician was called by the Hurds to attend the dying man, it being said that they thought Baker was merely under the influence of liquor, although the dying man had repeatedly said: "I have been poisoned" before he lapsed into unconsciousness, is also an established fact.

That an undertaker was called to the Hurd home to embalm the body of the man who had died but three hours before is also maintained by the officials who are investigating the case.

Brother Engages Lawyers.

Edward F. Baker, of No. 500 Newbury street, brother of Walter F. Baker, whose mysterious death is being probed by the police forces in Boston, New York and New Jersey, yesterday engaged the services of the law firm of Bates, Ney & Abbott, of which former Governor Bates is the head, with offices in the Tremont Building, to attend to the legal parts of the case.

Frank F. Nay accompanied by Dr. Sherwin Gibbon, the Baker family physician, hurriedly left Boston for New York on the last night for New York, after Edward F. Baker, almost as soon as he learned of the death of Walter at the residence of the Hurds in Bogota, where the latter died, made his home over the body of his brother, Mrs. Chevalier W. Baker, at the family home, No. 284 Commonwealth avenue, last February. New York and Boston banks were at once notified not to pay any checks that might have been signed by Walter F. Baker.

Before Baker died, he made a will in which Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hurd were named as the chief beneficiaries.

Banks Are Notified.

That the will, if it really is a will, left by Walter F. Baker is to be contested is offered for probate the next court of Hudson, Edward F. Baker declares. Said Mr. Baker left no will. The will aforementioned which purports to be one, I doubt, would in any court of law.

Investigation into the mysterious death of Baker was begun by his brother, Edward F. Baker, almost as soon as he learned of the death of Walter at the residence of the Hurds in Bogota, where the latter had made his home over the body of his mother, Mrs. Chevalier W. Baker, at the family home, No. 284 Commonwealth avenue, last February. New York and Boston banks were at once notified not to pay any checks that might have been signed by Walter F. Baker

This had been taken by the waiter, and Baker was about to drink it, when he became ill. He went to the washroom, where he remained for a half hour, and then came back to me weak and pale.

"I've been poisoned," he said; 'I must go somewhere and lie down.' We left the place and I got him to the garage, got the automobile and took him to the Hotel Belgravia. I secured a room for him and saw him undressed and put to a bed.

"Then he gave me two $10 bills and told me to go to the Hotel Nottingham and tell Mr. and Mrs. Hurd that he was too ill to go home with them. I told them. Then I went to dinner at Browne's Chop House very [illegible] They all were with me in the automobile to Browne's where Mr. Hurd and I went up to see Baker who was as sick as ever. Arrest Expected Soon.

The detectives have learned that the Hurds conveyed Baker to Bogota, where they arrived at 3 o'clock, just 8 in the morning. He was placed in bed, where he died shortly afterward. FANCY WEAVING BY BLIND, DEAF GIRL Remarkable Progress Made by Miss Crocker in Cambridge Institution.

The first blind and deaf woman in the world to operate a fancy weaving loom is Miss Cora Crocker, just turned twenty-one, who is manufacturing fancy articles in the workshop of the Massachusetts commission for the Blind in Harvard street, Cambridge.

A half century ago Laura Bridgeman, blind and deaf, was the first person so afflicted to receive an education of practical value.

More recently, Helen Keller, blind, deaf and dumb, was the first so afflicted to graduate from the course of higher education.

Today Miss Crocker is the first blind and deaf woman to enter into the field of fancy weaving as an industry.

A pretty little woman, refined and intelligent in appearance, she gave daylight to her theory that the blind are capable of many things at the present time, in the case of fancy weaving. She is learning a mechanical trade and is self-supporting, and can look forward to the time when she will support herself through life and live in comfort like her more fortunate sisters.

A New Field for the Sightless.

If the experiment succeeds, and there is every prospect that it will, a new field opens to those who, like the world without hearing or speech, or the gift of speech, or who have come to feel itself to be thrust upon them by life.

Little Cora Crocker's story, setting forth sentiments of hearing, although in the circumstances, is a fine one. When the lamp went out [illegible] her of the blessed family of sight. She was thought, so we are told, that her future [illegible] send her to the [illegible] Dodd in Philadelphia, to the [illegible] school.

[illegible] was not able to stay at the Perkins Institution for the deaf. She remained at home for a year and then had to be sent to the asylum at Pittsfield. There she spent [illegible] two years and seemed to be doomed to life and death in darkness, poverty and ignorance. As if this were not enough, she was [illegible] affection—she lost the sense of hearing and partially lost the ability to communicate her thoughts to others by the spoken language.

Never Lost Her Courage.

Her condition was doubly unfortunate because she had once been able to see and to hear and had all the faculties of other girls. When light and then sound were [illegible] was [illegible] [illegible] she arrived at the period of budding girlhood, with the [illegible] of [illegible] had seen and [illegible] to compare her present state with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] her courage failed her or that she resigned herself to [illegible] [illegible] make the most of life if only she could have the opportunity.

The opportunity came through a wealthy New York woman who heard the story. Miss Crocker was sent again to the Perkins Institution. She was old enough now to reason and to accumulate wisdom and practical knowledge with her.

She learned how to read the books, prepared in raised characters for the benefit of those deprived of perpetual [illegible] She learned to knit and to crochet. She acquired enough education to give her mental occupation and to make the most of what faculties she still had left.

She progressed so well that a week ago she was taken into the industrial school in Harvard street, Cambridge, conducted by the state commission. The purpose of this station is to determine what industrial occupations the blind can profitably engage in, other than sewing and knitting, such as caning, broom basket and mattress making, to establish such industries on a profitable basis, to enable blind persons, who [illegible] to become experts in other skilled factories for the sewing and to become selling agents.

Proved an Apt Pupil.

The operation of the loom is a new field which it is hoped to open to the blind. Thus far slightly women of unusual skill and intelligence have done wonders in this occupation, thanks to the training of the Harvard institution and to [illegible] Miss Crocker has always to hold out her palm for the pattern instruments by which their fingers on it and convey the intelligence by this means.

She had first to be told the principles of the loom and all the details of the [illegible] operation, the sorting and counting and spacing of the [illegible] threads. Then she was able to weave simple cloth.

This did not take her much longer than would be the case with a woman of normal powers. The case was exceedingly difficult work of teaching her color values, that of placing colored thread designs in the web.

Let any intelligent seamstress, fully possessed of both her faculties, undertake this work to see how distinctly and [illegible] and [illegible] must operate. Then imagine a girl both blind and deaf doing the work and producing articles which can command good prices on the counters of the department and fancy goods store in competition with the skilled labor of normal men and women.

May Be Skilled Operator.

First, Miss Crocker was taught to count and separate the delicate threads that make up the body of the cloth, and then to count them and work in the design in colored threads. She has already done this so well that she is making duplies of articles, which, when they [illegible] their way to the counter, will not be distinguishable from the work of the most skilful operators.

"It is much to say that Miss Crocker has already succeeded in turning out this work so that it cannot be told from the most artistic done by labor in the possession of all faculties," said Charles F. Carnell, superintendent of the industrial department of the commission for the Blind. "That would be superlative, but we can't stop there. We intend to master it, even if she had all her faculties. But she has made a success and makes promise of becoming self supporting through this industry. Blind and deaf [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

'GOD TAKE,' CRIES MOTHER

Helen Morse, Sweetheart, Sends Her Tear-Stained Letter of Comfort.

Where Dr. Albert Cushman Day committed suicide in the woods at West Roxbury he left in the wake of his deed four broken-hearted women and a fatherless child. The four women, one his mother, two whom he intended to marry, appeal to all womankind in their grief.

"I am the one to suffer now. My life is dead and I want to die to-morrow. May God take me," cried the young doctor's afflicted widowed mother in her New York home.

"The worst of it is that I cannot find relief in tears. I am left all alone with a little girl baby to bring up. She must be protected against the sorrows of the world but, unfortunately, have not been," cries Mrs. Marion Day, the legal wife of the young husband, in Norfolk Downs.

"I can't account for his death as I can't believe he married before me. I am heart-broken and penniless," cries Miss Hazel Callahan Day, with whom Dr. Day respected and whom he married when he had a wife living, at her sister-in-law's home in Brooklyn.

Sends Tear-Stained Letter.

"May the same merciful God who has been my stay during these weeks of agony, since I have known that he was separated from me irreparably, be your helper now and always," is the tear-stained letter to the mother from Helen Morse of Haverhill, whom the dead doctor was engaged to marry, despite the fact that he had one wife and was about to marry a second.

The tears of these women are shed for the young doctor now, by the image which he had woven in his own life and in the heart of those who cherished it all by a revolver shot through the heart that had caused it all.

"In first Mrs. Day, just out of school, declares that once he left her home turned her erring husband over to the law, and that she would have given him up to his sorrows for her dear sake, but for his genius and his life. The second Mrs. Day is sore and sorry for the wife whom she cannot believe that the dead wife is not an impostor. The third, Miss Morse, she is, in a pathetic, womanly way, for she, too, knew who broke her heart, and the grief-stricken mother defends the memory of her dead daughter. All sweetness has written this letter to the doctor's mother:

Sweetheart Writes Mother.

"We do I know that words can be of no help in a time like this, my heart turns to you, the other woman who loved him—his mother. Eight weeks ago we were together and since that time what a world of sorrow and regret must he have gone through before we could see a way out. Your small wonder the is could not face the world. It is the greatest grief that can be had [illegible] almost breaks my heart.

"If I could find but one word to express my sympathy. The sacredness of the love and reverence he bore you always must be your comfort. Often he talked of you and [illegible] and how to him and his wife [illegible] anxious about your health, were he went to you in the Summer. For this I am glad that the days of separation, struggle, suffering and unhappiness are ended. And are the most cruel that it was, even a woman can forgive him, the one we with love has found forgiveness and rest in the great Father's heart.

"May the same merciful God who has been my stay during these weeks of agony since I have known that he was separated from me irrevocably, be your helper now and always.

With tenderest love,

HELEN MORSE."

"I would have given Dr. Day up to Miss Callahan, though she loved him. It hurt the slightest inkling that he contemplated ending his life," said the divorced pretty child wife to a Boston American reporter yesterday at her home, 60 Appleton street, Norfolk Downs.

"The Day came one night fro mthe New York boat on that day of days, and gave himself into my keeping. I would have given him too much to give him over to the police. But he knew that it was only a matter of time before the law would take its course, without a word from me, as his offense was one against the State.

Seeks Protection for Baby.

"Our talk was naturally not a pleasant one. He appeared much worried. I did not know where he was. I know the pain that kept me from sleeping that night. All that day after I heard of the suicide I did my work mechanically. I was nervous and worried since then, and I cannot sleep or eat.

"Dr. Day was very angry always when I refused me all I tried to get. It for his sake, and now when I should cry for him alone I cannot do so.

"If only care about my rights to Dr. Day's property if he had any, are a count of the fact that I am left alone with a little girl baby to bring up. She has no father, poor little thing, and that should be enough, without the statement from a woman I have never seen that I am an impostor. I have made no statement denouncing to Miss Callahan, nor I believe a word I say. I pity her from the bottom of my heart. I am trying to protect Mrs. Day, the mother, for the blow must be terrible to her. We intended to make our future a town next Spring after the doctor had finished his course and go to housekeeping."

Signed Death Warrant.

Mrs. Day, the mother, at her home at No. 309 Nicholas avenue, Brooklyn, declared "My son knew when he married Miss Callahan that he was signing his own death warrant. Cushman was always like this. He made mistakes when he was young, but he always grew up to be a man. He always intended to get rid of the woman from his first wife when she had made suitable provision for the other girl. I don't know the real Mrs. Day, but from what Cushman told me I pitied her from good girl, who at odd moments was an impostor as to her name.

"There was another woman whom he knew, I believe, but I pitied Cushman because his wife was so no good get a divorce from her and know him for his first child. She was Helen Morse, of No. 18 Rockton street, Haverhill, a real noble, lovely girl, who misunderstood his position. She understood his failings and had forgiven him.

Letters of Sympathy.

Mrs. Day has received a letter signed by the house officers of the City Hospital, sympathizing with her and testifying to their friendship for her husband. Also from the Roller studies fund from Phi Theta Psi Fraternity of Tufts College Medical School, and from other individual friends.

HARVARD SNATCHES A VICTORY FROM BROWN IN LAST MINUTE

NO SCORE IN FIRST HALF

A SORER crowd of collegians than those from Brown who sat in the Stadium yesterday afternoon and saw their pet eleven defeated in the last ditch by the Crimson, would be hard to find. The Brown men were about ready to celebrate when the tide turned and in the last minute and Harvard, in the best finish of the year, managed to squeeze a victory when defeat was already staring her in the face. Not more than a minute remained for play.

That the football enthusiasts expected a hard and vicious game and that Brown was tipped by many to defeat the Crimson, served to draw a throng of 35,000 to the Stadium.

The weather could not have been more suitable as the temperature was just right for the players, while the excited spectators failed to notice any chill in th air while the fast struggle was being played on the springy turf.

The score of 6 to 5 tells plainly how evenly the two teams played throughout, and Brown lost a fine chance at least for a tie score when the attempt at a goal failed after the touchdown.

That missed goal would have been a big solace to the Brown boys after being denied the victory which was so nearly theirs.

After the team had battled for half an hour without scratching up any points and trotted on to the field to begin another period of the same tactics it looked like a drawn contest without any scoring and it was not till near the end of the skirmish that the points were forthcoming.

Brown Scores First.

Brown was the first to tally and that touchdown will be remembered for some time to come, as it took the Brown team nearly five minutes to score, with the ball inside the five-yard line. The playing at this stage was the foremost of the season as Harvard was determined that Brown should be frustrated, while the Brown warriors were dead set to score a victory over the Crimson line.

It was well along in the second half when Brown got the ball in the centre of the field from a punt and by a series of the Crimson goal. The ball was then Brown rushers were formed and the ball was quickly hurried to the visitors' uncovered goal line. On the six-yard line Brown was repulsed and Harvard was embraced for the final onslaught, with the Brown centre rushing like mad, paving the team to get a touchdown. Bang into the line went Brown's halfbacks, gaining ground by inches. They succeeded in reaching the first down, but could not get from the goal after three tries. They were pushed back, and but offside play Harvard's part'd them no harm.

Interference with the runner again delayed the Brown team in its efforts to roll up a touchdown. Time and again they tried down Harvard the big tackle, was pushed back, and taking a run at it, the Brown tandem pair, ploughed through the missing Harvard line and just barely got over the last barrier.

Harvard Gains to End.

With the time elapsing at a quick rate the Brown men playing like fiends, the Harvard stands felt gloomy at the prospect of taking defeat at the hands of the Providence eleven.

But Harvard's team established its gameness by getting after Brown in the most business-like way and from that point till the ends of the game the fight was in Brown's territory.

It was a forward pass that won the opening wedge which started Harvard on the road to victory. Had it not been for the lucky ending to a wild chance, Burr made on Brown's goal, the ball was recovered in the sandpaper and Brown's chance was gone, with about a couple of minutes to play, Brown pegging away till the end, which was smashed over for the one touchdown and the subsequent goal that gave the Crimson Brown's fate.

Harvard was outclassed in the rushing department, as was expected, as the Brown men, McIntosh and Captain Regnier, was rated as stars in their positions and with such a line to open holes as Dennis engineering one pays, it was not surprising that Brown was so effective in that side of the game. It was the slashing game of Maginnis, before O'Connell's athlete, which made advances for Brown when the play was in the centre of the field, his individual work was superior to anything in contest. He was equally clever at running back punts or circling ends.

Harvard's Weak Ends.

Harvard did a great amount of punting in the first half, taking advantage of what wind was in her favor and also Burr's greatest booter, Burr's punts were late up distance for the Crimson, but the substitute ends were not much for the kicking in getting down the field with such nimble receivers as Brown had, and Brown was safe in handling that mode of attack.

The Harvard team failed to display the finished form which marks a combination which is ready for the annual game with Yale, but there was plenty of evidence of gameness in the eleven.

That Starr is a find for next year's back was conclusive after yesterday's game. His headwork under the stress of the stiff contest was perfection, and he was the player to shine the most resplendent, and he was a tower of strength to his team, both on the defence, when he was back kicking and specially in the field tackling. When Lockwood went into the game he took the signal system in the backfield, and he made good when called upon at the vital moment to make the touchdown.

Burr's Great Game.

Burr's strength at the line besides his kicking was marked. He was constantly breaking through the Brown forwards and upsetting plays, and it was his blocking a kick which put Harvard on Brown's twenty-two-yard line in the first half, shortly after the game began.

Then Harvard tried the forward pass, but offside play by Brown gave them the penalty of five yards. After a couple of rushes Harvard brought out the forward pass again and the time a Brown player scored the ball on his five-yard line and Harvard was put on the defensive.

Harvard Had Chances.

Again was Harvard on the way for a score after Rand made a run of twenty yards around left end to Brown's twenty-five-yard line. Harvard forced the ball to within two yards of Brown's goal, but was held for downs, and for the second time Harvard failed to score by her chances. In both instances a try for a goal from the field might have developed points.

Brown worked a forward pass once when in possession of the ball after a kick which went out of bounds in midfield before the teams had fully lined up. Doubt hooted the ball and Captain Fiske was off like a shot to the corner of the field, and got the ball on Harvard's twenty-five-yard line. The Crimson line was unable to stop the battering of Brown's backs, and the ten yard line was quickly reached. Time was called for the end of the half before Brown could get over the final line.

Crimson Proves Game.

The real test of Harvard's stanina came in the second half, when it was a case of do or die, and the team as a whole arose to the occasion.

Such a spirit of defence as was shown when Brown made her touchdown after the most sensational shifts ever seen with in the five-yard line proved that the Harvard coach had the stuff to feed on in the line.

Then when all looked lost the real mettle began to assert itself and the Crimson football players woke up in a flash and gave an exhibition of whirlwind offence which brought down volumes of praise for their efforts.

The spurt came late but in its wake could be traced that infant power which is behind the Harvard machine and likely to come to the front when needed and it was certainly needed yesterday.

AMHERST-AGGIE GAME RESULTS 0-0

Teams Battle In the Rain and Fail to Endanger Either Goal Line.

Amherst, Mass., Nov. 2.—Amherst and Aggie played two twenty-five minute halves on Pratt Field to-day and neither side was able to score. The day was anything but good for football, heavy rain pouring down on the field throughout the game, making the play slow and inaccurate.

Though a stranger to all the Fordham Amherst, as the ball was in Amherst territory most of the time. Both Amherst and Aggie brought the ball to one another's twenty-yard line, but each time Shattuck and Cobb failed to drop the ball over the goal. Both teams had to resort to punting throughout the contest.

In the early part of the game Curbo was hurt on a tackle and had to retire from the game. This loosed up Amherst's team, as Shattuck had to punt from his left half to quarter, Haldeman going in Owing to the condition of the weather and the field neither team showed up to advantage. YALE HAD TO WORK TO BEAT W. AND J.

Elis Couldn't Score in First Half, but Made Eleven Points in Second.

Special to the Sunday American.

New Haven, Nov. 2. Washington and Jefferson gave Yale the biggest surprise of the year to-day, holding the Blue safe throughout the first half of the most brilliant contested game played here in years. The Locust Hill team outplayed the Yale eleven in the first half and Washington and Jefferson gained forty yards during the opening two runs of twelve yards each. Yale braced up the second half and by steadily gaining twenty yards at a time made the ball at the Washington and Jefferson ten-yard line.

Bomar's Good Dash.

Bomar's dash through left tackle for twenty yards and taking the ball to the Washington and Jefferson fifteen-yard line, was the longest run of the day. Bomar then made a quick place goal pass for the ball clipped, but because of a poor pass from the centre, the try was ineffectual. The field was a place of mud, and rain fell during out of the game.

Not until the last few minutes of the second half had been played was Yale able to score. The day was anything but good for football, heavy rain pouring down on the field throughout the game, making the play slow and inaccurate.

RONDO TAKES SPEEDWAY HONORS FROM B. S. DILLON

Wins Two of Three Exciting Heats, Dillon Taking First in Record Time.

Rondo, the bay gelding owned by S. Walter Wales of Grove Hall, proclaimed himself the pacing champion of Worcester County this afternoon at the Worcester Driving Club and Franklin Field Speedway yesterday by defeating the heretofore invincible B. S. Dillon before one of the largest crowds ever at the course, the greater of which remained till pitch darkness obliged the judges to declare the event finished at the close of the third heat in Rondo's favor.

Before the start R. G. Crosby, owner of B. S. Dillon, informed the judges that he wanted to follow during the procession of starting judges, through his being the owner of his competitor.

The officials then selected President Walter E. Newhall of the Speedway to do this place. In heeding the order the driving his father's gelding, was the only one in getting a record position.

At the word B. S. Dillon went into the lead, having about a length the better of it at the eighth. In the latter part of the first mile Rondo began to close ground and was only a neck back when the the wire was passed.

New Speedway Record.

The time was a new record for the speedway since its reconstruction and ran one hundred yards before the grandstand. The followers of Dillon made the air ring with cheers when they saw the favorite was first.

In the second heat B. S. Dillon seemed to be about a hundred yards from the finish, when the suddenly seemed to get a cold attack and Rondo went to the front side and past him, winning by more than a length. The timers did not catch the heat, so no time was announced.

It was now when the Rondo admirers had their turn at cheering and they grasped the opportunity with a bang. No one throwing their hats into the air. The third heat was a repetition of the second, only that Dillon showed more life, and the contest was run back to the visitors' stand time again.

Duffy Breaks Collarbone.

A decision in the hands by the Table handed through the visitors' line till Phillips jumped through centre for the second. Captain Bigelow's try for goal failed.

Tub teams lapped into a kicking game, there being two long punts each way. In the last half Washington and Jefferson kicked off to Yale's twenty-five-yard line. Ted Jones running back fifteen yards. Owing to the condition of the weather and the field neither team showed up to advantage. Haldeman and Shattuck played a good game for Amherst, while Cobb showed up well for Aggie. The summary.

Tufts Boys Win Game From Bowdoin, 19 to 2

Portland, Me., Nov. 2.—Tufts defeated Bowdoin, 19 to 2, on the Pine Tree ground to-day in a hard fought game. Tufts won the toss, and kicked to Wanlike, who covered fifteen yards. Bowdoin punted and Tufts made a fair catch. Bowdoin then got the ball on her two-yard line. Tufts got the ball, and made first touchdown after five minutes of play. Greene also gave the Tufts rooters a thrill by a run of forty-five yards. Greene failed to kick the goal.

Tufts got the ball and worked it down to Bowdoin's thirty-five-yard line, but Bowdoin got the ball on downs. Bowdoin then tried the forward pass and got away with it for fifteen yards. The Tufts backs threw hard line, it was fumbled and netted Bowdoin a loss. Bowdoin punted to the middle of the field and was forced to punt, but recovered the ball. Tufts punted and Bowdoin on account of penalties. Greene did not kick goal. Score, Tufts, 11; Bowdoin, 0.

Tufts got the ball and by steady gains made a sensational run for the other goal line, but was brought back by a penalty for holding. Bowdoin got the ball on her own twenty-five-yard line, but was forced to punt. Tufts got the ball and made several gains. Greene did not kick goal. Score, Tufts, 16; Bowdoin, 0.

PRINCETON HAS IMPROVED

New York, Nov. 2.—A threatened Indian massacre booked for the Polo Grounds this afternoon failed to come off. Instead the Princeton Tigers ate up the band of braves who represent Carlisle on the gridiron and when the final count was taken the score was 16 to 0, with 8,000 Princeton rooters doing a joy dance about a Hiawatha band of stone red men.

On the score book Princeton gets the credit for a victory over the Indians, but had not Jupiter Pluvius been lined up with the Tigers the victory might have been in smaller numbers.

Rain Handicapped Indians.

A rain, which started in as a moderate drizzle and wound up as a drenching downpour, robbed the contest of the spectacular features which had been expected incidentally it worked havoc with redmen's vaunted speed and fights on trick plays and proved a tremendous to Princeton, when the Tigers, ably handicapped in the style of play, dropped back to the old tactics and fell to the pounding.

Princeton had taken a tremendous beating since last Saturday, when she was defeated by Cornell and would probably have defeated the Indians even on the fastest field to-day, as she demonstrated in the first few minutes of play before the ball became slippery and the field more like a lake had few tricks up her sleeve as it is play an open game if the occasion required.

THE GAME.

Carlisle won the toss and elected to defend the south goal. The wind was in the Indians' favor At 2 37 McCormick kicked off to Carlisle's five-yard line Mt. Pleasant caught the ball and ran it back ten yards. Carlisle's ball on her 27-five-yard line Thorpe gained ten yards around Princeton's right wing. Denny picked up two pounds to Princeton's thirty-yard line. Princeton's ball on her thirty-yard line. Harlan was thrown back for a loss of seven yards. McCormick kicked to Carlisle's thirty-five-yard line. Hendricks caught the ball and was downed by Mt. Pleasant. Carlisle failed to gain on next play and Hunter kicked over Princeton's goal line. Ball was brought in to the twenty-yard line and McCormick kicked to Carlisle's forty-yard line. Mt. Pleasant caught the ball ten yards.

Tigers Forced to Punt.

On a fake kick Thorpe made three yards through tackle. Carlisle tried forward pass and Princeton got the ball on her own twenty-yard line. McCormick was forced to punt to Carlisle's forty-yard line. Hendricks caught the ball and was downed by Princeton at the thirty-yard line. Hendricks made ten yards around Princeton's left end. Carlisle failed to gain the necessary distance, to real line on off side play. Ball was brought in to the twenty-five-yard line.

Tibbot caught it and was downed. McCormick punted to Carlisle's twenty-five-yard line and Mt. Pleasant got the ball on downs. Hunter kicked to Princeton's twenty-five-yard line. Harlan made five yards. McCormick broke through for a fake for thirty yards. Harlan made seven yards through left and McCormick threw through centre. Hendricks intercepted the ball on Carlisle's thirty-yard line, where Hunter caught the ball and was downed. Princeton lost the ball on a fumble on the first play.

McCormick's Big Gain.

Hunter kicked to Princeton's thirty-yard line, where Dillon caught the ball, but was tackled by Exendine and thrown for a loss. McCormick made a forward pass through a fake tackle for thirty yards Princeton secured the ball on the open play, and for ten minutes a bewildering succession of forward passes and fake kicks filled the air, the Indians failing to keep the 25,000 spectators in a continuous uproar. The Indians were completely outclassed at not show to any great advantage, thanks to the 40-yard line. They made but 60 per cent greater than they displayed against Harvard last Saturday, when the ball had see sawed back and forth between the 40-yard lines. In the first quarter the Tigers received it on their own 30-yard line and carried it to the Indians' 40-yard line. With straight line plunges and end runs Princeton kept the ball hammering the redmen's cache and took the ball to Carlisle's 30-yard line, where a fumble was taken out. Here Princeton lost the ball on downs and Carlisle carried it to her own 40-yard line.

Carlisle was penalized fifteen yards for holding.

Princeton got the ball, started in at line plunging and quickly carried the ball to Carlisle's 30-yard line. Here the Indians made a game stand. It required three plunges, but at the third attempt McCormick went over for a touchdown.

Score—Princeton, 6; Indians, 0

Mount Pleasant Fumbles.

Hunter kicked to Wister on the Tigers' 10-yard line and the ball was brought back 15 yards. Harlan added two on a fake kick and then punted to Mt. Pleasant on Carlisle's 40-yard line. Mt. Pleasant's quarterback fumbled and Roosh grabbed it, running to the 30-yard line, where he was downed by Harlan. Then he got in the game again, so hard that he dropped the ball. Princeton got the ball on downs and Dillon fell on it. Hunter punted out to Mt. Pleasant's 40-yard line. Mt. Pleasant's quarterback captured 10 yards through the Indian centre before he could be thrown down.

Talbot hit the left tackle for three yards and the Tigers were penalized 10 yards for holding.

Carlisle kicked off to Harlan on Princeton's 40-yard line and the ball was brought back 15 yards. Harlan added two on a fake kick and then punted to Mt. Pleasant on Carlisle

THREATENED BASEBALL WAR NOT SETTLED, POSTPONED

American Association Officials Said to Be at Head of a Proposed New League.

BY SAM CRANE.

New York, Nov. 2.—The way the baseball situation stood me after the National Association adjourned was that the warfare situation had not settled by any means merely postponed.

There has been nothing granted to the American Association, which organization raised all the small of powder, not even y their own body

The whole question of higher classification and improved protection for players has been passed up to the National Commission, the supreme court of baseball, and it is therefore up to, or will be, for that august body to smooth down the ruffled feathers of the disgruntled ones—or to rub them the wrong way.

The minor is American Association is simmering. The delegates of that organization came here with hearts full fury ar ready with threats. They have now been made to show their hands; either have they been put on record as to exactly wh t they want. They simply go as they came, and perhaps with a little more enthusiasm against organized baseball than with which they arrived.

Through the levelheadedness of Judge Kavanaugh of Little Rock, who evidently did not desire to precipitate the issue, a committee was appointed to meet the National Commission to talk over proposed amendments to the National agreement. The diplomatic Judge advised, too, that, together with the president and secretary of the National Association, who are President Powers and Secretary Farrell, both known to be in favor of the American Association demands, who are to act ex-officio, the committee should be composed of two t ines A representatives and one each from the lower classes. And, moreover, President Powers was to have the appointing of the other members. President Powers immediately appointed Kavanaugh, O'Brien, Carson, Shirvely and Ramsey. A very sensible and conservative selection.

O'Brien Refused to Serve.

But Mr. O'Brien refused to serve on the committee. And why did Mr. O'Brien refuse to serve? Simply because he was a mere clerk for Messrs. Tebeau and Canfield, the rebellious gentlemen who control the American Association. President O'Brien is a talented gentleman. The "cat's whisker" for him just the same as any player in his league. Those two Canfield pull the string and O'Brien dances.

That is why President O'Brien refused to act on that important committee, which was one so much to the liking of Messrs. Tebeau and Canfield.

So let himself down as easy as possible, O'Brien said he would be glad to act on a properly constituted advisory committee to assist the regular committee. But it is doubtful if he will be the appointee of Messrs. Tebeau & Canfield, even in that doubtful position.

To this add the fact that O'Brien refused to act on the committee shows conclusively that the American Association has decided to break away from the national agreement, and that it will welcome with pleasure the delay occasioned by the appointment of the committee, which is instructed to have a conference with the National Commission

Now the third major league that has been so much talked about lately can at last go its way clear to go ahead and perfect its schemes. There is no doubt in the world that certain American Association officials are at the head of the proposed new league. People interested in the proposed new organization are known to have been in Chicago, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Brooklyn and other cities where big league clubs are located, and that they have met with more or less success. I know personally of several wealthy men who are willing to back the scheme.

National Association Made Mistake.

The National Association made the mistake of its life to not making the American Association show its hand. The whole question should have been settled right then and there at the meeting.

As the situation stands now, the American Association can go along and arrange their proposed circuit without interruption. Politics played an awful big part in the meeting of the National Association just finished, and it appears to me as if the Virginians had the better of the deal, for, far and above everybody else.

The National League is to be held its annual meeting here about the middle of December and the National Commission is to convene here at the same time. Now that is the only time when the National Association Committee, appointed yesterday, can meet the big leaders to present their claims. That gives the American Association and the third rail fellows plenty of time to complete their plans for a new league.

It looks to me as if the National Association had been made the "fall guys." I hope not —but it surely looks so.

We will see what we will see, but knowing Mr. George Wilkes Wiley, I've been as I do, I have visions of what is called in sporting parlance the double cross.

All wise gazabos, Messrs. Tebeau and Carrigan will try over 300, and in my opinion they are the dunky individuals hidden behind the mysterious new third league scheme.

No one saw them here, but there were many rumors floating around the lobby of the Astor to that effect.

WALTHAM TOO FAST FOR BOSTON LATIN

Greverson's Goal From Field a Feature of One of the Best Schoolboy Games of Year.

Waltham, Nov. 2.—Waltham High trimmed Boston Latin this afternoon, 10 to 0. Latin had the heavier team, but Waltham was very fast, and although the visitors gave the locals one of the best games of the year the Waltham goal line was never in danger

M. Greverson did a fine lot of kicking, his goal from the field from a difficult angle being a beauty Later he missed another drop kick by a foot. Ryder, for Latin punted well, but his good work was offset by the quickness of the Waltham ends. Leary was the star of the game He was great at running back punts and carried the ball well every time he was called upon.

Latin kicked off in the first half and the ball went back and forth for some time finally on a fine forward pass and a series of line plays the ball was taken to Latin's thirty-yard line, where Greverson dropped a goal from the field. In the second half, with the ball on Latin's twenty-five-yard line Leary ran through the entire Latin team for a touchdown. Summary:

Beverly, Nov. 2.—Beverly High had a close call this afternoon, but finally beat Roxbury Latin, six to 4. In the first half Hawes of Roxbury dropped a pretty goal from the field and the half ended four to nothing, in Roxbury's favor In the second half, toward the close, Raymond after a series of centre plays, went over Roxbury's line for a touchdown and Hay kicked goal. The best playing was done by Hayden, Raymond and Ware for Beverly and Carson, Hayes and Conklin for the visitors.

SOMERVILLE WINS OVER DORCHESTER

Sharry's Brilliant Playing Was a Prominent Feature of the Game.

Somerville High defeated Dorchester High yesterday at the former's grounds in the initial game in the Interscholastic League by 12 to 4, both halves being complete with brilliant playing by L. Mahoney, by a series of line bucks carried the ball to Dorchester's thirty yard line in the first half, and then Sharry got the ball for a twenty five yard run The forward pass was attempted, but failed Somerville getting the penalty of fifteen yards. Soon after Sharry again got the ball, this time succeeding in carrying it over for a touchdown He then kicked a goal

During the intermission there was a big kick made over the umpires, which in the end delayed starting the second half by fifteen minutes. Right after the game was resumed, Sharry was penalized fifteen yards for using his hands. The off-side kick was tried, but it though the ball went over the bar.

Shortly after the start run of the ball was carried by Sharry, but Dorchester scores for a touchdown and kicked the goal, Somerville made a brave rally in the final ten minutes of play, making a forward pass to Daly for a gain of twenty yards. Then the ball was carried by forward pass to Sharry, who by Somerville got the ball, and Sharry made a forward pass to Daly for a touchdown. In the last minutes of play Daly kicked a field goal from placement. The whole team for Somerville played a good game, but the honors go to Sharry and Mahoney, the former by his long dash down and out several times, but the latter by his pass. For Dorchester Riley and Daly did the brilliant work. Score:

English High and Mechanic Arts Fight Hard Before Big Crowd of Admirers.

English High's strong eleven was played to a standstill yesterday afternoon by the Mechanic Arts High's football aggregation, neither being able to score, on the Dudley avenue grounds, Dorchester, before the largest crowd attending a Boston High School League game this season

Although English High kept the ball in Mechanic Arts High's territory during both halves, and three times had the ball on Mechanic five-yard line, they failed to gain the scoring line, fumbling the ball on all occasions, Wingersky punting out for Mechanics to the centre of the field.

English's pushing the ball back, only to lose it again.

CYCLING

DRIVERS COX AND MURPHY WHOLE SHOW AT RACES

Their Gymnastic Movements with Hands, Legs, Heads and Whips Amuse Spectators.

BIG RACE AT PARK RINK

By Edward E. Cogswell.

"When 'Lone Star' Cox and Tommy Murphy are having a red hot finish to gether all one can see is hands, legs, heads and whips filling the homestretch. The spectators to get an idea that there are any horses in the contest they become so intensely interested in the nearly impossible gymnics of the two drivers."

Thus voiced the sentiment of a well-known trotting horse follower after having seen a close finishing drive between the knights of the sulky mentioned, and it cannot be said that he was far from the truth in his version of the appearance each make in the battle for the lead in reaching the wire.

But all the same there is no driver in the country who has it on Cox when he has his money down and it depends on him in bringing it home by clever engineering.

Known as "Cox's Circuit."

Years ago the New Hampshire reinsman was proud in driving a winner at the Warner, Canaan, and other minor fairs in his State where the purses were $50, of which $25 went to the first horse. In a few seasons he cleaned up all the classes offered so successfully that it became known as "Cox's Circuit."

Then he branched out onto more prominent half-mile tracks, then to the New England Mile Circuit and a few years ago dropped down on the Grand Circuit circuitous at Empire City track to drive one of Jimmy Gatcomb's trotters in a race.

It is a fact that when the shrewd betting men of the circuit saw Cox warming up the horse they nearly fell over one another in high glee at the spectacle riding in the sulky.

Backwoodsman in Sulky.

"Where in the world did Gatcomb dig up that backwoodsman?" they asked. "He ought to have his head examined to put a driver like that behind a good horse."

Betting on the gelding took a big slump and Gatcomb got aboard at a handsome price. However, when the talent saw Cox "scale" Dr. Gleery at the long distance in the opening heat, and fairly outdrive him to the wire, winning by a small margin, the wise men went wild in their praises and readied how appearances in this case were deceitful. Ever since then he has had the confidence of turf followers that his mount would be excellently handled.

No man sits a sulky that gets his hands higher in a rapping finish than Cox. Turning for the wire Lore gradually begins to climb as he nears the wire till he has every indication of getting ready to fly right out over the horse's back. He rocks his body slightly as he touches his horse on either side with the whip, on top neck, and just before reaching the wire makes the final desperate rally by hitting him on the ears, possibly.

Long Remembered Races.

Tommy Murphy drives a good deal like Cox, going after his horse like a charge of artillery capturing a fort. His drive behind Lucanda, 2:02 at Lexington, a couple of seasons ago, and his teaming of Transplant (h), 2:12¼, in the Kentucky Futurity this year was more than a mile last week between horsemen.

Leaning right down to cracks, and every driver has his own peculiarities to get the best out of his horse. This is known to any who follow the races, as his big fields and many complaints of the horses down the homestretch is always on hand to see the finish. Whether he can see out in the pack from the judges' stand or not is a question that has puzzled fans for years.

Methods of trying to win races vary equally as much, one always to be depended on is the pace, to make a horse go and another doing nearly directly opposite to the other. Then there are styles of the drivers that give to the judges their best cues as to whether a driver is trying his best or not. Some are very vocal or rave to themselves.

Ed Geers the Master.

It is conceded by all horsemen that the pan of Ed Geers in laying with his horse in a good position to the head of the homestretch and then making his drive from the wire is the finest thing in every possible inch of speed to win. In this way, Geers has been serving in front at as a wind shield for the better part of the race, so horses and trips, with the strength of the performer is husbanded for the final spurt to the wire, thus laying the animal all his strength for the triumphant brush that is the finishing eighth of the distance.

Directly opposite to this method is the way of Lou Dillon's driver. He follows the idea of Bill Daly, the running horseman, who tells his horse to get a good start and then make every post around the track a winning post as long as he can hide, and if the horse loses to have him die in front.

McDonald Rushes to Front.

When the word is given almost invariably McDonald goes right out and takes the track, first thing, breaking a couple of lengths back. Just as long as he can keep the lead McDonald keeps at his mount, but when opposition comes, his horse is raced out, as it were, double bad in straightening back to the leaders when nearing the wire. In driving this way McDonald has been severely criticised by the talent, but his total purse winnings of the past season show that he must have principles, as he stands second in money won to Pickens of all the drivers in the country.

Henry Tiller got the habit of racing in front with a pace that proved fatal on old days, and it took him many years to overcome the fault. Those who saw him win with Chimo Bells at Lexington, Ky., this Fall declare that no driver ever handled a horse better. Tiller got the word Chime Bells directly in the rear of the front bunch from the start, and he kept him stretch and then by well timed drives outfinished them to the wire.

Jimmy Carpenter is one of the cleverest in the profession in nursing a tired horse for the big end of the purse. He gets his horses around out some in a finish, but the use of the whip in wholesale quantities is unknown to Carpenter's book, though he can touch a horse in different places fully as quick as any man. It is one of the beasts that he now has the same whip, and original snapper on, for eight years, and it has been in constant use.

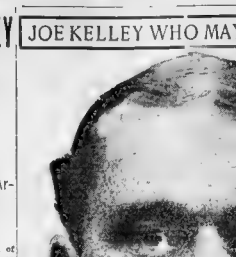
KELLEY WILLING TO COME; TORONTO BLOCKING DEAL

JOE KELLEY WHO MAY COME TO HUB



PRESIDENT DOVEY WILL LET CASE DROP FOR PRESENT

Expected That Satisfactory Arrangements Will Be Made During the Winter.

The deal involving the management of the Boston Nationals by Joe Kelley is on the tabe cooling off. President George Dovey and the player had several protracted conferences last week in New York, but no definite deal was made, and it was finally decided to let the matter rest for awhile and take it up again later.

Kelley is willing to come if he can secure a three years' contract and be allowed absolute charge of the players. It is understood that Mr. Dovey is not averse to this arrangement, but the owners of the Toronto club, of which Ansley was the manager last season, are trying hard to keep the player in Toronto, as he landed the team in first place last season.

During the Winter months it is thought an arrangement satisfactory to all concerned can be made, and for that reason the matter is being allowed to rest for the present.

Satisfactory arrangements are expected to be made during the Winter.

BIG ENTRY LIST OF BOSTON TERRIERS

The bench show committee of the Boston Terrier Club has been working tooth and nail to draw out a big entry for the annual show, which will take place in Mechanics' Building on November 13, 14, 15 and 16, and it looks as though the efforts would be highly successful.

Entries will not close until Tuesday night, so there is yet plenty of time for all the Boston dogs to get their names in line. From now on there will be a rush at the clerk office, No. 68 Cornhill. There are at present a number of specials, and it must be a poor dog that cannot win a bit of money at the show.

The secretary, William J. Green, of Philadelphia, as judge was well regarded in all quarters. Mr. Judge hails from Boston at the New York show of 1906 and the New England Kennel Club show of last February. He is a weekly young fancier and has made a hit in the ring wherever he has appeared.

LIVELY BOUTS ARE CARDED AT CHELSEA

Star Event Will Bring Together Mr. Rouse O'Brien and Mr. Dick Nelson.

Another show has been arranged for the members of the Winnisimmet Athletic Club, for election night. Four bouts are scheduled to take place in the ring at the section, which will be announced from the ring between the rounds.

The main event, between Dick Nelson and Rouse O'Brien, will determine whether Rouse is a better man than Billy Glover. The latter clashed in New York three times with Nelson in one month and at the conclusion of each affair Glover had all the worst of things.

The preliminary match is that between Joe Nelson, of Lynn, and Jack Dempsey, of the East Boston. Pat has been a prime favorite at the Boston Athletic Association for some time, though his vigorous ars e of boxing and his friendly relations with the ropes do not always please Referee Tuesday night.

Great things are expected of Billy Harlow of Char estown, who has been under the guidance of Gunner Moir for some time. He clashes with Johnny Fitzgerald of Lynn, who has been boxing and slugged his way into popularity in Chelsea for several weeks ago, will again be on boards. He is to oppose the champion of Shelly, Ed Lewis of the West End.

ORIENT A. A. WINS EASILY.

The Orient A. A. of Brighton topped with the Corinthian A. C of the Back Bay at Rogers Park, Brighton, yesterday, the final score being 6 to 0.

Tweedie scored the only points for the Corinthian, when he grabbed a blocked punt and raced for a touchdown the whole length of the field. Cox jumped a start and kicked a beautiful goal, making the score. O Meara also played a fine game, his stiff a goal from the 30 yard line and a difficult angle. Van Nelten also played a sterling game for Orient, while Kilburn played well for Corinthian. The score:

ORIENT A. A.		CORINTHIAN A. C.

WOODS DOWN HARVARD 1911

Worcester, Nov. 2.—In the third annual game between Woods Academy and the Harvard freshmen here today, the former won for the third time in a very clean played game by 6 to 0. Rain fell through the game.

Harvard was much heavier than the Woods team, but failed to gain. Once they got ball to the five yard line, only to lose it by a fumble. Woods academy's touchdown came in the first half. Rogers was credited to Woods' safety man.

Lady Mildred, 102 (Shilling), 4 to 1 and 2 to 1, third. Time 1:54 2-5. Lucullus, Sandy Hook, Lucky Jack, Rose and Agile also ran.

SIXTH RACE—Two-year-old maidens; six furlongs—Hilmer, 105 (Hilmer), 10 to 1 and 4 to 1, won. Rolando, 105 (Foster), 7 to 2 and 7 to 5, second. Lord Blackjack, 105 (Flint), 4 to 1 and 2 to 1, third. Time 1:14 4-5. Pendleton, Lucullus, Mamie Worth, Tattler, Rotating Around, Count Belmont and Mutt also ran.

PARODI'S FIELD GOAL WAS GAME'S FEATURE

Haverhill, Nov. 2.—By playing straight football Haverhill High succeeded in winning from Newburyport High on Holt's this afternoon by a score of 16 to 0. Haverhill won through Newburyport's inability to do anything worthy of being called a good offensive game. Captain Nat Parodi's field goal from placement was the feature of the game. The summary:

HAVERHILL HIGH		NEWBURYPORT HIGH
Bell, l.e.		Mc Lean
Bowen, l.t.		Kelley, Sweeney
Leard, l.g.		Hoyt
Mitchell, c.		Ryan
Gorman, r.g.		Sullivan

TOMMY MURPHY IMPROVING.

Tommy Murphy is rounding to again and may be seen in the ring again about the 15th of this month. Tommy is under the care of a specialist, but is doing light work every day and gaining strength rapidly. Johnny Ollie has been offered a match for Murphy at New Haven to fight the winner of the Summers Keyes go, but Matty Baldwin, and if Murphy's condition continues to improve his admirers will put him back in the ring about the middle of next month.

PACKEY IS NOT AFTER GANS

Chicago Lightweight Won't Look for Such Game Just Yet.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 2.—Down East they have an idea that Packey McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, is making eyes at the title held by Joe Gans—not the title he tried to hand over to George Memsic after he thrashed the latter out in Los Angeles, but the real one that Gans will carry until he is beaten.

The fight writers have no idea that Gans is going to remain on the retired list for any great length of time. They figure that Joe will sit very soon for a match for the championship of the world, and figure that the length of time intervening can be measured only by the success or failure of Joe's new hotel in Baltimore.

Packey Not After Gans.

But McFarland is no Mrs. Jiggs, fond of tackling any such game as he knows the black man is. He is not going to furnish the food for Gans's self if he can possibly help it. Packey has designs on Abe Attell and Packey believes he will not be called upon to fight Gans for a considerable time, or until he has cleaned up several of the fancy champions of the world.

It is true that Gans is all out of opponents. With the exception of McFarland and probably the more there is none in sight for him. McFarland cannot figure wherein that fortune him into a fight with Gans, although he is the better player to come to the centre of the ring.

"There is one possibility," is all Packey will say in discussing the future as far as Gans is concerned. From this it is plain that the McFarland Gilmore Gans contention has been beat at present and Packey knows a way for the highest target in the game.

HONEY SAYS LUCKY PUNCH BEAT HIM

Dayton, O., Nov. 2.—Frank Mantell of Providence, R. I., received many congratulations to-day for his victory over Honey Mellody in 6 rounds, when Mantell in the fifteenth round of their fight last night. Mellody had the best of the fight until the seventh round, when Mantell suddenly took a spurt and finished like a cyclone. Mellody says it was simply a "lucky punch" that ended the fight.

LYNN HORSEMEN OPEN SPEEDWAY

Lynn, Nov. 2.—The Lynn Driving Club to-day gave the Meadow Park speedway its formal opening, assisted by the city government and Park Commission, followed by deciding thirteen races over the new course, which was watched with interest by fully 3,000 persons.

The celebration started with a parade from City Hall, through the principal streets of the city, and thence to the speedway. Major Barney, members of the city government, and Park Commissioner Hall headed the escort of the driving club. The parade was led by Chief Marshal Atkins. A. Bruce, and his assistants were Charles H. Cowdrey, Dr. Dunkerley, E. Coburn, L. M. Judkins and G. Woods. Different classes of horses, from the fast trotters and pacers owned by members of the driving club, to the fifty division comprised of pleasure and business vehicles, including the fire department, made a long line.

The speedway is a quarter of a mile long, and cost $8,000, not including the land, on the city property, and runs along the whole strip comprising Meadow Park. It was in pretty fair condition to-day for racing over, though a little heavy from the recent rains.

Today Laurin, the champion pacer of the Lynn Driving Club, was winner over Little Sidney, but the latter gained the honors of the day in the fastest record of the speedway, 2:14 seconds in the second heat. Today's racing was a repetition of the same successfully the past season, placed the trotting record of the course at 33 seconds, and was beaten to the pace by Rose Mack, who won the three following heats. RIDERS GET READY FOR BIG BIKE RACE

Park Square Track Will Be Opened Saturday Night.

Next Saturday night the first indoor bike races that have been held in years will take place on the new ten lap track in the Park Square Rink, and some of the most exciting events in the annals of sport are scheduled for the evening.

This week all the big riders will gather at the track, taking daily workouts in preparation for the event. The first start is a week from Monday. The following week the second early part of the week and also the Western cracks and the Eastern boys will be on hand for the bike world.

Eddie Root, the three-time champion of the Madison Square Garden six day races, will be here to-morrow. His wheels and training utensils are already on the scene, and Manager Hanlon says he is to have a team with Jimmy Moran, will also be on hand. Hully, the only other Boston boy in the ocean, coming to the Hub, and Eimer Collins, the boy who made such a hit with the last of the week. He stayed in France to fill a contract, and is now on his way.

The list of riders: Morgan, Moran, Kramer, Lawson, Brooks and the others have stolen a march on the boys who have had a chance to try the track out.

The management of the Park Square has the men will be forced to keep up a hard pace for a while, and the cracks are in favor of the riders from the start line.

Yesterday Turville, the expert pacemaker, tried his new motor trick and turned off mile in 1:25 with apparent ease. He said some sensational things to do before he made when the races were on.

JIM SMART TO MEET STRANGLER LEWIS

Jim Smart, the Englishman, and the best wrestler in the heavyweight division that has been England, has challenged Strangler Lewis, Jr., a stumbling block to many of them, is the attraction that the Columbia Theatre offers to the fans for the big feature sport on next Wednesday night. The manager of the house is willing to pay as not to conflict with the wrestling returns. The boss promises to wire Lewis, and declaring his victory will be made pro-Smart is very aggressive and has no doubt that he will be declared the winner.

Los Angeles Club Owner Says James J. Is Taking Tip-top Care of Himself.

New York, Nov. 2.—Henry Berry, owner of the Los Angeles Baseball Club, who was here attending the meeting of the National Association, held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, denies the report of Jim Jeffries's dissipation, was about the most dest person in the city.

Mr. Berry is one of the most prosperous and best known sporting and business men in Los Angeles. He is intimately acquainted with Jeffries's every-day movements, sees him daily, and is also connected with him in a business way.

Here is what Mr Berry says of Jeffries: "Jim Jeffries was never in better condition in every way, mentally, physically and financially, than he is to-day. He is the superior of one of the biggest and best paying cafes in Los Angeles, which he recently purchased; is attending strictly to business and drinking nothing but water.

"There is no man in Los Angeles thought better of than Jim Jeffries, and the report that he is living in a whirl of dissipation is without foundation. I left him only a little over a week ago, and he was down to the depot to see me off. I never saw him looking better. There is not an ounce of superfluous flesh on his big frame, and he can whip all the fighters around Los Angeles in a few rounds. He is training for the highest target in the game.

"Why, Jim," continued Berry, "is taking two hours' exercise every day in the Los Angeles Athletic Club gymnasium, also handball and doing other athletic stunts. He is in the best of condition, and is doing fine never looked better."

YOST'S KICKERS BEAT VANDERBILT

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 2.—Yost's team of Ann Arbor athletes defeated Vanderbilt, champions of the South, this afternoon, 8 to 0, before the largest crowd that ever witnessed a game in this part of the country.

Michigan outweighed the Vanderbilt men about ten pounds to the man. Custon's fumbles made the first goal possible after Vanderbilt had held Michigan for downs time and again, once on the four-yard line. Graham kicked both goals.

GREAT CRUSH AT OPENING OF GARDEN AUTO SHOW

Hub Well Represented at the "Licensed" Exhibition in New York.

By J. C. Kerrison.

New York, Nov. 2.—The eighth annual automobile show, known as the "licensed show," opened in the Madison Square Garden this evening. It was a marvelous sight the people of Greater New York and likewise the placing on exhibition of the representative motor vehicles of this country, and incidentally of their new autos. This show is held under the auspices of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, and is therefore known as the "licensed show," whereas that which closed in the Palace on Thursday evening was under the auspices of the non-licensed Independent Manufacturers' Association and the Automobile Club of America. Each of course is the place where the manufacturers of the country take pains to display the very best in the way of motor construction known not only to this country but also to the entire civilized world.

The opening this evening was entirely in keeping with those of previous shows, in fact, the audience was, that the attendance was greater than ever, the first-nighters turning out in record breaking numbers.

Great Crush at Garden.

Once the doors were opened there was a rush for the interior and soon the Garden became a mass of moving humanity which surged all around. So densely was the hall crowded that it was with difficulty that one could make a move. The best thing to do was to be carried along with the river of humanity.

Surging along one aisle and back on the other one of the main floor, then our the elevated platform, the balconies, concert hall, restaurant and basement, the thousands of first nighters caught glimpses of the many cars new and interesting in motor designs and in the accessories of motor travel, but they had little chance to get detailed information if they kept to the aisles, for the fresh arrivals on the crowd from the doorway fed its impetus steadily and effectually previous any tendency to lag.

To get a comprehensive idea of a new model necessitated stepping from the aisle into the exhibitors' space and tarrying there so long that the time remaining for a survey tour of the whole was insufficient. Those who did essay to view the show and secure an early account of it, as well would it when they departed, had only a confused jumble of glimpses and no definite impression of to say nothing of rush and crush, crane forms, irritant exclamations and the like that marked the first hours.

Hub Well Represented.

It was almost impossible to meet and greet friends from other cities, and consequently the men who came here to be a portion of exhibit to do all they could towards advancing the business interests of their particular line of products. Late to well until the day of rest in order to attend their legislative work or to look after the general matters pertaining to the trade in Boston was well represented, and quite a number of that city, the majority of whom arrived this morning, were present this evening. Many, although not all, of the Boston men will remain over Monday, a large party will go to Yonkers to attend a meeting of the racing made special arrangements for the special train to the great industrial exhibition.

The Garden has been materially changed in appearance at least from the point of previous years. By overhanging the platforms built over the balcony seats 10,000 feet of space have been gained in the decoration of the pictorial effect is that of a terrestrial garden. There is much less ornamentation in staff work, with a consequent gain in the open space and out-of-door feeling. It probably has been thought that a simpler setting would lend more lustre to the gems of the automobile industry.

Gray, Crimson and White.

The color scheme is gray and crimson and white. The girders of the big dome are screened by a canopy of gray cloth, warm gray in tone. The exhibition spaces of the main floor and elevated platforms are carpeted with a specially woven fabric of deep crimson, with the visitors' aisles between sharply set off by the gray material. Entering from the foyer, the visitor is confronted by a towering arch of gray, a replica of the Porta Romana villa, in Florence.

The same gray and crimson scheme is found in the cafe and basement, but in the latter place the walls that do not flank exhibit aisles are pierced covered. A rathskeller with novel artistic effect is located in an out of the way corner of the basement.

In the concert hall, a departure in the decorative scheme has been made by arranging it as an extensive rose garden, set with latticed arbors in green and white. There is an arched entrance, with lattices of the double diagonal pattern framed in white, several dividing lattice down the hall while the walls under the balconies and back of the stage are finished with the same quaint and restful design.

Cars the Real Attraction.

In the first general view the impression stored is that of a magnificent display of motor cars decked out as at some fair. The cars are the more prominent and not the decorations of the garden. The decoration is elaborate and brilliant, but it is contributory and not primary. The cars themselves are handsomer, more vivid in coloring and, in the average larger than formerly, while the decorative scheme is somewhat less garish in color and more free from ghastly and hysterical staff work. The unusual number of big six cylinder models and of enclosed cars in hill and dale being greatly to make the decorative scheme what it should be—setting.

So the present show keeps on the record of increase that this remarkable industry has shown each passing year. It is a larger one in every way, although one distinct branch of the business, that of the foreign cars which has figured in these shows heretofore, has been segregated and assigned a separate date of exhibition. As against the last January, there are in the Garden show more than 200 exhibits. There are thirty-one different makes of gasoline cars, one make of steamer, eight different brands of electric cars and an assortment of thirteen commercial vehicles. This footing up fifty-three different makes of cars, besides which there are fifteen different sorts of motorcycles and 211 different varieties of accessories.

Among the cars are eleven six-cylinder models, ranging in price from $2,000 to $6,500 each, with a seating capacity for seven persons and ranging in bore of cylinder from 4¼ to 5 inches. They are rated in horsepower according to the new A. L. A. M. rating, from forty-two to seventy. In this horsepower rating there are some rather odd figures, such as 42, 46.6, 48, 43, 51, etc. The A. L. A. M. rating is the first standard system to be adopted in this country and it will be well for purchasers this year to take notice as to how the cars that they fancy are rated.

Medium Price Cars.

In the class of cars costing less than $2,000 there are more than a half dozen touring cars seating four or five passengers. In this group are two with planetary transmission, the Cadillac and the Northern, the rest have sliding transmissions. They are all water-cooled except the Franklin, and four six-cylinder cars accept that distinction in touring car body.

In the two-cylinder touring car class, ranging in horsepower from twenty-eight to forty-five, all of them are shaft drive, have selective transmission and jump spark ignition in a body of that kind, in all some one dozen varieties. In the group will be found the Kissel, Franklin, Cadillac, Hupmobile, Pope-Hartford, Thomas-Detroit, Knox, Corbin, Autocar, Selden and Oldsmobile.

In the group of cars costing less than $4,000 there are about a dozen models, ranging in price from $3,000 to $3,500, they are all five-seaters, except the North-up and the Haynes, six-seaters, all of them have magneton except the Stevens-Duryea and the Northern, and they are all jump spark except the Columbia and the Studebaker, which have make and break.

In the group of cars costing between $4,000 and $5,000, there are a dozen seven seaters ranging from forty to sixty horsepower, ranging between forty and forty-five. They are all water-cooled and sliding transmissions and all have jump spark ignition except the Matheson, which has make and break. They all have magneton and batteries, and all have four-speeds forward and reverse.

In the group of big seven seated touring cars, costing between $4,000 and $7,000, there are nearly a dozen different models with most luxurious bodies, both touring and limousine. Five eights are in these and are all very powerful with cylinder bore and stroke of more than five inches. They are all water cooled and have very long wheel bases, and all have sliding transmission except the Columbia, which has electric transmission. The Thomas in this group has a horsepower of 72, and the engine is L-head. The Peerless in this group is also a very high-powered car, being rated by the A. L. A. M. rating at 60.8.

Fine Lot of Runabouts.

Another very interesting group of cars is that of the two and three-seated runabouts, ranging in price from $1,700 to $4,000. This group includes the Franklin, at $1,750, with 16 horsepower; the Studebaker, at $3,500, with 37 horsepower; the Columbia, at $3,000, with 28 horsepower; the Oldsmobile, $2,750, with 30 horsepower; Packard, $4,200, with 30 horse power; Cadillac, $1,600, 24 horsepower; Autocar, at $1,200, 12 horsepower; Autocar, $2,750, 24 horsepower; Cadillac, $1,600, 30 horse power; Packard $4,200 with 36 horsepower; Knox, $2,500, with 30 horsepower.

There are also a fine display of four-seated runabouts or "roadsters," ranging from $1,000 to $6,000.

Persons who are interested in limousines will have a splendid choice of nearly a score of models, about half of them are four-seaters and the other half seven seaters. The price range is from $4,000 for the 24 horsepower Northern to the 60 horsepower Matheson at $6,000.

Many Six Cylinders.

Those interested in six-cylinder cars will find more than a dozen very pretty models ranging in price from $2,500 to $7,000, and provided with all manner of magnificent touring and limousine bodies, and also a great variety of six-cylinder runabouts, some holding only two passengers and some four, in the list of licensed makers who are showing six-cylinder models are the Franklin, Thomas, Stevens, Peerless, Pope-Hartford, Stevens-Duryea, Pierce and Winton.

In addition to these gasoline purveyors cars, visitors find in a smaller salon apart ment the Baker electric, with a great variety of very beautiful electric broughams, victorias, coupes, runabouts, landaulets, etc. Overshadowing the Baker in the electric vehicle, in a great profusion is the Rauch & Lang, of Cleveland, and there is probably the most interesting exhibition of automobile accessories and clothing ever brought together in this country.

HIGH PRICED CARS WANTED

James Joyce, general manager of the American Locomotive Automobile Company, says that the sale of many cheap cars one year augurs well for large sales of the best cars the year following, and that the more cheap cars there are sold, the better becomes the prospect of a steady demand for machines made with all economical expenditure in the matter of upholstering, furnishing, etc. Mr. Joyce believes "small garage cars" do thrive, is like a classic compared with a novel of the times.

STUDEBAKER CO. TO BOOM AUTOS NOW

President Says the Motor Will Surely Take the Place of the Horse Vehicles.

That there is something much more important about the New York shows than any that have been given before, in the business aspect of the automobile, is conceded on all sides.

It is evidenced by the shaping of widespread business policies on the part of houses of reputation. A striking example of it was made by the announcement that William R. Innes, president and general manager of the Studebaker Brothers Company of New York.

That house with its large and varied interests in this year putting the automobile to the front as its most important product, is significant.

"It has been the policy of Studebaker for the last ten years or so," Mr. Innes said, "to advertise and sell whatever everything on wheels.

"The Studebaker Company has regarded its course in the automobile trade in the past as greatly in the nature of a commercial experiment, and the results, as shown by the figures, give interested people a peculiarly good position to judge with out prejudice.

"We are now satisfied that the future—in fact, the present—of the automobile business justifies our attacking the question in exactly the same vigorous and comprehensive manner as we have developed our entire business from the beginning.

Will Boom Autos This Year.

"Automobiles will this year be the big Studebaker line. While we are doing the biggest horse-wagon and carriage business we have ever done in our history, our experience in the automobile business for the past six years has convinced us of the overwhelming superiority of automobile business wagons for city service.

"We know from our dual experience that it is only a question of time and a short time—when the business automobile will overshadow our attacking the horse.

"Having reached the conviction we propose to lead the energy and vigor of our organization in that direction, because we believe it not only desirable as a broad gauge thing, but that it is to our own interest to do so—and this is our principal future interest in the matter.

"We have also become convinced as a result of our observation and experience from these last six years, that the electric pleasure vehicle is but the toy that most people originally supposed it to be, and that when encountered from a broad viewpoint to take care of them, they represent a measure of economy for those classes with whom economy of operation is a legitimate feature.

"Salaried officials and other people of good income, who would not ordinarily be prepared to maintain a chauffeur and touring car, will find the electricity as one or more horses and horse vehicle, and the electric vehicle as economy over the horse vehicle, and a very decided one. "It is only necessary that this conviction be borne in the public mind to create the demand for this class of vehicle with enormous.

"As for our judgment of the gasoline touring car situation, we feel that the fortune to have produced one of the very highest grade cars in the world, and we are in a position to make that car first class and will do so.

"As long as each year saw radical differences in construction—as was the more or less unbusinesslike advertising of each season's products—there was a new industry felt called upon to manufacture. But the remarkably good changes of design on existing models have proved the permanency and stability of the automobile business, and at least permissible.

Auto Industry Permanent.

"But the last year has shown this practice to have been entirely discredited by the most reputable makers, and the end of the time has arrived when there are great differences between cars produced in the early and those produced in the so-called season' than there are between cars made by the same factory in successive seasons.

"This condition surely indicates the end of mechanical experiments. It gives us an opportunity to realize the economy and financial experiment without the fear of a revolutionary invention.

"The importance we now attach to the sensible and utilitarian side of the automobile business and the extent to which we desire to avoid sensations, or freak as we say kind, is indicated in the view we take of the comparatively unimportant question of wheel base in touring cars.

"It seems hardly necessary to argue the fact that the long wheel base car has no place in city or suburban use more than oldness and flexibility is of importance."

MEN AT HEAD OF GOTHAM SHOW

A. A. A. Likely to Re-elect Present Officers This Week

This coming week will witness the annual meeting of the American Automobile Association. It is not to be known as though the present board of officers will be re-elected. There is no opposition to the present officers from the men who are entitled to the vote of the clubs and the individuals whom they may represent.

Judge Hotchkiss, the president of the A. A. A., while having certain set ideas as to reform in racing, has during his term of office done that which he really believes for the best interests and welfare of the organization, and because he does not look on racing as do others is no real reason why he should be laid aside, especially at a time when he is just getting the affairs in that office and the association into shape. It has been said that there is a possibility of Dr. Lewis of Buffalo being elected as secretary of the association, but it is only a possibility, as the present incumbent, Mr. Elliott, has done good work and there is no reason why he should be sidetracked.

Same Old Committees.

The re-election of the present officials means the retention of the present executive committees of the several standing committees, such, for instance, as the racing, touring, good roads and legislative committees. In the past these committees have been too unwieldy for any practical purpose, and it would seem advisable to only appoint a sufficient number of men to make an active working committee, say three, for instance, instead of appointing twenty-five or more individuals to committees and then making an committee of five thereof.

Jefferson De Mont Thompson will unquestionably be retained as chairman of the racing committee, and it is to be hoped that he will accept a reappointment, as he has proved about as good a man in the position as it has been possible to secure. A. R. Pardington is another man who should be given a position on the racing boards, as he is perhaps as conversant with racing details as any one other man in the country.

Chairman Hower will, it is understood, be invited to accept a reappointment as chairman of the touring committee.

Say State Not Represented.

Whoever makes up the executive committee of the racing board it is hoped will bear in mind the fact that during the past year Massachusetts was without a representative on the executive committee, although it had two men on the board as state representatives, which positions are merely ornamental. As Massachusetts contributes more to A. A. A. finances than any other State in racing history, that State should certainly be given representation among the men who are more than ornamental positions. The executive committee consists of twelve men, nine of whom hail from New York, one each from Rhode Island, Cleveland and Chicago.

UNIFORM MOTOR LAW FOR ALL STATES

Bill Is Fair to Public and Autoists and Will Soon Be Ready.

Lewis R. Speare, chairman of the legislative committee of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association, and Francis Hurtubis, Jr., counsel for the State association, to-day returned from a trip to New York where they attended the meetings of the executive committee of the American Automobile Association, and a convention of automobilists held to consider the question of automobile legislation.

The new uniform motor vehicle law for the states of the Union was carefully gone over, and it will soon be put in its final form for presentation to the Legislature. It is believed by Mr. Speare and Mr. Hurtubis that this bill, when presented into law, will put the automobile under such conditions in this Commonwealth. The bill is believed to be fair to the public as well as to the automobilists, and it is hoped that it will commend itself to all persons desirous of seeing sound legislation regulating the operation of automobiles upon the highways of this Commonwealth.

MEDIUM PRICE CARS ARE IN DEMAND

"Quite contrary to the facts is the more or less impression that owing to the present tightness of the money market is responsible for a falling off of automobile sales," says Benjamin Briscoe. "This is not the case in so far as the Maxwell Briscoe Motor Company is concerned, although I am willing to believe that fewer sales have been recorded by the manufacturers of higher-priced cars. Nor is it very difficult to find the reason for this seeming incongruity. There are those who, in ordinary circumstances, insist on much more than paying a high price for a motor car as they are unwilling to wear a garment made by a first-class tailor.

"Let an automobile purchase is a more serious consideration, and some of our customers have come to the conclusion that the car of the Maxwell type, that is, of medium price and good reputation, serves their present needs as the higher priced vehicle, because it performs satisfactory service, and does it at lower cost. Besides, it seems to me that Maxwell purchasers are of the kind that keep their money in savings banks; in short, they are people to whom the making of their money's worth rather than for pretension."

LEAKY VALVES CAUSE TROUBLE

Half the lost power of a badly working engine is often due to leaky valves and valves whose timing is out of adjustment. Test the cylinders one at a time and see if one is not taking its impulses in a sluggish, ineffective way, while the others are doing most of the work. If this is found to be so, as is often the case, the spark should be looked to and then the valves. Making sure that each cylinder gets its spark at the right instant, and adjust the timing of the valves so that its charge of vapor is exploded at the very greatest use. The instruction books issued by the manufacturers contain minute directions and should be carefully read, as they are the best counsellors and guides for automobilists.

WILL ANNOUNCE CUP RACE PLANS

A. A. A. Will Hold Its Annual Meeting in New York This Week.

Spurred on by criticism, the American Automobile Association at its annual meeting during the coming week in New York is said to have a number of things in mind to attempt to rebuke the critics by giving to the automobile world many events which will automatically become that they should have.

At this meeting the A. A. A. is likely to announce some great contests to take place in or near the latter spring. It is also likely to sanction the stripped stock touring car race for next Spring. It is also likely that plans for the handicap cup race will be announced. It is said that this event will now take place whether the Long Island Parkway is or is not completed, inasmuch as so many courses have been thrown open for such a test.

It is also not at all unlikely that arrangements will be made to alter some of the laws in force at present and that Indianapolis will receive some considerations, whether they go or not, for being selected. The annual tour for next year will be discussed and plans will be laid for this event, which will be the greatest event of history. It is not at all improbable that other plans of competition will be projected and also not at all improbable that automobile racing for cups will be set in some safe inclosed circuit, track racing will be written into the rules of the A. A. A. section. The A. A. A. officials do not particularly like the plan on which has been hooped upon them of late, and at their meeting will discuss possible plans to stem the tide against them by organizations of private individuals and also of competition for future years to come.

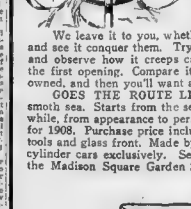
NO AUTOS IN NATIONAL PARKS

The request of a State motorist to take his automobile to Lonsmire Springs in the Mount Rainier reserve has brought to light an old set of rules, which, it is hoped, will be modified if Secretary of the Interior Garfield wears he returns from his Western trip. The Secretary made this supplication to Forester Allen of Orting, who heard the application of the motorist, who defied the request. The Secretary, in denying the request, called attention to the fact that the Interior Department will not allow electric railroads, nor will it allow automobiles in national park, and because of that he had been compelled to refuse the automobile.

As near as can be learned while the motor vehicle if not specified it is included under the old rule, and it is not likely that it will be a great disappointment to automobilists when the rules are revised. Recently another Seattle man made the run from Seattle to Tacoma in his car, the automobile over the new Government road. The drivers have been coming through to the time when they could go through the Mount Rainier park, but it was learned that the Government has expended thousands of dollars on the road, and it will be some time before it is completed. The scenery along it is pretty good, and while the ruling no doubt affects automobilists in general, it is believed those in other sections will be interested, as the ruling may be a step in authority that will affect the province of Secretary Garfield to modify, change, alter or place a different interpretation upon it.

TIE IN BASKET BALL.

Edmunds, A. C., of Roxbury played the Eliot A. C. last night to a draw, each team making seven points. Score 16 to 16. The first rules of the game were the team work of the winners and the defence of the losers.



WINTON

"That's The Finest Ride I Have Ever Enjoyed."

Must be a lot of merit in the new Winton Six-cylinder Six-Teen-Six to draw praise like that from veterans of the steering wheel—men who have had ones, twos and fours, air-cooled, water-cooled, two-cycle, four-cycle, steamers, electrics and gasolines. Must be pretty smooth automobile.

We leave it to you, whether it is or not. Try it on the hills—the worst hills you can find, and see it conquer them. Try its speed, and mark if anything gets by. Get into crowded traffic and observe how it creeps cautiously along on the high speed and springs mercifully through the first opening. Compare it critically with the best motor car you or your friends have ever owned, and then you'll want a Six-Teen-Six.

GOES THE ROUTE LIKE COASTING DOWN HILL. Rides like a palatial yacht on a smooth sea. Starts from the seat on compressed air. Ideal in all that makes a motor car worth while, from appearance to performance. Output limited to 500 cars, making it the Exclusive Car for 1908. Purchase price includes five bow top, full set of lamps, gas tank or generator, horn, tools and glass front. Made by the only company in the world whose entire plant produces six-cylinder cars exclusively. See it now before Boston's small quota is gone. See our exhibit at the Madison Square Garden Show, N. Y., Nov. 2-9.

THE FLORIDA COAST AUTO RACES ARE SURE TO BE HELD

Long Events for Touring and Stock Cars Will Be Features of the Meet.

Something definite has been known in regard to the annual Winter Florida beach tournament. There have been rumors that a tournament would not take place on the famous sand coast on the Florida east coast this Winter, but that report was dispelled this week after a meeting in New York of the representatives of the Florida East Coast Automobile Association and others who have the tournament interests at heart.

Changes in Program.

A radical change is to be made in the program for the coming meet over that of former affairs, and the five or six record sprints will be more or less subordinated to two long distance races on the racing cars that were built for the abandoned Vanderbilt cup race on Long Island and the other for strictly stock cars of sixty-horsepower or less. The exact distances for these two races have not been as yet decided upon, but it is quite possible that the course will be specially constructed machines will be a similar distance to that of the long race. The race for the stock cars will probably be 200 to 250 miles.

A radical plan has been decided upon to protect the regular racing car from the so-called "stock" product. It is not quite possible that the "freak" will have to go through a preliminary secret trial before being allowed to enter in any thing under five miles. In other words, the management would possibly ask all drivers of all kinds of racing cars to engage in a twenty mile flat sprint at the minimum speed of say forty five seconds to the mile. This, it is thought, will eliminate any car constructed to go only one or two miles, and at the same time any long sprint they will be eligible for the mile and two-mile endurance runs.

There will be races for the regulation stock car and the parts will be arranged according to price. In the long race the stock car will be of the stripped variety, and the driver will be allowed to take off a good deal of the superstructure, such as the bonnet.

Plans for the Course.

Much discussion has been had in regard to the course. It was suggested that a half dozen half mile courses be laid out, but it is the firm conviction of the Florida East Coast people that such a plan is impossible as it would not only be dangerous to use the sand impossible road, but that it would put the drivers who are at the two bridges at either end of the course. It has therefore been decided to construct land loops at either end so that the turns can be made in both a fast and safe manner.

Further particulars will be given out in a day or so after the wishes of the Florida East Coast Automobile Association is further known, by its New York representatives, W. J. Morgan, whose headquarters are at Bretton Hall, Eighty sixth street and Broadway, New York.

TROOPS NEEDED FOR BIG RACE

State or national troops alike were found impossible to guard the course for the Vanderbilt race of this year. The "powers that be" tried their very best but failed to secure protection to guard the course for the greatest race ever run and a race which represented an industry earning many millions of dollars annually.

The Air Fleet could not bring about this protection by soldiers, but the Aero Club of America, an organization comparatively young, gives protection for a race in the air. The "Sky Pilots" who will sail to the heavens from St. Louis and reach earth hundreds of miles away, are to have protection, and President Roosevelt has himself requested Colonel K. R. Evans to lend every assistance and police the grounds with the national guard. It is said that the President did not take a like action because of a race of international importance when the race was held on terra firma where lives were endangered.

At St. Louis the Rubber Necks will hardly trouble people, and their lives can not be in danger. On the Vanderbilt course it was different last year, and with like protection to that granted the balloonists a race might have been held this year.

REVOKE LICENSES OF SCORCHERS

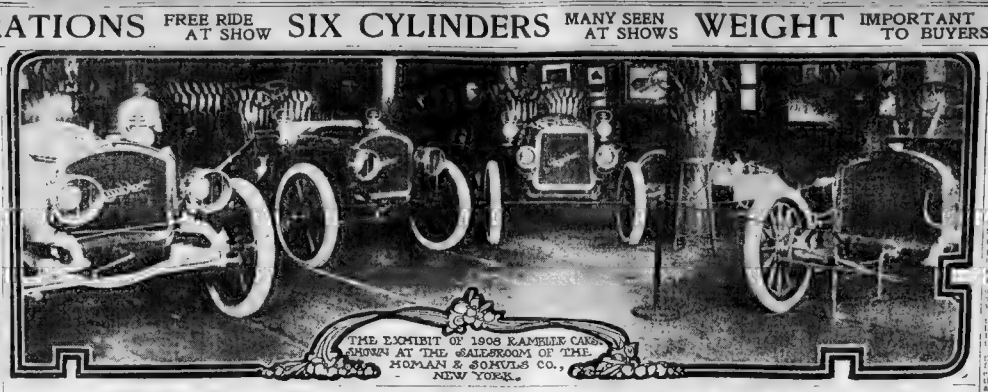
It is an unfortunate fact that in every line of sport the majority have to pay the penalty for the indiscretions of a few, and the motor car is not an exception to this rule. The street speed laws which exist in many sections are the direct result of open violation of public rights perpetrated by a few individuals and which have been instrumental in bringing forth a general feeling of ill will towards automobilists as a whole.

It is interesting to note that Massachusetts has taken the initiative against those motorists who drive while in an intoxicated condition, by revoking their licenses. This measure, though drastic, is none too strong for any one that has an little regard for the rights of other users of the highway to drive a powerful machine when really not responsible. He rightly should be protected by law against risking the lives of others. Motorists as a body will commend this action by the Massachusetts Legislature.

STAGG'S TEAM WESTERN CHAMPS

Minneapolis, Nov. 2.—Coach Stagg's Chicago Maroons are champions of the West. They defeated Minnesota today in a bitterly fought contest. Chicago's men finished the first half two points to the bad, but overcame that handicap, kept the Minnesota eleven from scoring in the second and finished with ten points to the good, the score being 18 to 8.

Early in the second half one section of the grand Minnesota rooting contingent was intense for a few moments until it was found that instead of a number of dead being buried in the debris, only five spectators had been slightly injured. Both sides tried the forward pass frequently, but Minnesota could not make it success fully.



CADILLAC COMPANY MAKES CONTRACT

One of the biggest tire contracts of the year has just been consummated between the Cadillac Automobile Company of Detroit, and the Hartford Rubber Works Company, the Morgan & Wright Company and the G. & J. Tire Company.

This is especially significant in view of the fact that this is the fourth consecutive year that the Cadillac people interested in this contract as one of the keen competitors among motor car builders, and have had unusual success in supplying their tire needs.

The terms of the contract specify that the Cadillac Company will use the goods of the above companies exclusively on their 1908 product, and, moreover, that they will adopt as standard equipment on all 1908 cars the new Mildrive universal rims. The Cadillac people say such facilities as if new concerns have been engaged in for years, and as a result they are looking for a great standard tire to serve not in a few particulars, but in the finishing touches on the best they can produce.

DON'T EXPERIMENT WITH AUTO TIRES

It is probable that the average motorist increases his expense by experimenting blindly with different tires and not taking the trouble to study the tires that are of certain fundamental facts about tire qualities which anyone can readily learn and if users would put themselves they could keep down their tire expense by selecting wisely. Generally speaking the tire that goes under the head of "speed tire" is not kept aloft. Another point should also be considered by the purchaser in getting what tires suit his car purposes who will test them out of the tires on special cars and special tires. For the tires whose greatest claim to speed fitness, a mechanically fastened tire for instance with a certain degree of a tire is better than is necessary. Instead of a tire selected in which there is something in it for them when they go to consider certain tires.

A. A. A. YEAR BOOK IS FULL OF MEAT

Nothing so compact and full of meaty information has been issued as the year book of the American Automobile Association, which is now coming from the press. For members there is every bit of data available about the organization together with its history from the beginning. For non-members the book is valuable, because of the complete statistics concerning the different States, the summary of each Vanderbilt race, the table of records, etc. Not a fact but members can obtain the book, however, and to them it will be sent without charge. Inquiries concerning same can also be sent to Secretary H. H. Lobdell, No. 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

A. E. MORRISON TO SELL RAINIERS

Personality counts for much in the automobile field because of the sport and trade being so inseparably associated. Certain men loom large, carrying success with them wherever they move, and these are the men who are sought for high-grade goods. In the new automobile move of the Reliance Company much wisdom has been displayed in the respect and some interesting combinations ensued. Fern Kirk, the veteran of many campaigns from the time of the horse hooks has come from retirement to take the Wide Western half of the country for Rainier cars. Another acquisition is that of the well known racing man and designer of Boston, A. E. Morrison, who will represent the Rainier interests in the Hub.

BILLY PAPKE TO MEET HUGO KELLEY

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Bill Papke, the ex-middleweight, has agreed to meet Hugo Kelley at the ring terms of 154 pounds, at 3 o'clock, whenever the fight can be arranged. Papke made this announcement in reply to Kelley's protest that, made shortly after he posed return from Italy, that he would meet any middleweight in America at 154 pounds, Papke preferred. The impression has got abroad that Jack Curley is behind the proposition and that Nevada will be the scene of the meeting, the date to be discussed later.

Ford Company Won't Tell Yet Its Motor Sensation

The announcement of the Ford Company that it was to have a new line of cars for 1908, as well as retaining its present line, caused quite a sensation in the motor circles of America —ing had expected that these lines would be displayed at the recent motor show in New York city, but Henry Ford, with the keen judgment which has ever been characteristic of himself and his firm, prefers to sa t a little while and then show the public just what he has got.

Local Manager Charles E. Fay says that the interest displayed by the public in this new line is decidedly in keeping with the great interest taken when it was first announced that his firm would build a four-cylinder runabout at a popular price. He declines to go into details on the new line, being content with the statement that the new models will be veritable sensations and will demonstrate that the Ford line is a year ahead of them all.

NEW IDEAS IN TIRES.

It seems probable that the time is near at hand when touring cars will carry on their running boards tires fully inflated and attached to their rims, instead of merely the outer shoes now carried. The improvement of detachable rims has been going on steadily, although quietly, and a new detachable rim of the Fisk pattern is now being put into commission that makes the foreign creations look like complicated puzzles. With this rim an amateur has been able to replace a punctured tire with an inflated one in one minute and ten seconds.

ARGENTINE PREFERS AMERICAN GOODS

San Francisco, Nov. 2—At the St. Francis Hotel is one of the largest ranch owners of the Argentine Republic, Manuel A. Errasquin of Buenos Ayres. He is a young man who has widely traveled and has says that his country is providing a profitable market for agricultural machinery of American make. English machines are more durable than those made in America, he states, but the latter are cheaper, and it is better business to buy two American machines than one of English make. Relatively, the life of an American machine is three years, while that of an Eng sh machine is six years. It is more after ways American commerce is making strides in his country. He states that great quantities of shoes are being sold where a few years ago the French had the market almost to themselves.

"I am sorry," he went on to say, "that there are very few Americans in my country. I wish there were more Argentina s, without doubt, the most prosperous country in South America. There are not poor people there; all are comfortably fixed, and capital pays anywhere from 12 to 20 per cent. The Argentine is particularly adapted especially to the raising of wheat, but there are many cattle ranches, and it is not uncommon to see 4,000 cattle on one farm.

"It is impossible to stable, of course, so large a number, and the climate is mild and the cattle are allowed to run on the ranges the year round. The result is there is little or no disease among the cattle and tuberculosis is practically unknown. We raise principally short horns and Holsteins, and breeding experiments are being made to develop cattle that will better meet the requirements of the trade. I have observed in this country that the American short-horn is much better than the English short-horn."

GOES TO MARKET IN HIS AUTO

That the motor car is a resourceful vehicle is being exemplified by the number of pleasure cars which are utilized for what might be termed strictly business purposes. For instance, a resident of Hartford who does business in several towns has forty-five-horsepower Columbia to carry him to and from his place of business, and frequently he makes three round trips a day. He claims that it is not only a faster mode of transportation, but more economical, and then he has a chance to enjoy himself while en route. Another Columbia owner had the woman removed from his eighteen horsepower car and substituted a box. He is a market gardener, and it transports his produce to the market in the early morning. When he has a little spare time he removes the box, replaces the tonneau, and goes with the family for a pleasure drive. Another Columbia owner, who is connected with a dry goods house, drives the firm's light delivery, and does it much quicker than it was formerly done by horses.

JOCKEYS FOR THE COAST.

During the forthcoming race meeting at Oakland, Cal., the following jockeys will ride: J. Miller, for T. H. Williams; Radtke, for J. Oliver Keene; Duran, for C. E. Durnell; G. Burns, for H. J. Knapp, free lance; Landry, for Dr. Rowell; Hildebrand, Fleur de Lis stable; Dreyfus, for J. Fitzsimmons; Cann, for N. C. Hildreth; Hendrix, for W. H. Jennings; Kennedy, for Jennings; Hendrix, for C. F. Burnell, and England, for M. L. Hagman.

TIE GAME AT AUBURN.

Auburn, Me., Nov. 2.—R. L. H. S. and Westbrook Seminary played a tie game this afternoon. Its score being 6 to 6. Westbrook, however, has entered a protest on the grounds that one of the R. L. H. men was off side when goal was kicked. If the claim is allowed the game will go to Westbrook, score 6 to 5.

In the event that you do not care to invest $4200 in a 1908 Packard, of which we have a few desirable deliveries left, a 1907 at $3000, or a 1906 at $2000, represent extremely good values.

Ask the man who bought a second-hand car of us last year.

MANY WOMEN ARE CLEVER MOTORISTS

The question whether or not women should drive automobiles is being much discussed in London. "That they are not incapable of managing an automobile there is plenty of evidence," says a writer in Modern Society, "and in the person of Miss Dorothy Levitt it has been proved that the most powerful machine and the highest speed have no terrors for the sex. But where women do undoubtedly fail as automobilists is at the critical moment. When it is a case of peril ahead and instantaneous action the woman at the wheel almost invariably hesitates and is lost.

Up to the present time no difficulties have been raised by the authorities in any country concerning the issue of automobile licenses to women after due experiment. The authorities class all applicants together, whether male or female, and deliver the necessary certificates after consideration. In England no test is yet necessary. Very few have ever been refused to blind men and lunatics, and probably the rattle whose words are quoted above would rather see women of sound mind at the wheel of fare automobiles than people of this and although in motoring attire. So far, it must be admitted, few cases of accident have been reported where women have been at the wheel and it is not perhaps altogether fair to argue that this is because very few women ever drive at all. There are many more women drivers in America and Great Britain than is generally supposed.

WATER TAR OIL FOR HIGHWAYS

Water tar oil has had its first test in the vicinity of Syracuse as a substance for laying dust on much traveled highways. A strip of road running by the Onondaga Golf Clubhouse was oiled for a quarter of a mile and the experiment proved so satisfactory that the Automobile Club of Syracuse may take up the project of oiling all the roads out of the city. The Fayetteville road has been the worst in the vicinity of Syracuse, and the club members were already endowed with four hours passing had motors.

The oiling experiment was conducted by A. D. Dudley, who first had the road scraped and then had two loads of water tar oil applied with hand sprinklers. It did not have the desired effect. A sprinkling wagon was tried and between fifteen and twenty barrels of oil were used. The oil soaked into the roadbed and the result was not quite clean but it is said enough. The State Fair Commissioner has arranged to sprinkle the thoroughfare to the fair grounds. He will also have all the streets within the fair grounds sprinkled with oil.

RIM PROBLEM HARD TO SOLVE

The entire motoring world has been greatly interested and concerned over the universal rim problem almost from the beginning of the automobile industry in this country. Tire manufacturers, automobile manufacturers, accessory manufacturers, inventors, have all given exhaustive thought and gone to great expense in devising and making rims that would at once fit any standard wheel and take any standard tire, clincher or single.

Most of the leading tire makers have a quick detachable rim which they are anxious to have adopted as standard, but until the present invention of Thomas Midgley, inventor of the first detachable bead rim, the Midgley Universal rim, the Midgley Trend and many other successful and important automobile accessories for rims, without exception, which in most cases possessing a great many points of merit, have fallen short for one reason or the other of being thoroughly practical and satisfactory.

The turnbuckle feature which has been such a success on the former Midgley Universal rim will be retained in the present rim.

VERMONT SUCCUMBS TO WILLIAMS TEAM

Green Mountain Boys Show Up Well and Prevent Shutout.

[illegible] from ten to twelve yards at a clip, and after about five minutes of play, Lamont was pushed through for a score.

Getting the ball on the next kickoff, the purple tore big holes in the Vermont line and soon had the Green Mountain boys on the run. Lamont again carried the ball over.

In the second half Vermont started things with a rush, getting the ball on a fumble, they slipped around Williams end for a couple of ten yard gains and then on a forward pass, White scampered across the Williams goal line for Vermont's first score. After this Williams braced, and near the end of the half, got their point-driving machinery started and shoved Robin across the line for the final score. The summary.

YANKS MUST PAY FOR GARRITY

Hudson, N. Y., Nov. 2.—The Hudson Baseball Association to-day recovered a verdict of $1,000 and interest from the New York American Baseball Association for the services of Joseph Garrity, a pitcher sold to the New Yorks.

Garrity was taken West, but at the end of the trip was returned to the Hudson team. J. Frank Chase was for the plaintiff and Joseph M. Proskauer and George M. Hendle represented New York.

The jury held that the New York club had purchased Garrity outright, and should pay for him. Garrity, who this year was at Scranton, has been drafted by Cleveland and Memphis.

Rambler

AUTOMOBILES

For the year 1908 the entire facilities of the Rambler factory will be devoted to the production of two models, 34 and 31.

Model 34, a five-passenger touring car with four-cylinder vertical motor, 32 horse power, has selective type transmission with shaft drive. The wheel base is 112 in., wheels 36 in. with 4 in. tires. Price, fully equipped, $2,250. The same chassis, however, with appropriate changes in detail, will be equipped with a roadster body with rumble seat, at the same price.

Model 31 is a five-passenger touring car with detachable tonneau, equipped with the Rambler multiple disc clutch, comprising double opposed motor, multiple disc clutch and planetary transmission entirely enclosed. Price, fully equipped, $1,400. This model can be furnished with torpedo deck in lieu of the tonneau, at $1,300.

Both models have been brought to the highest possible degree of perfection in every detail that insures

Service, Economy and Comfort

You cannot afford to miss making a critical inspection of these 1908 models of

HENSHAW CO. WILL HANDLE THE OLDS

Fine Lot of Cars to Be Brought Here After New York Show.

One of the pioneer automobile dealers of New England, the Henshaw Motor Car Co., gave the automobile trade somewhat of a surprise this week, when they announced that they had been appointed the Eastern Massachusetts representatives of the Olds Motor Works of Lansing, Mich. This concern is one of the oldest and best known American makers. At least eight of the leading Boston automobile dealers had put in their application for the Oldsmobile 1908 line, and no idea was had that such a prize would fall to the Henshaw company. Still, their reputation as dealers in automobiles secured for them one of the best lines, and the Olds Motor Works in fortunate in having as its representative a concern which has been successful through a long period in putting our high grade cars.

For the past ten years Mr. Henshaw has been associated with only two other makers of cars, and A. E. Adams, who has been with the Curtis company for a long period, is now with the Henshaw company. The Henshaw establishment is on the Mark, a square garden, New York is among the best equipped, and a complete line of the Olds cars will be in their salesroom on Massachusetts avenue and Newbury street, shortly after the show.

The Henshaw agency will handle the Oldsmobile cars, with the Olson line electric cars, the latter are known as a particular vehicle for professional people. The electric is a gasoline in which Mr. Henshaw recently, in 1 hour 5 minutes, on one charging of batts to Gloucester and return followed by a trip about the city with Boston newspaper men as observers.

NO BIG CHANGES IN THE MATHESON

The 1908 Matheson models exhibited at Madison Square Garden show a number of improvements, but no radical changes. The motor, with valves in the head and make-and-break ignition, has not been changed in several years. That this is a most efficient power plant is proven by the long list of Matheson performances.

Of the changes in the 1908 Matheson perhaps the most important has been the transition of the cooling gear from the bevel to the spiral type. The centrifugal pump previously used has been replaced with a pump of the gear type. The radiator has also undergone a change, a smaller unit, with a reserve container containing five gallons is added to these changes, is the refinements have been made in the transmission, steering gear, location of ball bearings, etc.

JOSEPH RYAN AT NEW YORK SHOW

Both the New York shows were graced by the attendance of Joseph E. G. Ryan, journalist, politician, theatrical manager, bon vivant, etc., of Chicago. In honor of his presence, the tehuermonic music providing Madison Square Garden has been given a touch of brogue. Mr. Ryan will be attended to see that the rival press agents did no cheating.

CHANCE FOR SAILOR BURKE.

Jim Barry has been offered a match to meet Sailor Burke November 25 at the Eureka Athletic Club of Baltimore, but it looks as though it will take a team of horses to get Burke into the ring with Barry. He refused to make weight for Pat O'Keefe, who can make 130 pounds, but the Sailor wants Barry to do weight that would hurt him and there the match hangs. Burke weighed 165 when he fought Johnson and would be giving away about seven pounds to Barry if they fought, but Jim Buckley, who is managing Barry, says Burke can have the whole purse if Burke stays fifteen rounds, which is a very reasonable offer.

MANY HOOSIER MOTORISTS.

Over 3,000 cars have been registered in the State of Indiana this year and over 6,000 are now in use in that State. It would be interesting to learn of the number that is in actual use among the farmers of the State, as the tillers of the soil are getting better to-day and using autos, as a consequence, in the cause of good roads.

STEVENS-DURYEA HAS HIGH POWER 'FOUR'

The Stevens-Duryea line at the Madison Square Garden Show is possibly more complete this year than ever. They are exhibiting a "Big Six" car in which there is no change for the season of 1908. Their famous "Little Six" car is also exhibited in the limousine car and a polished chassis.

In looking over the chassis there is no radical change in the machine from last year, but there has been one or two minor mechanical changes for refinement placed on the car for 1908. This follows out the policy of the Stevens-Duryea Company, which is not of the "change every year type," and naturally enhances the value of "the year before car" very materially.

In the four-cylinder line, the Stevens-Duryea Company have made a radical departure from the small four-cylinder which they have been building for the last three years, and while they are not believers in high powered four-cylinder cars, they are placing on the market a car which has more power than the twenty-horsepower four-cylinder they have built heretofore.

It will be readily seen that they have improved very materially on their other four-cylinder car, and the new four-cylinder is attracting an unusual amount of attention.

J. W. Borman and S. H. Barse are in charge of the Boston end, and would be pleased to see their customers.

1908 RAMBLERS ON EXHIBITION

The 1908 Rambler line includes two chassis, a 32 horsepower four cylinder and a 22-horsepower two cylinder opposed. The larger model appears as a touring car and a roadster, while the smaller model can be had either as a touring car or as a runabout. The prices for next year are $2,250 and $1,400 respectively.

BERLIET CAR HAD SHOW OF ITS OWN

The policy of keeping out of shows and holding a special exhibit somewhere has been generally a questionable one, but when the American Locomotive Automobile Company decided to hold a special show of its own at the Waldorf-Astoria during the show fortnight in New York it was quite in line with the general attitude of the company, the excessive character of the equipment of its patrons. The wisdom of the move was evident during the first week, for those who are interested in the Berliet do not care for crowds, and the small fallcise only had many up to see it at the Waldorf who probably would not go to the Palace show.

NOVEL FEATURES AT GARDEN SHOW

There are features at the Madison Square Garden automobile show which are well worth the price of admission to those who have no interest in motor cars. This is true of the decorations in the concert hall in particular, but still more so in the case of the rathskeller, where the "atmosphere" of old England has, with its courtyard and barn, will prevail. If the horse show had but preceded the motor show, instead of following it, there would be a genuine stable smell on hand to add to the realism.

AUTO SALES NEXT YEAR MAY AMOUNT TO $100,000,000

By HARRY T. CLINTON.

Statistics show the phenomenal strides made in the manufacture of automobiles and the rapid growth of an industry that three years ago was hardly out of swaddling clothes. In 1899 a few manufacturers had the courage of their ideas, and attempted, in the face of adverse sentiment, to make automobiles. At that time, the capital invested was $5,768,000, while the amount of business for that year was $4,748,011.

In 1904 about $75,000,000 employed to do $26,945,004 worth of business. For the year 1907 the business done will be four times as much as 1904, or nearly 123 per cent. increase in business each year.

The estimates for this year show that directly and indirectly there is $171,446,000 invested in the manufacture and sale of automobiles and accessories, while the gross amount of sales of automobiles alone will be over $100,000,000. To produce this amount of business it requires 58,000 men directly interested in the manufacture or sale of automobiles and 29,000 men indirectly interested, making a total of 108,500 men directly and indirect interested. Interwoven in the statistics are interesting facts in the manufacture and sale of motor cars and accessories.

Enormous Outputs.

In 1905 the total output of American manufactured cars amounted to $16,000,000. In 1904 $28,500,000 were sold. In 1905 the total was $42,000,000 and in 1906 $59,000,000.

The organization of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers is well known. The fundamental patent on the two-cycle gas engine, which was assigned to George B. Selden, was the basis for its organization. From the start the association has had two objects—the protection of its members as regards their patent rights and the development of the industry.

That the many departments of the organization have been instrumental in the growth of the automobile to its present standardized condition, is shown by the remark each department has attained in the mechanical branch, however, the greatest strides in evidence of this progress can be seen.

It became apparent, as far back as 1903 and 1904 that to reach a point of perfection in motor car construction, some standard form of construction and standardized material and design would have to be reached and this could only be done by the mutual co-operation of the larger manufacturers.

Mechanical Branch Formed.

The mechanical branch was formed for this purpose, and consists of the chief engineers and factory superintendents of the thirty-two leading manufacturers who are members of the L. icensed association. The keynote of the mechanical branch is the aggressive meeting, interchange and co-operation and intelligent standardization, which results in improved automobile design and production, the comfort and convenience of the user and a gradual lessening of loss from accident and premature depreciation.

The accomplishments of the branch have been many, resulting in such direct and indirect benefits to the manufacturer and user. The A. A. M. A. has standardized the adoption of a universal gage for all axles and spindles in the trade, the introduction of motor cars, has been one of the greatest accomplishments in any industry. The individual enterprise, the adoption of standard spark plugs and connections for pedestal horsepower rating are of equal importance to the screw standard. In the former it has brought convenience caused by the varying sizes of a spark plug and connection, and the latter is an epoch-making innovation in the industry.

Tires and Rims.

Tires and rims have come in for their share of attention. Not so long since the tire and rim situation was in a chaotic state. Many sizes of tires were in the market, too many for economy or convenience to manufacturer or user. Intelligent interchange of ideas of the tire makers and engineers of the branch resulted in a revision of sizes and decreased the number used from twenty-three to eleven, the latter being adequate for all demands.

In the standardizing of steel tubing, rods, magnetos and many other component parts of a car, the hall mark of progress is stamped on every car made by the engineers of the branch.

Show Committee Busy.

At Hartford a laboratory for exhaustive tests and scientific experiments in metals, oils, rubber and other materials is maintained by the branch and the results are not only recognized by the automobile manufacturers of the association, but are recognized in all branches of engineering and by the various government scientific departments. It must be noted that while the engineering branch of the organization has been hard at work, the other branches have not been neglected.

Another feature and one of moment is the exhibition or show committee. To the first show committee of the association the credit of bringing order out of chaos in regard to automobile shows is due. Prior to that time very little system was used in the promotion of exhibitions. The exhibitors were required to arrange for their own decorations, signs, lighting and display of goods. No thought was given to what was used. With the result for first season seven pleasing. It being a mere hodge podge of hoodoo, cars and aeronautical advertising literature. The committee was formed and is still the only body to provide rules to prevent overcrowding of the show by other than the interested public and to exclude those automobile accessories merchants from the exhibition.

An innovation was the showing of all automobiles of the same nature and power in one part, appropriately "making each exhibit complete in itself. It was the first to carry out the uniformity of booths and uniform decorations were the rule and not the exception. This would be better provided for by the rules, and it would have prevented the artistic ensemble rather than barbarous individual decoration.

All Details Looked After.

The thoroughness of the show committee is shown in the details of its work. Not only does it provide the decorations, signs, lighting, furniture, telephones and transportation of the exhibitors goods, but a thousand and one minor details are looked after the week of the show are established, for the exclusive use of all exhibitors and their friends. The Licensed Show is the only one where the people of the exhibition are related pro rata to space rental to another valuable department of the Association is the traffic department. The growth of the industry has been phenomenal. From $16,000,000 to $100,000,000 worth of automobiles had to be transported from the factory to the consignment, increasing a high class of freight. The railroads were unprepared, and freight cars for this class of freight were scarce. The traffic department, knowing the requirements necessary, pointed out to the railroads the advisability of specially constructed cars. At first only a few were put in service, but at present there are over 5,000 freight cars for the exclusive transportation of automobiles. The department has been instrumental in effecting many new classifications, both in the transportation to and from the factories.

RECORD CROWD AT PARK SQ. OPENING

By far the biggest crowd ever at the Park Square Skating Rink attended the season's opening last evening, about 8,000 admission tickets being sold.

Four races were decided, the first being a five mile open amateur, which was won by Costello in 17 minutes 55 seconds. Baker finished second and Jackson third.

In the five-mile open professional race, Gendron, the New Hampshire champion from Nashua, took the honors. Boyle was second and Merritt third. Time—17 minutes 53 seconds.

Hamilton, the noted roller skating crack, captured the three-mile handicap professional event over Gendron, and Merritt came third. Time—11 minutes 5 seconds.

Corn Harris, one of the fastest skaters in the country, won the fifteen mile open race in 17 minutes 40 seconds, Margaret Conners of Boston coming second.

TRACK ORDERED SOLD.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 2.—Upon petition of Edward Corrigan, Chicago, and George Witt, Memphis, principal stockholders, the Federal Court here to-day appointed James F. Halpin, Kansas City, receiver for the Kansas City Jockey Club and Fair Association. The court ordered the sale of the track, valued at $400,000. A division of the proceeds among the stockholders is ordered. Practically no racing has been held at the track since the enactment of the Missouri anti-pool selling law.

GOOD TIGER ATHLETES.

There is some wonderfully good material on the princeton track team this season. Athlete Trainer Copeland has taken them under his wing, and expects to mould them into championship form before long.

JUST FIFTY NEW MOTOR LICENSES

Despite Lateness of the Season Autoists Continue to Register Their Machines.

Exactly half a hundred motor vehicles were registered with the Massachusetts Highway Commission during the past week, they being as follows:

ELIOT A. C. WINS AT BASKET BALL

The fast Eliot A. C., of Roxbury, defeated teh strong Emanuel House team last evening at the Emanuel House by the score of 19 to 16. The game was fast and well played in every department. It was one of the first games of the season for the Eliots and they put up a great game.

Joe Prendergast, the ex-135-pound champion of Roxbury, and who has been coaching Donohue for his recent fights, put up a magnificent game for the winners, making several long passes to Donohue, which counted largely in the score, besides blocking many shoots which were labeled for baskets. Also got a fine exhibition of basket shooting, getting four baskets, three of them being from difficult angles. Scores:

PULLIAM TO PROTECT THE POOR TWIRLERS

National League President Will Suppress Vile Talk on the Coaching Lines.

"Could I have my way about it," said President Harry Pulliam of the National League, the other day, "I would put a sudden and effectual stop to one abuse that has been going on in baseball ever since I can remember, and one that always riles my Kentucky blood, that is the efforts of the managers and other players to the opposing team to disconcert the batter by loud, scurrilous remarks intended for his ears.

"My contention there is a rule that is supposed to govern this offense, but it doesn't amount to much. It is left to the umpire's discretion entirely when they are going to call it and I tried to make them do it, but I had to be accused of passing it over. If the fans don't want to hear that coaching instructions are delivered by the managers, cutting things that are being said, but it is a shameful practice as it is now and I think it ought to be done at all. The responsibility of the game is always placed upon the pitcher's shoulders and he ought to have a free and fair chance to pitch.

"Any unfeeling remark despicable in its way I think I've had of some fool thing said by some one. I don't want to experiment next season. I want the best.

"Urgent and frank with us, as usual, form the backbone of my staff. I expect Dygert to be one of the greatest pitchers in the country next season. He came close to that last season, but next season he should be there. It is reasonable to look for Reulbach and Coombs to come back. Nobody knows any more about Brown than I, and that count on him, but will hope for him to be right again. Hartley will be a finished, and I shall give another chance to Wiltse. We have some new names to the rosters. Three—Foster, Schlei ter and Carter, the latter a splendid pitcher—come from the New York State League. Maxwell and Bills were stars in the Southern League where I got Dygert. Kruse and Harmon come from the Pacific coast. Kruse is a fine hander, and so many clubs were after him that he cost a pretty penny. One of the bunch of fourteen men I feel sure that I will get seven stars, perhaps more.

ATHLETICS WILL BE STRONG IN PITCHERS

Mack Has Spent $20,000, and Most of It Went for New Twirlers.

Philadelphia, Nov. 2.—Although the experiments of the season of 1907 have had to be dried away, Manager Mack, of the Athletics, has already completed his plans for 1908.

Outlining his movements for 1908, Manager Mack said:

"We lost the pennant last season because we fell short of good pitchers right in the crisis. I thought I had enough, but the injuries to Bender and Coombs and Waddell's tough luck left me with only Plank and Dygert, and great as was the work of those two they were not enough. I therefore am best bought for next season has been to look after the box material.

$20,000 for New Men.

"I have already spent $20,000 in purchasing pitchers and most of this money went in pitchers.

"First, I cut loose a number of twirlers on whom I had options. Of these I let go outright Bushelman, Hyder and Pelty. Wright, utility man, I released outright and Powell was optioned to Jersey City. Both of these I got from Baltimore. I didn't want to experiment next season.

"Dygert and Plank will, as usual, form the backbone of my staff. I expect Dygert to be one of the greatest pitchers in the country next season. He came close to that last season, but next season he should be there. It is reasonable to look for Reulbach and Coombs to come back. Nobody knows any more about Brown than I, and that count on him, but will hope for him to be right again. Hartley will be a finished, and I shall give another chance to Wiltse. We have some new names to the rosters. Three—Foster, Schleiter and Carter, the latter a splendid pitcher—come from the New York State League. Maxwell and Bills were stars in the Southern League where I got Dygert. Kruse and Harmon come from the Pacific coast. Kruse is a fine hander, and so many clubs were after him that he cost a pretty penny. One of the bunch of fourteen men I feel sure that I will get seven stars, perhaps more.

Automobiles were pre-eminently the most talked of feature of the show at New York. Especially the New Maxwell—The 24 H.P. 4 Cylinder Touring Car and Racy Runabout at $1750.00.

This is an epoch marking motor car, as it embodies the characteristics of the high priced automobiles, combined with those exclusive and new well known features of Maxwell Design which have made them—all Maxwells—so deservedly popular.

I mean by this, the 3-point suspension, the multiple disc clutch, the water cooling by natural circulation, the metal bodies, all original with Mr. Maxwell, who has come to be recognized among the world's greatest designers.

I took over 200 New Englanders to the Maxwell-Briscoe Factory at Tarrytown, where we saw 1500 of these cars in process (of one model), the greatest number of one-model touring cars ever put through on single shop order.

We will have cars of this new 4-cylinder model as well as the other models for demonstration by the 10th of this month.

ABSOLUTELY NON-SKID.

You see the principle in the cuts. Four coils of strong piano wire running right IN the tire. On every coil a myriad of little spikes or "cat's paws" which tenaciously "grip the ground."

DWELL IN "CITY OF BREAKING HEARTS"

Miss O'Reilly, Daughter of Late Poet, Would Improve Lodging House Conditions.

"The 'City of Breaking Hearts.' That's what I should call the South End of Boston with its thousands of lodgers lonely friendless, aimless, effitimes penniless and hopeless creatures whose social world is bounded by the four walls of a furnished room."

The speaker was Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly, daughter of the late John Boyle O'Reilly. Miss O'Reilly and Miss Maud M. Rowell, niece of Rev. Joseph Rowell, S. J., the well known priest are making an investigation of lodging house conditions in Boston.

It was in the pretty little library of Miss O'Reilly's home at No. 19 Fast street, Jamaica Plain, that I met a Sunday American reporter interviewed the daughter of the late poet and saw the much prized portrait of her father hung on one side of the room. All about were shelves filled with books.

Seek to Remedy Conditions.

"The lodging house problem," she continued, "is so great that we can't claim to have accomplished anything as yet. What we hope to do is to [illegible] tion, but rather to find conditions and to remedy them.

"Perhaps you know that in the city proper of San Francisco there are no more lodging houses than there are in the United States. There are [illegible] of them in this city and the number of lodgers is close to 25,000. One-half of the houses are conducted by widows, while women and two-thirds of the proprietors are either widows or divorced. Many of these houses are in the South End.

"Forty years ago the South End was filled with the homes of well to do people. It was thought then that it would always remain the fashionable quarter of the city, but time proved otherwise. The fine mansions there now, stand as reminders of better days in a new harness of 'Rooms to Let' signs. The district is filled with cheap eating, bakeries, cooked food shops, barber shops, tailor shops, pool rooms and saloons.

Where Babies Are Scarce.

"We have found that the South End has fewer babies than any other section of the city, even Ward 11. This is what one would expect to find where there are so few homes. The North End leads in this respect, South Boston comes second, and the West End third. The South End is a miserable last. Incidentally we have learned that in Charlestown the North End and the West End there are more than three women to Roxbury, Dorchester, Brighton and Brookline the women are in the majority.

"In our investigation we have excluded the cheap rooming houses with their gaudy signs and their [illegible] aspect. They cater largely to a transient class of men who do not work and many of whom are criminals. We have confined ourselves entirely to the bona fide lodging house.

"In our visits to these latter, we have noticed that no matter what the type of the house may be the front windows are always immaculate. It becomes a matter of fact that is characteristic of most lodging house keepers. They all have an industrious look.

Troubles of a Proprietor.

"The modern lodging-house keeper is different from the old-time boarding mistress. Motherly love usually has no place in her life. I am loath to recognize her, for she has many troubles of her own. She must deal with the poor man, the tax collector, the gas collector, the coal collector, as well as with her lodgers. The rule which she follows and wishes followed by those with whom she deals is 'Mind your own business.'

"The price one must pay for a lodging house in this city is from 50 cents per week to $1 per night. By the former rate, the income would be three times that amount. But the lodging house season lasts for only ten months. There is an astonishing exodus in Summer, due no doubt to the big stores cutting down their pay rools during the Summer months. The store employees probably find Summer employment at the numerous seashore hotels. Out of her income the housekeeper must pay for rent, gas, water, coal, repairs, furnishings and incidentals. Even at the best her profit cannot be great.

"When they start out all lodging house keepers mean well. Usually they buy their houses under a blanket mortgage. The whole incident is casual and is a present. Money is received and bills are paid. It is a continuous hand drum proposition.

"Seldom do you find in lodging houses what might be called a settled. Oftentimes there is a 'slavey' life is full of unhappy drudgery.

Increase in Lodging Houses.

"There are thirty-five per cent. more lodgers in Boston to-day than there were ten years ago. The majority of them are Americans, not the successful type nor yet the delinquent, but rather the mediocre and the nondescript. There are comparatively few foreigners. As a rule the men of the first class marry and have homes of their own, and the unmarried women go into domestic service. There are very few skilled workmen living in lodging houses, and in these days when [illegible] bodies of men are transported from city to city at the will of some corporation superintendent.

"The usual type of lodging house man is the low-salaried clerk. His average wage is $8 a week. This may sound ridiculous, but our investigation has proved it true, nevertheless. The average earning of the woman who lodges is $5 a week.

"Most of the women lodgers are unmarried. Twenty-five per cent. of them are between twenty and thirty years of age. They have come to the city usually at the age of twenty, with parental watchfulness shaken off. Many of them are from the country. They are usually employed as either waitresses or saleswomen. Finding employment is sometimes difficult. Two of the city's large department stores and many of the smaller stores employ only women and girls who live at home, not for a moral reason, but because they can afford to work for less money.

Lacks Social Atmosphere.

"The married woman who lodges is usually one who does not care for the burden of housekeeping. She earns some money by working in the big stores two days a week, Monday's bargain days and Thursday, when [illegible] is permitted to go down town [illegible] The unmarried woman [illegible] $12.25 a day. It helps her to [illegible] and to dress. She [illegible] room she can afford, and she must be employed regularly.

"The most [illegible] feature of lodging house life is the absolute lack of social atmosphere. This is the cause of loneliness and social life does not exist. To [illegible] is the cause of [illegible] among the poolroom. The [illegible] slum, the so-called 'dancing classes,' the [illegible] theatre and the countless money [illegible] place that appeals to people who are mentally tired. It also tends to [illegible] conditions. They [illegible] only a few more than two years. The [illegible] and penniless are in their teens. Easy and in whatever calls they [illegible] wear.

"The prime fault is a lack of the parlors where the lodgers may meet socially and feel at home. The absolute lack of [illegible] features, with attending evils resulting in what leads me to call the district a 'City of Breaking Hearts.' Watch the rooming way the lodgers eat in those basement [illegible] and you'll see the reason for the name. They all have a heart-broken appearance.

Menace to Society.

"For a large room the lodger pays from $4 to $5. The six by eight ball-room is rented for $2. The exodus in Summer lowers the rates one-third and sometimes one can beat down all I lower. The cheapest board rate for a man is $3.50 a week, for a woman it is $3. Special rates are made for breakfast and [illegible] dinner.

"Most of the food in lodging house eating is fried, and I wouldn't take oath that it [illegible] fried in the same pan. The [illegible]

LEADS LODGING HOUSE CRUSADE

Miss O'Reilly, who has long taken active interest in reform movements in a crowded city, now seeks to improve conditions in lodging house sections, which she calls "The City of Breaking Hearts."

MISS MARY BOYLE O'REILLY.

[illegible] ous show many 'fillers' little deserving this work, but they have no authority almost no fruit. The usual idle cry [illegible] is said and not only in a sporadic way has been cut down owing to the improved [illegible] of food stuffs and the closer [illegible] of all [illegible] It now inspects plumbing, sewer situation of streets. The [illegible] lane, dump cans and bathing [illegible] food also tends to make him [illegible] care.

"Criminals are want to hide themselves in the cosmopolitan [illegible] lodging house, the constantly moving lodging house [illegible] and lodgers are threatened [illegible] with serious danger.

"There would seem to be a remedy for [illegible] lodging house evils in the establishment of a municipal [illegible] registry with a [illegible] certificate [illegible] recommendation [illegible] and safeguards [illegible] giving [illegible] house [illegible] These philanthropic societies are now [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] owning an oil [illegible] or [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FIREMAN RESCUED FROM FLAMES AT $23,000 EAST BOSTON FIRE

Captain Cornelius J. Leary, Hemmed In on Roof, Has Narrow Escape.

TWO OTHERS ARE INJURED

Assistant Engineer Budreau and Ladderman Plunkett Cut by Flying Glass.

BLAZE IN FINISHING SHOP

CAPTAIN CORNELIUS J LEARY of engine No. 11, had a narrow escape from death and Assistant Engineer Francis Budreau and Ladderman Plunkett of ladder No. 21, were cut by falling glass at a two-alarm fire, which caused a damage estimated at $25,000, in the two-story wooden building, Nos. 4 to 14 Decatur street, East Boston, at 8 o'clock last evening.

The fire started in the southeast corner of the building, which fronts seventy feet in Decatur street and has a depth of forty feet. As the twenty-five men employed there in the building [illegible] factory of Albert E [illegible] at their work at 1 o'clock [illegible] afternoon the cause of the fire has [illegible] been determined.

The fire was discovered by Herman Rath, who works in a restaurant at No. 1 Decatur street, and he pushed the first alarm. When Acting Chief Goddard arrived at the fire he turned in a second alarm, owing to the danger of the fire spreading to the [illegible] inflammable nature of the contents of the building.

When the first call got to the second [illegible] of the men were pouring from the building, but at the moment the second alarm was turned in by Acting Chief Goddard, Mines burst forth from every window.

Captain Leary was on the southeast side of the roof of the building when flames burst forth around him, but [illegible] in safety away for the flames was passed by firemen and spectators. At that moment Thomas Moore, a protective department call stationed at Box 24, East Boston, and James Hanlon, a former fireman, saw Leary [illegible] on the ground nearby. Ladders were raised to the roof and soon raised it to the ground. Captain Leary climbed down and aided before the life lines had been cast to the ground.

Assistant Engineer Budreau was cut on the left hand and Ladderman Plunkett on the [illegible] by flying glass. Their injuries were dressed by Dr. Grunger and they were taken to the Relief Hospital and they were able to continue on duty.

The damage to the building is estimated at $5,000 and to the contents of the building at $20,000.

Declares She Lost $42,000 Through Investments Made on His Advice.

DINERS ARE STARTLED

Financier, Seemingly Undisturbed, Rises and Makes Inaudible Reply.

FRIENDS LEAD HER AWAY

"System's" Enemy Gives Out Statement; Says His Accuser Was in Hysterical State.

A STYLISHLY gowned woman created a sensation in Young's Hotel dining room yesterday afternoon by walking up to the table at which Thomas W. Lawson was placidly eating, and, in high-pitched tones, accusing his of being the cause of her losing $42,000.

People at the adjoining tables stared at the financier and then at the woman in amazement. Those father away craned their necks or stood up in eagerness to learn what was disturbing such a fashionable dining resort at a busy afternoon hour.

The woman, whose name is unknown, said to Mr Lawson:

"You are the cause of my losing $42,000 that I invested by your advice."

Calls Woman Hysterical.

While all stared and listened, Mr. Lawson rose, made some inaudible reply and then sat down.

Two other women, who were with the first one, came to the latter and induced her to leave the dining room. The woman was of middle age, dressed in a black gown and had gray hair.

"The attack consisted solely of the hysterical woman, if she ever was one, coming to my table in Young's dining room and reproaching me the alleged losing of $42,000. I had never seen the woman before, but I did find that she and two others had a favorite pet the cow I usually [illegible]. Don't know whether the empty highball glasses on their table had anything to do with the attack. Don't know whether I shall see the woman again. Will let the [illegible] of a week of days. Wouldn't know her any again if I saw her."

Watched Newsboys' Game.

"Such things as hysterical people waylaying me with tales of their losses and troubles are of such daily or hourly occurrence I cannot keep in touch with the sad stories much less the looks of the persons connected with them. As far as [illegible] and tale, etc., goes, I can only speak for myself. I simply come from the table, said to the lady, 'If you lost as much as $42,000 you must have been gambling,' and thanking her for her attention, sat down.

TAMMANYIZING BOSTON.

MORAN FAVORITE IN BETTING; ALL CONCEDE HE WILL SWEEP COUNTY

Dennison and Webster Bettors Losing Faith in Power of City Machine to Elect Candidate—Demand Big Odds.

JOHN B. MORAN will be re-elected District Attorney of Suffolk County by a large majority ,and the best political judges in Boston think he will receive as big a vote as Walter A. Webster and Joseph A. Dennison combined.

This opinion is shared by bettors who have no political sympathy where money is at stake. They bet to win and are offering Moran odds of 2 to 1 and 10 to 7.

Those were the odds offered last night and it was hard to find takers of the short end.

Several bets were placed in a cafe on Hanover street, which is in Mayor Fitzgerald's personal stronghold, and no better terms could be obtained by those who which to wager money on Moran than 10 to 7. It is understood that perhaps a dozen bets of $500 to $200, the long est being taken by Moran bettors, were laid yesterday and last night, but the men who put up the money do not want names given. One bet was made, $500 to $250 on Moran.

As a matter of fact, men with money they wanted to lay on Moran searches the town last night for those who were willing to risk coin on the option that either Dennison or Webster would be elected. But it was hard to find even among Webster or Dennison partisans any outside cache as to be willing to back up their argument by risking good money.

A Moran victory is in the air. All the politicians know it is in the Democratic wards of the city the trend of sentiment among voters is so strongly for Moran that his opponents have practically given up hope of defeating him. The Dennison campaign is admitted to be a fizzle. One of the candidates on the Democratic ticket [illegible] expressed the general belief last night when he said: "Dennison grew worse every time he spoke. All over the town there were rumors for Webster. The police were attacked him. Two-thirds of the crowds at all the Dennison meetings have come by town with the [illegible] Democratic Attorney, but for the treachery of the men who are behind the Dennison campaign."

Hope to Swing Vote to Webster.

The hope of the opponents of Moran, according to the views of the bettors who are backing the District-Attorney to be re-elected, is to devise between now and election day some means of swinging the bulk of the machine vote, which Dennison expected to get, to Webster. Although Webster was nominated by Republicans he is regarded as being very close to Mayor Fitzgerald and as being quite as satisfactory to the latter for District Attorney as Dennison.

The bettors do not see much chance for Webster to get the votes from what is heard in the city yards as other players around. It is admitted by Republican leaders that the Republican vote polled in Dennison Tuesday and the week before would leave Webster far short of a plurality if he got it all. Let us all, for there are many Republicans in this city who will not participate in their election of a supporting Moran at the polls. He will no doubt get a big Republican vote in Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop.

It is another point plainly in favor of giving him another term. There is no doubt in the public mind as to his honesty and his businesslike record of his days in city grafting at City Hall and the State House.

2 MEN NEAR DEATH; 15 HOUSES BURNED IN FIRE SET BY BOYS

Two men were nearly suffocated, fifteen horses were burned to death, a number of sets of harness and a large quantity of hay were destroyed last night, at 11:15 o'clock, by an incendiary fire in a stable at Hamlin street and Arlington avenue, Charlestown.

The fire was discovered by passers-by shortly after 11 o'clock. Firemen, quickly on the scene, believed a big conflagration was threatened, and the proximity of the gas house, and a new one soon to be [illegible] at Hamlin and Joseph Rogers and Joseph Tuttle have been found on the second floor of the building where one lay asleep. They were carried down by ladders by Lieutenant Hughes of Ladder No. 9, and quickly revived. But six of the twenty-five horses in the stable were rescued, the others being burned or suffocated.

The stable was occupied by L. Duffy, J. A. Harding and A. A. Hammon, truckmen. Duffy lost two horses, Harmon nine horses and Darling four horses. All were insured.

The police say the fire was started by boys. Many fires have occurred near the stable in the past five weeks and in most cases have been incendiary. The police are investigating.

1,868,792 YARDS NEARER THE PACIFIC

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2.—All previous records for excavations on the Panama Canal have been broken. Chief Engineer and canal officers were jubilant tonight when they received word from Colonel Goethels that the million cubic yards which they had been striving for in a single working month had been pushed into history by the accomplishment in October of 1,868,792 cubic yards. This is three times the record of last October, when Morse.

FOIL CRAFTY CONVICT GASKILL IN ANOTHER PLOT TO ESCAPE

George H. Gaskill, whose sensational escape from the charles street jail in February, 1906, led to the dismissal of two officers, and who was sentenced to Deer Island for seven months last June for jail breaking and larceny, was prevented from making a daring escape from the Island prison last week through the discovery of a letter found in the garb of a released prisoner.

With the finding of the letter, officers surprised Gaskill in his cell and after a desperate struggle, overpowered him and took from his clothes several saws and files with which he had planned on cutting his way to freedom. As a result of his escapade, Gaskill is now in a special cell and will be closely watched during the remainder of his sentence.

The officers on the island refuse to discuss the sensational attempt of Gaskill to break jail. They have been instructed not to talk.

Craftily Planned Escape.

Since his incarceration, June 27, Gaskill has steadily planned to escape again. From released prisoners who knew him there this Summer the Boston American has learned that he felt sure of securing his freedom with the aid of friends and that gradually from the workshops he has gotten material which in his cell he made into saws. Two perfect saws were [illegible] taken from him by the officers who surprised him on the night he intended to carry out his bold plan for escape. They are believed to have been furnished by outside confederates, for whom the police are now hunting.

On the night he last set to cut his way to liberty, friends of the prisoner rowed down the harbor in a naphtha launch, and at a point near the prison, anchored on a pretense of fishing. The launch was seen by several guards, and a close watch was kept on it as it was moved to various points of shore.

The tell-tale letter which gave the officials at the Island the information that Gaskill was cunningly planning his escape, was found in a prison suit left by a released convict, who, in changing his garb for civilian dress forgot the missive.

Master James H. Conlon was informed of the letter and ordered several officers to go to Gaskill's cell and search it for implements with which he was intending to cut his way out. The search of his clothes readily revealed the saws and files. Gaskill had been supplied with the necessary tools.

POLITICIANS ADMIT MORAN'S TRIUMPH OVER THE MACHINE

His Re-election Conceded by Party Managers Who Have Canvassed County. Betting 2 to 1 in His Favor

"CONTEST LIES BETWEEN GRAFTERS AND PEOPLE"

Dennison Sycophantic Fawner on City Hall, While Webster Is Friend of Mayor, District Attorney Declares in Statement.

THE re-election of John B. Moran as District Attorney is privately conceded by all politicians who are familiar with the situation.

One bet was made last night on Moran of $500 to $250.

The prevailing odds on Moran are 10 to 7, with few willing to bet against his re-election at these odds.

The contest for the office of District Attorney is waged by the Democratic machine and by the Republican machine, both of which have combined their efforts for selfish and self-protective purposes, on the one side, and the honest, law-abiding citizens of all parties on the other side, who believe that this semi-judicial office should be kept out of the control of professional politicians of either party, who know that Mr. Webster never tried a criminal case and is therefore incompetent to manage four thousand criminal cases a year; who know that Mr. Dennison will be the willing servant and sycophantic fawner of the City Hall grafters; who know that Mr. Webster is the close, confidential friend of the Mayor; who know that neither Mr. Webster nor Mr. Dennison has any platform of principles; who know that Mr. Moran, in 1905, pledged himself to the following platform of principles:

FIRST—Official freedom from politicians and grafters.

SECOND—Official action on important cases with the Grand Jury, instantly on receipt of information from the press or private sources, without waiting for the lower court.

THIRD—Fair treatment to all lawyers and favors to none.

FOURTH—No withholding of evidence favorable to the defendant.

FIFTH—Rigid enforcement of law against grafters and bribers.

SIXTH—Trivial offenders leniently treated, with the idea of reformation.

SEVENTH—Justice, tempered with mercy, to all; who know that he has kept his pledges and will continue to keep them, who know the exposed falsehood recklessly repeated does not thereby become truth; who know that he who resorts to falsehood does so because truth is injurious to his cause; who know that a falsifying traitor to one man will become a falsifying traitor to all men; who know that treachery, ingratitude and sinsinuating falsehoods are the most despicable qualities of the human mind; who know that the man who possesses them is unfit for any office; who know that cold justice is mere brutality; who know that justice tempered with mercy is humanity civilized, who know that he who criticises mercy is a heartless tyrant; who know that he who boasts of an intention to imprison more persons than his opponent has done may be civilized, but is not yet humanized; who know that the weighing out of justice and mercy is determined by evidence and not by numbers; who know that a thousand accused persons may deserve liberty one year whereas only a few hundred deserved it a preceding year; who know that 'tis better to allow a dozen guilty on doubtful evidence to escape than one innocent person should suffer; who know that an honest, fearless, tried and true servant of the whole people, owing allegiance to no machine, can better be trusted to properly perform his duties than an incompetent or an unfit person can; who know that experience and legal knowledge is an essential qualification; who know that the possession of an extensive knowledge of human nature is also necessary; who know that weakness and weakness are not synonymous terms, who know that seven-tenths of all offences are due to human frailty, who know that to save the accused, except in the most serious of cases where punishment is necessary, is the chief object of the law, who know where punishment is necessary, is the chief object of the law, who know that a silent man with a sound brain and a kind heart can accomplish more reform, save more bodies from destruction and more souls from despair than can the violent monster of falsehoods who nightly tears the air with his gesticulating oratory.

In a word, Mr. Moran ought to be and will be elected.

JOHN B. MORAN.

MAN IS FATALLY STABBED IN WILD RIOT AT QUINCY

One man, August Laukanen, fatally stabbed; a riot in which [illegible] blood was spilled, and black eyes were received, and a wild struggle in which two policemen were badly worsted were the features of the Finnish Hall, Quincy, last night at 10:45 when Officers Jones, a giantic Finlander, fully six and one half feet in height, entered the hall where the Finnish people were giving a dance.

Kyness was intoxicated and started to mix things up from the very moment of his entrance. Oscar Hjers, a Finnish constable, tried to put the big man out of the hall and was thrown out himself. Then Edward Jonsson, a Quincy police officer, tried to eject Kyness and fared the same as had Hjers.

By this time the hall was in an uproar, women were shrieking and men shouting out the windows for help.

In the melee Kyness stabbed August Laukanen in the right side inflicting a deep wound four inches in length. The giant struck men in their path and seemed to be proof against the [illegible] of flying [illegible]. A crowd pell mell before him, when Policeman Johnson returned, and, aided by six Finlanders, overpowered Kyness and carried him down the stairs to the patrol box. Here the men put up as other desperate fight, and it was [illegible] that seven men could do to land him in the wagon.

At the police station the Finlander struggled again desperately but six Finns and several policemen finally threw him into a cell. Medical Examiner F. E. Jones hastened to Finlish Hall and after examining Laukanen had him taken to the Quincy Hospital where it was said his wound was fatal.

HOSTS OF PRETTY GIRLS IN AMUSING ACTS

The "Society Circus," given by the Sewing Guild of Melrose Trinity Church, drew hundreds of people to the Melrose Auditorium, and proved a great success both artistically and financially.

With an attendance equaling the crush of the opening night, the "Society Circus," under management of the Sewing Guild of Melrose Trinity Church, gave its second and final performance last night in Melrose Auditorium.

The circus performers repeated their amusing "stunts," with a grace and dexterity increased from the practice of a previous production. The elephant, Jerry, and his wife, Lucy, the dancers, Mr. Punch, numerous tricks, some of which were introduced by Joseph Bridgeman and Miss Gertrude Hayes York.

Miss Irene Provandie, the lion tamer, showed marvelous control over her pets, while Artie Shepherd, cleverly represented by Charles Harrington, for the front part of the clever, and Paul Pace for the rear end, were Nazrett impersonated a bear that President Roosevelt would have been proud, not to say amazed, to shoot. Miss Ruth Greenleaf was the bear's keeper.

The dancing of the Mexican Indian girls was again a hit. The dancers included Misses Irene Provandie, Maybelle Cheney, Gladys Bridgeman and Ruth Cleaves Haven. Mrs. Herbert Provandie and Mrs. Hugh Knowlton.

Miss Mabel Patten also got in her solo dance in the character of "Bonny Wooden Shoes."

These and the other characters were under the direction of Russell Sturgis as ringmaster, who cracked his whip and kept things moving. The wife of Ringmaster Sturgis also took a part.

Miss S. S. Thomson, chairman of the executive committee of the circus, is Lady President of the Sewing Guild, and the success of the performance is due largely to her untiring efforts.

The circus was held in the circus hall. A Persian garden was the background for the performance, and the walls were hung with gay bunting. Flowers and palms were placed here and there, and the whole scene was brilliant. A merry audience and gay with music and laughter as the circus acts progressed.

Catarrh of The Stomach

A Most Dangerous Disease, Which Causes Serious Results, Unless Properly Treated.

Catarrh of the Stomach is very common and is known as one of the most obstinate diseases, which, when neglected or improperly treated with cheap patent medicines, tonics, drugs, pills, and other secret quack remedies results in a broken down constitution and often consumption and death.

Catarrh of the Stomach, like every other disease of the stomach, except cancer, is the result of poor digestion. The digestive organs have become weak, there is a lack of gastric juice, your food is only half digested, and as a result you become effected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, heartburn, vomiting, waterbrash, tenderness at pit of stomach, slimy tongue, bad taste in the mouth, constipation, pain in limbs and face, sleeplessness, nausea, belching of gas, diarrhoea, sick headaches, dizziness, mental depression, nervous weakness, and many other common symptoms.

If your stomach cannot digest the food you eat, then the stomach needs a rest, as that is the only way you can get rid of your catarrh, but in the meantime your body needs plenty of nourishment, because you must live and in order to live you must eat, and if you must eat, your food must be properly digested, and if your stomach is too weak to do the work, then you must get a substitute that will do the work.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the only known substitute that will digest your food as well as any healthy stomach. They contain essentials and fruit essences, aseptic pepsin (govt. test), golden seal and diastase, the very elements necessary to digest all foods.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not a secret remedy and for that very reason thousands of physicians all over the United States recommend them to their patients for catarrh of the stomach, dyspepsia of all kinds, and other stomach troubles. Experiments and tests have proven that one grain of the active principle contained in these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are in the form of pleasant tasting tablets or lozenges and are sold in large fifty-cent boxes at all drug stores.

Send us your name and address and we will send you a free sample package. The relief you will get from this trial package alone will convince you of the merits of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

PLAN FESTIVAL FOR CARNEY HOSPITAL

Final Preparations for Big Annual Charity Event to Be Made Today.

Final preparations for the great annual Fall Festival held in the interests of Carney Hospital, South Boston, are to be made at a meeting to be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in the main building of the institution.

The Festival is to be held in Mechanics Hall on November 13 to 16, 10:00 a. m. until 10.00 p. m. The Fall Festival, the proceeds of which are devoted to the support of Carney Hospital, is always one of Boston's great social and charitable events.

Preparations have been so far completed as to give a general idea of what the Festival will be like this year. There will be twenty-five tables representing the different parishes throughout Boston and so forth, under the direction of many of the assistant in the work of the different parishes represented.

At the meeting held last Sunday where 100 prominent men were present, Thomas H. Cromwell was chosen chairman of the general committee of arrangements.

The Carney Hospital, South Boston, is in charge of Mother Catherine Spencer, is the largest institution of its kind in Boston and is under the charge of the Sisters of Charity of the Immaculate Conception. It is conducted entirely on charity and is asked as to religious faith of ill need, and clergymen of all denominations are welcome to visit and administer to the needs of their flocks.

The hospital has no fixed funds from which it draws support, but depends for a part from the fees paid by those patients who are able to pay and the proceeds of festivals and Fall Festival is the largest of the institution.

Last year 2,674 patients were treated in wards of the Carney Hospital. 18,127 cases were treated in the out-patient department, or a total of 20,801 cases.

COL. WALKER'S DEATH CAUSED BY HORSEBACK TEST RIDE

Winthrop Physician Declares Roosevelt's Order Killed Commander of Boston Forts.

That the death of Colonel Leverett H. Walker, United States Army, commander of the artillery defenses of Boston, was caused by the famous fifteen mile horseback test ride ordered by President Roosevelt, in which Colonel Walker took part at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., was the opinion today of Dr. Ben H. Metcalf, of Winthrop, who was called in to attend the army officer last Tuesday night, but arrived too late to save Colonel Walker's life.

Colonel Walker had been complaining of trouble for some days, and when he saw Dr. Metcalf today, "The Medical Board knew this and have should have forbidden him to take the ride. It undoubtedly forced his death."

"When Colonel Walker returned from Vermont he took up his duties again. He was then in Washington. Upon receiving the news of intimation of the nature of the heart

Feared He Would Be Marked Man.

It is known that the reason Colonel Walker did not ask to be excused from the ride was the fear that he would become a marked man and retired. Twelve officers who did not show up well in the test have been ordered before the Retiring Board.

At Fort Banks, Winthrop, today, none of the officers would talk about the report that Colonel Walker's death was brought about by the exertion of the horseback ride.

Colonel Walker was a heavy man, weighing over 225 pounds. It was for the purpose of finding out whether men as heavy as this could ride a horse that President Roosevelt issued his famous horseback test order. Every officer in the army holding the rank of colonel or higher was forced to take the ride. For New England officers the ride was held at Fort Ethan Allen, near Burlington, Vt., on October 16.

Major General Frederick Dent Grant, commander of the Department of the East, came from Governor's Island, New York harbor, to lead the test. It was participated in by thirty-seven officers.

At Fort Ethan Allen.

The horses, in accordance with the President's order, were ridden five miles at a walk, five miles at a trot and five miles at a furious gallop. Many of the officers were tired out after the ride, but none of them complained of any severe effects.

The test was held at Fort Meyer, Virginia, and other forts in all parts of the United States, but Colonel Walker's death is the first tragedy directly attributed to the ride.

The record of death in the Town Hall at Winthrop shows heart failure as the cause of death. This coincides with Dr. Metcalf's statement. At the fort today the officer in charge showed the army death certificate which also pronounced heart failure as the cause of death. Mr. Metcalf declared positively that he had not the slightest evidence of poisoning.

Colonel Walker was fifty years old. He had worked his way up in the army after leaving West Point, and finally last January, on account of the appointment of Major General Wood to the command of the Philippines, he was appointed to the command of the coast defenses of Boston.

His body was sent to Washington Friday, after a military funeral through the streets of Boston, passing companies of regulars from the forts in the harbor as a guard of honor. Guard of honor escorted the body to the South station, where the body was sent to Washington. The body is buried there today at the National Cemetery, Arlington.

CHEERS FOR MORAN AT BRIGHTON RALLY

Intense enthusiasm, especially when the name of District Attorney John B. Moran was mentioned, characterized the rally held last night by the Independence League in Ward 25 at Red Men's Hall, in Washington street, Brighton. Five hundred voters, many of them employes of the Boston Elevated Railway system, crowded the hall to its capacity.

FUSION PICKED TO DEFEAT TAMMANY

Plurality of 30,000 is Predicted in Manhattan and the Bronx.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Nov. 2. That Tammany will be defeated at the polls next Tuesday is the confident belief both of the Independence League members and the Republicans who have united in a ticket for judiciary and county officers.

Herbert Parsons, chairman of the Republican county committee, said to-night that his reports led him to predict that the Fusion ticket will have a plurality of at least 30,000 in Manhattan and the Bronx. Late reports from the districts where the fight promises to be hottest, according to Mr. Parsons, show that fusion has made great gains and will have a decided advantage at the polls. He believes that some sensational results are in prospect, and declares that he will not be surprised if Tammany should lose some of its most important strongholds.

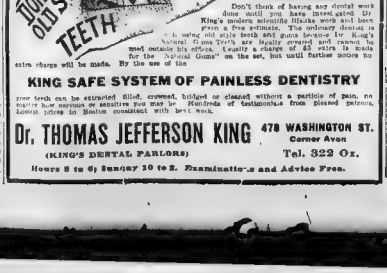
The campaign came to a close to-night with both Republicans and the Independence League holding meetings all over the city. In spite of the inclement weather literally thousands of thousands of voters turned out to the meetings held practically in every borough of the city. Every assembly district in New York county

The principal meeting of the League was held at Lenox avenue and 135th street, in the Academy of Music, where Hon. Herbert Parsons was the principal speaker. Hon. Charles S. Whitman, District Attorney of New York county, and the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1906, was also present and addressed the meeting.

N. E. O. P. TO TAKE IN NEARLY 2,000

By initiating between 1,200 and 2,000 candidates, the Massachusetts Grand Lodge of the New England Order of Protection will celebrate its twentieth anniversary in Mechanics Building, Huntington avenue, on Monday night. There will be a preliminary concert and addresses by Mayor Fitzgerald, Speaker Cole, Supreme Justice Albert F. Pendoody and Grand Warden Herbert M. Shute.

The organization has nearly 20,000 members in the vicinity of Boston, and intends a big increase this year up to July 1 in Massachusetts of 5,000—the whole New England to have England—4,000, and the entire membership is now above 50,000 in New England.



SURE HITCHCOCK IS IN MONTREAL

Dealer in Second-Hand Goods Says Actor Sold Him His Overcoat on Friday.

Montreal, Nov. 2.—J. B. Miller, dealer in second-hand goods, No. 447 St. James street, states that he is positive that Hayward Hitchcock, the missing actor, for whom the New York police are looking, was in his store a half past one o'clock yesterday afternoon.

"He came in and offered an overcoat for sale," said Mr. Miller. "As I was a very Newmarket of the finest quality. I have never seen finer. He asked $15 for it, but I told him that I could give him only $5, as overcoats were out easy to sell.

"I will give you $3 I said, and he replied all right, and took the money, remarking that he was hard up just at present. I would have plenty of money later. While I was talking to him, my wife had been out and immediately on the thought of the photograph of him which had been published. She called me aside and said: 'Isn't that the man whose picture was published in the paper?' She brought the picture, and I considered it with the man and I am positive it was he."

Gompers Says Labor Will Not Tolerate Wage Reductions

Federation Chief Declares the Present Situation Is Only "a Gamblers' Panic."

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2.—President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor hurled a thunderbolt in the form of warning that labor will not tolerate wage reductions, and that employes who may attempt them on account of the financial panic, which he terms "nothing more or less than a gamblers' panic," will do so at their peril.

He recommends that labor and civic organizations which have withdrawn money from the banks help defeat the gamblers' scheme" by investing in government bonds.

Of course, a result of the present emergency of the stringency in money circles that there is an inevitable amount of necessary to carry on the enormously increased production of the past year and the means for its orderly distribution, his statement says. Labor condition has been unsatisfactory for the so-called financiers. They have taken advantage of it, regardless upon whom from may fall.

At the same time it is urged upon all employers of labor not to attempt the folly of stopping or curtailing work of the present situation by wage reductions, in almost every instance the leaders have speedily resulted in making conditions worse and more acute, and in protracting them.

In any event, the working people of our country have resolved to resist and will resist, any attempt to reduce their wages. There is neither reason nor in wisdom in reducing wages as a remedy for the situation. Moreover, how will it tolerate it?

STRUCK BY CAR, IS BADLY HURT

James Forlee of No. 9 Loring street South Boston was struck by an outward bound Neponset Bridge car shortly before 11 o'clock this morning, at the corner of Wash and Dorchester avenue and taken to the City Hospital, where it was stated later he was suffering from concussion of the brain.

THUGS ASSAULT OFFICER GRANT

In a fight with a crowd of men who are believed to have been a mere of the Italian quarter, Patrolman Grant of the Dedham street station, was knocked down, kicked in the face, bruised and battered, and had his clothing torn from his uniform. Grant ordered the crowd to move on and when the men refused to go tried to arrest some of them. The rest of the gang set upon him.

TARS TO PRESENT LOVING CUP TO HELEN GOULD

North Atlantic Squadron Sailors Are Collecting Funds.

New York, Nov. 2.—The sailors of the North Atlantic squadron, which is to sail for the Pacific shortly, are to present Miss Helen Gould with an $8,000 loving cup, contributing twenty-five cents apiece for the loving cup fund. The cup, which is at Bamburgh's design, is being made by Tiffany. The presentation will take place at Arrochar, Staten Island, on November 23 or December 2. The date is left unsettled for the present, depending on the arrival of President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Metcalf. Admiral Evans and General Scott will also be present.

NEW HOME SITES AT DEMAND OF TOILERS

Expansive Tracts Now Being Opened Up In Greater Boston District.

HOME-SEEKERS' INVEST

Developing land on a [illegible] sale is now being pushed between the [illegible] of Lynn and Salem.

The land is known as Pickman Park, comprising 325 acres, and formerly made up the estate of the late George R. Loring, at one time president of the Massachusetts Senate. It is a splendid spot for a move and lots there have already been sold to the amount of $500,000.

Much care has been shown in making this park an attractive inducement to every seeker after a new locality for a home. The growth of Lynn and Salem is destined to go in the direction of this park.

Three miles of street are now completed and seven miles have been contracted for. Jefferson avenue as well as Loring avenue are top-lay developing into popular thoroughfares, and many dwellings have been erected. These houses are very picturesque and make ideal homes around the suburbs.

There is plenty of sentiment in their make-up, as each section must be the best. There is the Peabody lot, for each house have been attached through separate covenant, until a solid certain sum or more every month and at last realize, that they are becoming owners of their own building lots.

The easy payment of twenty-five dollars and five dollars a month have made it possible for very many married couples to realize the ownership of a lot, and the pleasure of building a home for investment and improvements.

As great has been the demand for lots that the projectors in developing the property have formed a plan whereby houses is now completed and is called Pickman Park. Around this buildings are going up rapidly and a large block is under way for the erection of flats that could be bought and rented at reasonable rates for the benefit of those employed in the vicinity. Even a Malden Electrical car has the branch line to the park, and lots more will follow in the near future. The entire section also passes through the park, and there are many avenues from every angle of approach to other points.

Offers Commanding View.

The land is high, commanding a sightly view of the two adjoining cities. WILLS BENEFACTOR $12,000 FORTUNE

Sioux City Man Was Kind to Her Years Ago and She Remembers Him.

Sioux City, Nov. 2.—For doing a kindly deed and befriending a young woman years ago Frank Searey, of the Couvery & Searey Land company, has come into a fortune of $12,000, left him by Miss L. McMillan, who died in Idaho recently.

The news came as a surprise to Mr. Searey and was in the nature of a letter from F. Hunn, a lawyer of Chicago, requesting his presence there at once to take over the property left him in the will. Accompanied by his mother and sister Mr. Searey has departed for the east.

Years ago, when Mr. Searey was trying to get a foothold in the world, he was in charge of an elevator at Wall Lake, Iowa. There he first met Miss McMillan, who had come to the town to secure employment in the local bank. He aided her in her work and in various ways proved his sincerity in helping her win success.

Both finally left the little town, she to go West and he to come shortly afterward to Sioux City. In the far western state of Idaho the young woman amassed a fortune and invested her money in the wild mines in that country. It is not known how large her fortune is.

'PENNSY' DIVIDEND BLOW TO MARKET

Announcement Bound to Have Bad Effect on Stocks—Industrial Crisis Threatened.

SITUATION IN COPPERS

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

New York, Nov. 2.—Declaration of the regular dividend by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company was a very severe blow to the stock market—a blow calculated to make the list stagger for some time. It is true that the Pennsylvania has earned the money, but in times like these, when speculation is an imperative necessity, no person or corporation is justified in spending the last dollar. The people of the Pennsylvania directorate was entirely unaware because the company is in actual need of funds with which to [illegible] this terminal is a great monument to the New York [illegible] president A. J. Cassatt, never pay any dividends and neither do the Pennsylvania.

The most profitable way for a railroad to end is to stop when it [illegible] it is going. Of course, [illegible] are a thing that grows [illegible] the demand, but from a [illegible] point they are a mistake. [illegible] Pennsylvania has fully $200,000,000 invested which will not pay one cent [illegible] at the very earliest. A [illegible] New Jersey suburban real [illegible] no material advantage [illegible] New York terminal and, like [illegible] help the company.

This I nevertheless think is along the line of many other things [illegible] done now in the [illegible] dence. Deliberate [illegible] ing and conserving [illegible] ers are being justified on the ground that the truth will [illegible] sooner or later.

This is a false position to [illegible] because there are enough people [illegible] edge of the truth to lift the stock market as it can be lifted. The only [illegible] ing and conserving statements will be to cause a further impairment of confidence [illegible] the public finds out that it is [illegible] ately must.

No Parallel to Present.

Attempts are being made to draw parallels with periods of depression in the past, but this is impossible because the present is no parallel to any [illegible] commercially, [illegible] the world has been [illegible] been put into circulation in the past few years as was [illegible] the recuperative processes. No particular man or set of men can be held responsible for conditions in justice, although [illegible] has gone on in high places just as it always will go on.

The trouble is fundamental and the world will [illegible] The public recognizes the true reason and [illegible] its course accordingly will be the first to [illegible] The bound which is certain to come. A panic is simply a proof of [illegible] It has never disturbed with them, and Japan is [illegible] to-day in a way [illegible] The reason of the [illegible] is the fact that [illegible] and certain other [illegible] detrimental to the situation for at this time [illegible] all [illegible] [illegible] public is sweet and fair play.

[illegible] is being [illegible] but [illegible] to the extent of being [illegible] The [illegible] less of [illegible] [illegible] are in the discretionary [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] incorporated under [illegible] [illegible] companies will remain to be dealt with. The crisis has been created, or [illegible] reign of the trust in the stock market [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of values the runs from the banks [illegible] [illegible] have been given [illegible] [illegible] ment that I street has seen in many months.

Financiers Are Sing Hymns.

In this connection it must be stated that, while the prominent financiers are advising the public to buy stocks at these prices, they themselves are not buying and are warning their intimate personal friends not to purchase. The fact is that these gentlemen are mistaken and that they are giving the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

NEWS OF MEN AND EVENTS IN ORGANIZED LABOR WORLD

Federation of State, City and Town Employes' Union Holds Convention Today.

The quarterly convention of the Federation of State, City and Town Employes of Massachusetts is held today in Malden. It will convene at 10 a. m. in Hibernian Hall, Charles street, with delegates in attend ance representing at least twenty unions.

Conroe and Howard E. Hoagard, president of the Union C. L. U. and of the Malden City Municipal Employes' Union, will welcome the delegates. Mayor McCarthy will deliver an address of an open meeting during the afternoon session.

Membership on Increase.

Great strides have been made in the membership of this organization since its last convention in Worcester, and the affiliated unions are a great deal stronger numerically as a result of the co-operation in the federation.

President Michael H. Collins of Cambridge has been working hard for a number of years to bring this body together, and expects to receive a national charter from the American Federation of Labor. The federation at present includes Lynn, Haverhill, Springfield, Lawrence and Holyoke is understood.

Two labor principles are proposed by the federation now being circulated for signatures. They are to the effect that eight hours for all State, city and town employes, and the right to organize, are the principles for which they stand.

In the State ... will also take up the matter of pensions, and will inform employees as to just what they will get for their ... while in the service.

A letter issued to the unions says the following on legislative matters:

To Fight the Enemies.

"Legislation favorable to our entire membership will be sought from the legislature of 1908. ... It will be the duty of our ... to inform brothers and the entire membership of the final hour ... wish to bring certain legislation ... every member ... in this way.

"Also I ... from every city and town ... employes, asking a general wage ... of $2.25 a day for all laborers employed with a Saturday half holiday throughout the year, besides various other matters pertaining to the welfare of our members in general.

"We ask now your undivided interest in helping us in these cities and towns, so ... may, during the coming year, ... new, more ... and in ... make our ... ties ... stronger, and in ... when we have the State ... behind us, ... in both ... the way ... laws that will ... of the ... and State ... against ... and ... ."

Who Has Rooms to Let?

I can let them for you. You wonder how I can do it, when you have had cards in your windows and have been trying to let them for weeks. Why, it is a simple matter. I go to more than 300,000 people each day in the year, to talk to Merchants, Mechanics, Financiers, Stenographers, Clerks, Bookkeepers, Travelers and in all classes by the thousands. I tell them where their Wants can be supplied. They come to me when looking for anything, because they know they will find it. When they want to secure rooms they look for me in the Board and Rooms Column. I am always there to give them what they want.

TRY "OLD 56"! IT'S FINE!

Nowhere in the United States can you buy a better Whiskey for $3.00 a gallon than "Old 56." There may be some as good, but if so, we do not know where they are. "Old 56" is an absolutely pure, straight whiskey, sufficiently aged in Old Sherry Wine casks to give it smoothness and fine flavor.

ARMED POSSE SEEKS ESCAPED CONVICTS

Residents of Claremont, N. H., and of Surrounding Villages Terror Stricken.

LARGE REWARD OFFERED

Claremont, N. H., Nov. 2.—This town and the surrounding villages, including Cornish, where there are still many wealthy part season residents, who have not gone back to their city homes, are terror stricken over the escape of two men from the State prison at Windsor, Vt., who are supposed to be hiding in the woods near here.

Armed guards of citizens have been posted along the most frequently travelled roads with instruction to hold up any suspicious persons. While the men were prison clothing when the escaped, at least one burglary has been committed since then and, it is thought, the two have secured other clothing.

A reward of $100 for their capture has been made by Superintendent Lovell of the prison. Postals bearing a description of the two have been sent broadcast.

One of the men, Oliver Germain, is of such calibre that the prison officials do not hesitate to say that they believe he will put up a hard fight before he is captured. His companion, George Armour, who was serving time for burglary, is also known as a nervy fellow.

Superintendent Lovell of the prison found that he could not spare men enough to patrol properly the section where the men were believed to be hiding, so the citizens organized a posse of their own and took the trail. Among those who are engaged in the hunt are Chief of Police J. H. Obert of this town, Chief James Handley of Unity, Abram McVey, a well known hunter; Rollo Cleveland, John Burns and Edward Warren. These men, with a number of others, armed themselves with shotguns and rifles and, with plenty of ammunition, went in search of the escaped convicts.

Try to Hold Up Man.

Because of the desperate character of the two men the homes in and about Windsor are being closely guarded. Women are afraid to be left alone in their houses at night. If the men are not recaptured by to-morrow, a posse will probably be organized to beat through the woods.

One citizen reported to the authorities that, while driving along the main highway of this town last night, two men, whom he could not see plainly in the darkness, tried to hold him up. The man whipped up his horse and got away without caring to make a very close investigation.

The Metropolitan Shoe store was broken into, and two pairs of stout shoes taken. Nothing else was disturbed.

Few escapes have occurred from Windsor which excited the officials so much as this one. It being remarkable for its perseverance and nerve of the men. Armour and Germain, because of the crowded quarters, owing to the rebuilding of the west wing, were quartered in one cell in the east wing.

All Trace Is Lost.

They evidently had planned for the escape when the question of rebuilding the wing was first made known in the prison. Employed in the casting room, they found opportunity to take away each day small pieces of twine. These they put together and braided until they had a rope that was probably about seventy feet long. This they undoubtedly kept in two sections coiled about their bodies and ready when the auspicious night should arrive.

The time came on Thursday. Superintendent Lovell, asleep in his house that is within the prison grounds, heard a noise about four o'clock in the morning, but thought nothing of it. The night watchman neither saw nor heard anything. But at daylight a hole was found in the roof of the east wing where boards and slates had been pushed out of place.

From the moment they left the prison all trace of the men was lost, save where suspicious characters were seen on the highway near Cornish, and the apparent effort made to secure clothing and shoes by breaking into stores.

Wants to Get Bloodhounds.

Superintendent Lovell said of the escape:

"There are no guards on the walls during the night. Those men were put in our cell, as we were short of room and the west wing has all been torn down, that is the cells, and forty feet has been added to its length.

"It is the most daring escape ever made from this prison, and it must have taken them considerable time in thinking out the route, and, when they reached the eaves of the building, the sixty feet below them took strong nerves to make the descent, for the rope was very crude and in some places very slender.

"I want to buy two blood hounds and I have had several letters on the matter but I cannot find anyone who has them for sale. If I had them to-day, those men could not have got far before we would have been on their trail.

"We have done all that we can in the matter; I have telephoned to all the people in this vicinity and notified the police along the road line and have just mailed postal cards offering $100 reward for their capture, and I guess that the postals and other notices will get them."

MAN-HUNT FOR TWO DARING CRIMINALS

Claremont, N. H., residents arm themselves to capture the men who escaped from prison and who now terrorize the surrounding country.

Special to the Sunday American.

Fitchburg, Nov. 2.—Awakened early today by the smell of coal gas at his home on Plymouth street, Joseph Charron found his wife and ten children overcome by the fumes. He roused those whom he could, then secured a doctor. Some of the family were in serious condition, but by to-night all were out of danger except three-year-old Mary Charron, the youngest child. It is feared she will die.

It was found that when the father fired the coal stove the night before, he left the damper closed, allowing the deadly coal gas to escape into the rooms. It is thought that only the strongest vitality of the Father, enabling him to vent the fumes, saved the entire family from asphyxiation.

FREIGHT SHEDS BURN.

CAMPBELLTON, N. B., Nov. 2.—Fire to-day destroyed the freight sheds of the Intercolonial railway here, with their contents. The loss is estimated at $30,000.

Madame Fremstad In Death Peril as Big Wave Hit Ocean Liner

Clings to Bridge Stairs to Save Life as Steamship Keeled in Monster Sea.

New York, Nov. 2.—Madame Olive Fremstad, the opera singer, who returned to America to-day on the steamship Provence, miraculously escaped being washed into the sea Tuesday night, when a huge wave struck the ship, carrying away twenty feet of the forward rail, denting in the officers' quarters and doing other damage.

Madame Fremstad had just finished her dinner and went to the main deck for a walk. Peering over the starboard side she saw the wave coming, but thought it would spend its strength before it reached the vessel. An instant later it bore violently down on the starboard side, where it struck the officers' quarters. Chairs and other light materials were sent into the sea and the port light on the bridge was smashed. A seam in the structure was rent and although First Officer George Probest and four of the watch were atop no one was injured.

Madame Fremstad barely escaped being struck and probably would have been thrown to the deck had she not taken hold of the bridge stairs when the vessel keeled.

GUARANTEE TIME OF "RED MILL" SPECIAL

A telegram received by Isaac B. Rich from Charles Dillingham, manager of Montgomery and Stone in "The Red Mill," says that the officials of the Vanderbilt railroad system have guaranteed to bring this big organization to Boston tomorrow morning on time.

"The company played in Chicago last night immediately after the performance the scenery, properties and other equipment were loaded on the cars, and the special train, consisting of three baggage cars, three standard sleepers, a day coach and an observation and dining car, was scheduled to pull out of the La Salle street station, Chicago, at 2:30 this morning."

The mill used in the first act, which is thirty-eight feet high, and is a practical working windmill, requires for its erection the services of a corps of mechanics and cannot be put up in less than seven or eight hours.

BILLINGS PROTESTS M'CARTHY'S RULING

There is a conflict in authority between Surveyor of the Port J. J. McCarthy and Commissioner of Immigration George H. Billings over the manner of landing immigrants from the different transatlantic steamers coming to this port.

Surveyor McCarthy has ordered the steamship companies not to allow the relatives of the immigrants to block the piers of the steamship lines until the first and second cabin passengers have left the vessels and the piers.

As a consequence, when the White Star liner, Cymric, came to her dock yesterday and Commissioner Billings protested that his work was being interfered with under the new order and the friends of immigrants were allowed on the pier to meet them.

O. E. CHAFFEE DEAD AT 89.

Windsor Locks, Ct., Nov. 2.—Charles E. Chaffee, aged eighty-nine, president and treasurer of a big underwear factory here for many years, died at his home to-day. He was director in many local business enterprises and a few years ago donated a $9,000 hall to the local G. A. R. post.

PAY PENSIONS PROMPTLY.

Washington, Nov. 2.—All pension vouchers which will fall due next Monday, are to be paid, notwithstanding the tight money. Commissioner of Pensions Warner announced to-day that he had arranged for their prompt payment.

More Facts About Sheriff Seavey's Administration

Mr. Donovan says the county income in 1902-3 was $171,444. In 1906-7 it was $161,817, a decrease of $10,000 a year. Of course, Mr. Donovan, if you know anything about county affairs you know that this income represents money mainly from fines and costs. County income means revenue from the unfortunate. It is money of tears and shame. How do you propose to increase it? Is it by more arrests by the police, or do you favor the imposition of heavier fines by the justices on unfortunates caught in the meshes of the law?

Now let me thank you, Mr. Donovan, for giving me the opportunity to explain the expenses of my office.

In the year 1902-3 the county expenses were $1,041,750; in the year 1906-7 the county expenses were $1,395,900—an increase of over $350,000.

But of this expenditure, Mr. Donovan, I have only control of the expenses of the court house and jail, and the expenses for those institutions in 1902-3 were $110,322; in 1906, $118,098. Let me call to your mind that while the expenses of the county as a whole showed an increase of 40 per cent,

My expenses showed an increase of only 6%

The major portion of this 6 per cent is represented by an increased daily average of prisoners of 47 over 1902; the expenses of four additional matrons for a separate prison for women; a jail physician, whose salary of $1,000 was charged to the jail account for the first time in 1906, and a Catholic and Protestant chaplain, each drawing a salary of $600, and also added in 1906.

Now, Mr. Donovan, that you have afforded me this opportunity to tell you of the increase of $7,776 in my expenses, will You ask the other county officials for an explanation of what has been done with the $344,000 increase in their expenses?

Let me ask you, Mr. Donovan, how does my administration as Sheriff compare with your administration as Superintendent of Streets?
